John M. Bagby, a prominent and popular citizen of near Bracht, died very suddenly at his home last Thursday afternoon, at about 2 o'clock. Mr. Bagby had just gotten his mail and opened the daily paper and had read about the death of his nephew, Leonard Bagby at Erlanger, when his wife, who was in the room, heard him breathing very hard, and looking in his direction discovered that he was dying, sitting in a rocking chair. Mrs. Bagby gave the alarm but Mr. Bagby was beyond all earthly aid. His death was supposed to have been caused by the sudden shock of the news of the death of his nephew. He was a very large man and it is believed the excitement produced paralysis of the heart. Mr. Bagby was born within three miles of the place where he died, and was sixty-four years old, and his long and useful life was spent in this quarter where he was universally respected and esteemed for his many good qualities. His wife survives him, but he leaves no children. He was a cousin of Dr. T. M. Bagby of this place. The funeral took place Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, from his late home, Rev. Edgar Riley of the Christian church of which the deceased was a devoted member, conducting the services.

FOR SALE!

The Northcutt Mercantile Co.,

WALTON, KY.

Having decided to retire from business at this place, we now offer our entire stock of goods for sale as a whole. We have one of the best locations in Boone County, and a splendid opportunity for a wide-awake party to make money, as our business has been successful.

Address all communications to

E. P. Northcutt, - Walton, Ky.

And if they're not genuine, you don't want them, because they won't last as long as Cortright and therefore will not prove as good an investment.

Cortright Metal Shingles

last as long as the building itself and never need repairs. Then they're fire-proof and storm-proof, making them just the ideal roof for all kinds of city, suburban or country buildings.

RILEY & GAAR, Bullittsville, Ky.

Big Bargains in Paints.

Having bought at bankrupt sale a full assortment of the finest paints made, we are making the greatest offer ever presented to the public in this quarter. These paints have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and we have been handling them with the most gratifying results for fifteen years, selling the paints at $1.40 to $1.50 per gallon, and they would cost us nearly that if purchased from the wholesaler today. We want the public to have the benefit of our bargain and will offer the paints at $1.00 per gallon. We have a full assortment of colors, and have now the largest stock kept by a country paint store. Come in and see the stock if you are going to paint; it will pay you as you will get the best at less than cost. We keep everything in the paint line. Trusting to have your patronage, we are respectfully yours, has become essentially necessary in every sphere of business from the private individual to the capitalist. Every good farmer as a rule keeps an account with a bank, and it saves him many dollars, and gives him a better business standing with the public at large. No danger of money being destroyed by fire or lost by robbery when it is in a good bank. Your check given for an account is a positive receip, and a record of it is kept by the bank. The Equitable Bank and Trust Company, at Walton, Boone County, Ky., makes a study of all the public wants in the banking line, and transacts much of its business by mail. It pays interest on time deposits, and takes care of any sized account from a dollar up. Write us if you have anything in our line and we will interest you more than you can imagine.

RICHWOOD.

D. B. Dobbins has been on the sick list.

Chas. Wolfe's new house is ready for the plasterers.

Cary Carpenter will put in about 8 acres of tobacco this year.

Lon Aydelotte will resign at the tollgate and move to Will Carpenter's.

John Ransaler and family will move into the house occupied by A. Thomas.

Andrew Thomas has rented a house in Erlanger and will move this week.

The Richwood volunteer fire department did good service at the Ransaler fire.

Dr. Zienkie, of Cincinnati, and Dr. Senior, held a consultation over Mrs. M. Grubbs, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cummings and son of Covington, were guests of Wm. Dobbins Saturday and Sunday.

Theo. Carpenter and family and Mrs. Amanda Carpenter were guests of Will Woodward, of Devon, Sunday.

Fire got the advantage of J. W. Carpenter, while burning a plant bed, and it took a hard fight to get it under control.

A new farmers' line with 16 boxes is now in running order, J. T. Powers, Will Smith, J. Dobbins and J. Conner are on this end of the line.

Three very pert youths passed through our town, Sunday, very much the worse for liquor, driving two horses unmercifully, one being completely exhausted and the driver whipping the horse every step.

O. O. Dixon, professional nurse, has returned home from nursing E. H. Blankenbeker, of Florence, and from Erlanger, where he was with Mr. Buffner, who died from blood poison.

CONSTANCE.

Mr. Gibbs, of Ludlow, is a guest at C. W. Robinson's.

All the vacant houses in Constance have been rented.

Miss Hazel Garnett was visiting Miss Sophia Murat, Saturday.

C. W. Robinson's sale was well attended and good prices prevailed.

T. L. McGlasson's daughter, Elizabeth, has been very ill of pneumonia.

Walter Garnett has purchased the new residence built by John Wentz.

Master Henry Gerding, of Anderson Ferry, is living with Dr. Murat.

The Constance Building and Loan Association has declared its usual 8 per cent dividend.

On April 1st C. W. Robinson's store changed hands, Charles Craven, the new owner taking possession.

Wm. Tanner is gathering logs for Crain & Co., and expects to go as far as Louisville, in search of them.

Taylor Fox, of Anderson Ferry, formerly a resident of Constance, died of cancer of the stomach a few days since, and the remains were brought here for interment.

In the death of Mrs. F. F. Hood, which occurred several days ago our town lost one of its most estimable ladies, and her husband and children have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

BUFFALO.

The crowd commenced coming in early Monday to be present at the horse show and speaking.

The Rising Sun Local advises its lady readers to save their old waste baskets, for with little trimming they will do for new spring bonnets.

The Entertainment.

Those who attended the entertainment last Saturday night were well pleased, and pronounced it the best they ever saw given by a country troupe. It was a whirlwind of fun from start to finish. My Turn Next and Tim Dulnaw were enjoyed by the audience, but when Ebony Flats and Black Sharps were put on the fun began, and the house was in an uproar. The jokes were new and humorous, every one provoking a storm of laughter. The music for the evening was furnished by the Zellars band.

A gentleman came into this office, a few days ago, and said he saw quite a number of mistakes in the last issue, when he was handed a piece of copy and shown the case out of which to set, and here is what he turned in:

Greek Letter Societies.

There is an old debate as to whether on the whole colleges and universities of the United States would be better or worse without the Greek letter societies; but participants on both sides of this debate would no doubt agree that as to one of the oldest of these societies—Phi Beta Kappa—there is no ground for controversy. Admission to Phi Beta Kappa is dependent on scholarship. Only students with the highest markings are eligible for membership, and the influence of the organization is unquestionably good. It is interesting to note that among the thirty or so of the students of Cornell university who have been fortunate enough to get the Phi Beta Kappa key this year is a Chinaman, Tunfu Hu, a junior in the College of Arts and Science. He has been at Cornell for two years. He has a sister at Vassar. His average in all the studies he has taken for the whole period in which he has been at Cornell is 85. That would be a high average for anyone, irrespective of color. It speaks well for him and it also speaks well for the race to which he belongs, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. Cornell has honored itself by honoring him.

Modernize Federal Clerks' Room.

Those who have investigated the efficiency of clerks in government buildings believe that from 15 to 20 per cent. better results could be accomplished if the clerks were housed in modern buildings, similar to those provided by great corporations. The government building, planned with reference almost wholly to the exterior, contains great waste spaces; large rooms with high ceilings, generally with inadequate light and ventilation; pretentious entrances, and flights of steps which must be wearily climbed. Comfort and sanitation are sacrificed, declares the Washington Star, in order to preserve the classical outlines laid down by architects hundreds or even thousands of years ago. Contrast with this the modern up-to-date building of a great railroad system, with entrance on a level with the street; swift elevators; office-rooms of a convenient size communicating with each other; plenty of light, as the building consists mainly of steel and plate glass; good ventilation, and sanitary conveniences.

The latest development in wireless telegraphy is the application of the system to railroad train operation. The wireless method has been tried on the Lake Shore line, and the managers declare that the test, so far as it has gone, was eminently successful. They are highly enthusiastic and assert belief that by the use of the system accidents may be eliminated as far as it is in human power to accomplish such a result. The managers may be oversanguine, but additional experiments in this direction certainly will be awaited with interest. Wireless telegraphy has proved a life-saver at sea. If equally successful on shore there will be great gain to humanity.

"I wish," said the serious woman who has been struggling over trimmings for a directoire evening gown, "that the law would make shopkeepers call things by their right names. A pure clothes law is what we need. When we buy gloves, they should be labeled pigskin, if they are made of that material. Then there is that old lie about swan's down. Why don't they call is geese down? That is what it usually is. As for velvet, it is maintained by foreigners that the pure silk article is obsolete. It would cost so much now no one would buy it."

For years the United States government has been freeing the farmers from the restraints of trade, and doing everything in its power to give them open markets at home and abroad for their productions. It is the solidity, the safety, the soundness of the prosperity of our cultivators of the soil which is the rock foundation, the very corner-stone of our nation to-day.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

It has been a severe season for society, and whoever owns a country house of any description is fleeing thither to tone up on the simple life. Next best to the country house comes the invitation to join a railway trip through Mexico or to Seattle, the main object being "to get away." People who succeed in doing it and at the same time getting away from themselves might tell the secret and, for the nonce, become philanthropists.

Manila has a new and bountiful supply of water, brought from a distance of 20 miles. The improvement was secured at surprisingly small cost, which is not expected to exceed $3,000,000, while the result in the way of health and convenience is of incalculable value. That is one of the many things American rule has done to better conditions in the Philippines.

Lying is a monumental vice, says a Pittsburg preacher. But where's the comparison to Ananias?

PLAN BIG WAGE CUT

STEEL TRUST'S COMPANIES TO SLASH PAY 15 PER CENT.

GOES INTO EFFECT MAY 1

Reduction Means a Saving of $25,000,000 and Gives the Combine Advantage Over Independents Whose Cuts Are Ten Per cent.

New York.—The various subsidiary companies of the United States Steel corporation, it is announced on the best authority, will slash 15 per cent. off the wages of their employes on May 1. The trust itself will not announce the cut, but it will be left to the subsidiary concerns to make the announcements on April 15.

The subsidiary companies of the steel corporation have been holding back their announcement of wage cuts with the purpose of letting all the independent companies do their cutting first. This has not only the advantage of letting the independents accumulate the brunt of the odium for wage reduction and insures that there will not be an exodus of skilled trust workmen into the independent mills, but also serves a steel market coup of far greater importance than either of these considerations.

Inasmuch as the independents have cut their wage scales uniformly at the rate of ten per cent., the steel trust will be in position, if it announces a cut of 15 per cent. on May 1, to rearrange its price schedules so sweepingly that it will capture the entire steel market for months to come and insure an enormously swollen business for the coming year.

The United States Steel corporation paid out $160,000,000 in 1907. On that basis a cut of 15 per cent. means that the company will save $25,000,000 on labor alone.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The arrival here Friday of a carload of non-union engineers, oilers and firemen is looked upon as the beginning of the fight between the Lake Carriers' association and the various unions on the great lakes.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—The first trouble in the anthracite region since the expiration of the three-year agreement has developed at the Keystone colliery of the Traders' Coal Company at the Ridgewood mine, about four miles from here. The miners had a dispute over yardage and the shifting of rock and as a result refrained from working Friday.

NOT GUILTY, SAYS KIDNAPER.

Mrs. Boyle Arraigned and Held in Default of $25,000 Bond at Mercer, Pa.

Mercer, Pa. — Mrs. Helen Boyle, wife of James H. Boyle, kidnaper of Willie Whitla, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Thomas McClain, at this place Wednesday, charged with kidnaping.

She entered a plea of "not guilty," and was held for the action of the grand jury in the sum of $25,000 bail. Her husband waived a hearing at Sharon, Monday and is held in the jail here on a similar bond.

The mystery surrounding the stranger who visited Mrs. Boyle in jail last Monday was cleared last night when W. J. McDermott of Chicago told friends here that he called at the jail in the absence of Sheriff Chess and identified the prisoner as his sister, Anna McDermott, who eloped from Chicago with Boyle three years' ago.

KILLS MINER IN RIOT.

Constable Slays One and Wounds Another When Attempt Is Made to Rescue Prisoner.

Pittsburg, Pa.—One man was killed and another probably fatally injured in a riot between a crowd of miners formerly employed at the Harwick mines of the Allegheny Coal Company at Cheswick, Pa., near here, and two deputy constables at that place.

The dead man is Mike Strenyard, aged 20 years. Norwalk Bulterge, aged 24 years, has two bullets in his back.

The trouble started when the crowd of miners attempted to rescue a comrade who had been arrested by Deputy Constables Holland and Blair. Holland, who did the shooting, is under a $2,000 bond.

Zeppelin Returns in Airship.

Fredrichshafen. — Wearing a smile which fully expressed the victory of his wonderful airship over wind, snow and other adverse weather conditions, Count Zeppelin returned in his aerial craft Friday night after having been on a voyage which consumed two days' time. He landed safely on Lake Constance and the airship was snugly tucked away in its shed none the worse for its wild experiences.

Hard Blow for Wives.

St. Louis. — A wife, according to a ruling by Circuit Judge Grimm, has no right to search her husband's pockets for money. This was decided in the case of James J. Dooley, whose petition for divorce from Lillian G. Dooley was answered with a cross bill.

Quarantine Rio Grande Ports.

El Paso, Tex.—Federal quarantine against ports in Mexico threatened with yellow fever infection was made effective Thursday at all ports along the Rio Grande.

HARRIMAN WILL NOT RETIRE.

Too Far to Drop, and Not Time Enough to Climb Down.

PRIEST OWES $1,594,141.64

FATHER M'MAHON OF CLEVELAND FILES BANKRUPTCY PETITION.

Clergyman and Editor of the Catholic Universe Caught by Failure of the Funding Company.

Cleveland, O.—Scheduling total liabilities of $1,594,141.64 and assets of $75,207.08, of which $71,300 is real estate, Rev. William McMahon, pastor of St. Bridget's Catholic church in this city and editor of the Catholic Universe, filed a petition in the United States district court Wednesday.

The secured claims amount to $946,925.73; unsecured claims, $371,207.91, and commercial paper, $185,918.

Father McMahon was a director of the Fidelity Funding Company of New York, founded by P. J. Kieran and which now is in the hands of receivers. Thus it came about that his name was signed to many of the papers issued by the company and for which he now is held liable by the receivers.

The petition enumerates many notes signed by Father McMahon. They are held mostly by New York, Pittsburg and Cleveland banks. Among the larger secured claims cited are the following: Carnegie Trust Company, New York, $281,256.73; Guarantee Title & Trust Company, Pittsburg, $185,000; Society for Savings, Cleveland, $235,000; Third National bank of Buffalo, $3,200.

Included in the secured claims as filed by the petitioner are liabilities held by almost every banking institution of prominence in the city of Cleveland and similar institutions in Boston, New York, Pittsburg, Syracuse and Buffalo.

The filing of the petition by Attorney J. W. Sutphen was not entirely a surprise either in financial circles here or to the parishioners of St. Bridget's who had known for some time past that the financial affairs of Father McMahon were in a badly entangled state owing to his connection with the Kieran enterprises.

It was announced authoritatively from a priest closely identified with the affairs of the Cleveland diocese that the liability set forth in the petition in voluntary bankruptcy made by Father McMahon is personal and that the Catholic church property is not involved in a way that the church can lose.

WANTED—A THIN MAN.

Uncle Sam Has use for Human Skeleton in Testing Refrigerator Car System.

Chicago.—A thin man—thin enough to fit into a narrow crack—is wanted by the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture. Besides his thinness he must have knowledge of refrigerating machinery and be able to keep both thin and warm in a frosty atmosphere.

A salary of $900 to $1,200 will be paid this intelligent skeleton if the government finds it. He will be sent out with a special refrigerating car to all parts of the country to test a system of cooling fruits. He must be thin in order to get into all corners of the car to run the machinery.

Finish Waterway Report.

Washington.—Another big step in the plan for a deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf was taken Friday when the engineers' board in charge of the survey completed its report on the portion between St. Louis and New Orleans.

One Dead in Illinois Wreck.

Murphysboro, Ill.—An Illinois Central passenger train was wrecked at Carbondale Friday and Fireman John Hamilton was killed, and the engineer, baggageman and expressman injured.

U. S. SOLDIERS LEAVE CUBA.

Stars and Stripes Taken Down and Home Government Now Is in Full Control.

Havana.—The last emblem of American domination over Cuba disappeared Thursday when two battalions of the Twenty-seventh infantry, and engineers sailed for home.

The ceremony attending the transfer of authority took place in the presence of the American garrison of Camp Columbia, consisting of two battalions of the Twenty-seventh infantry, three companies of engineers, and one battalion of Cuban infantry, forming three sides of a hollow square.

At the direction of Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, commanding, Lieut. Byard Sneed of the Twenty-seventh infantry, advanced to the flagstaff and hauled down the colors.

The troops presented arms and the Cuban and American bands played "The Star-Spangled Banner." A Cuban lieutenant then raised the Cuban colors. The troops again saluted and the bands play the "Hymno de Bayamo."

The transfer of the camp being thus completed, the Cuban troops lined the roadside and presented arms, while the Americans, numbering about 800, in heavy marching order, swung past. They halted outside the camp limits where a long line of trolley cars was in waiting to convey them to the transports Sumner and McClellan lying at the arsenal docks.

READY TO GREET ROOSEVELT.

Even the Lions and Elephants Are Getting Restless in British East Africa.

Mombasa, British East Africa.—The preparation for the reception here of Theodore Roosevelt are nearing completion. Frederick John Jackson, lieutenant governor of the protectorate, a famous sportsman and the author of the book on big game in the Badminton library series, will receive the former president.

Since the advent of the rains lions have been terrifying the natives within four miles of Kilindini. An elephant that evidently had strayed from a herd made its way into the bazaar at Masingi and played havoc. The natives at Masingi have been assured that they need have no further fear, as Mr. Roosevelt is on his way to the protectorate to hunt. They are awaiting Mr. Roosevelt's arrival contentedly.

LAMPHERE NEAR DEATH.

Gunness Farm Hand in the Throes of Consumption Is Report Received at Laporte.

Laporte, Ind.—Ray Lamphere, convicted of having set fire to the home of Belle Gunness on April 26, 1908, in which fire the Gunness woman and her three children were burned to death, is in the throes of consumption. Slight hopes for his recovery are entertained.

Attorney Worden received word from Warden Reid of the Michigan City penitentiary that Lamphere had recently lost seven pounds of flesh. He is on the wane. Efforts will be made by his friends to secure a parole.

Scarlet Fever on Warship.

Washington.—An epidemic of scarlet fever has broken out among the crew of the battleship Missouri at the Charleston navy yard, Boston, according to information received at the navy department. Eight cases are reported.

Iowa Hits Lumber Trusts.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Kull bill, which prohibits combinations of lumber concerns in Iowa and aims a death blow at the lumber trusts now operating in the state passed the house Friday by a three to one vote.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS BETWEEN NICARAGUA

And the United States May Be Severed at Any Moment—Washington Officials See War Ahead.

Washington, April 5.—Indications are that diplomatic relations between this country and Nicaragua are rapidly nearing a crisis, resulting from the failure of President Zelaya to adjust the Emery claim.

In diplomatic circles it is declared that war clouds are ahead, and it would occasion no surprise if Senor Espinosa, Nicaraguan minister to the United States should shortly be told by the state department that the present difficulty has gone beyond the range of diplomatic discussion, in which event his request for passports would logically follow.

The reticence of the state department in regard to the case indicates that the situation is more or less grave, and that there is little probability of any settlement of the difficulty on the basis proposed by Secretary Knox.

What is regarded as significant in connection with the present state of affairs is the fact that J. H. Gregory, the American charge d'affairs, who recently reached here from Nicaragua, is not expected to return to the Central American republic.

One of the next moves of the state department probably will be the transmission of all the data bearing on the case to congress.

Minister Espinosa declines to discuss the situation pending further developments.

MANIACS PANIC-STRICKEN

When Several Buildings of Insane Asylum Were in Flames.

Woodward, Okla., April 5.—Six hundred helpless insane persons were in danger of death Sunday afternoon when a blaze, starting from a prairie fire, destroyed several buildings of the State Insane asylum at Ft. Supply, near here. The fire broke out in the laundry shortly after the noon meal and the inmates had been returned to their quarters. The asylum fire department was ordered out and every effort made to conceal from the patients the fact that the building was burning. One woman looking out of a window saw the fire and excitedly gave the alarm.

"We'll be burned to death," she screamed.

The attendants rushed among their charges and tried to pacify them, but a panic was narrowly averted.

The fire spread from the laundry to the pharmacy building and threatened the asylum itself. The buildings destroyed were the stables, laundry, pharmacy and employes' quarters. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Ship Driven on Rocks.

San Francisco, April 5.—According to advices received by the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. the steamer Indiana, bound from Mazatlan to San Francisco, went ashore during a heavy fog in Magdalena bay Saturday night and is still on the rocks. The passengers and their personal baggage and the mail were removed by the cruiser Albany and the tugs Fortune and Navajo.

The Auto Was Crushed.

New York, April 5.—Crushed between two trolley cars at Lee avenue and Wilson street, Williamsburg, a touring automobile was ground down to its steel frame-work Sunday and its three occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Veit and their ten-year old son, Clarence, were badly hurt.

Grease Paint Poisoning Claims Actor.

Chicago, April 5.—Death has claimed another of the famous organization that played at Ford's theater the night of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Earl Stirling, the character man at the College theater, and the veteran player of Chicago, died Sunday at the county hospital of grease paint poisoning.

Riot in Coal Mine.

Des Moines, Ia., April 5.—In a riot at Scanda coal mines, near here, late Sunday night Joseph Brady, 48 years old, was struck on the head with a beer bottle, suffering a fractured skull, and Frank Bowlich received a load of buckshot in the abdomen.

Arabian Steed Dies in Fire.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 5.—An Arabian stallion, valued at $2,500, Fred Atherton, a race horse, and other stock perished in a fire which destroyed the stables at the country home of R. C. Hall, president of the Pittsburg chamber of commerce.

Kenner, La., April 5.—The plant and a large quantity of lumber of the Ames Kent Lumber and Brick Co. was destroyed by fire here Sunday. The loss is $200,000, partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is not known.

Fire Raging in a Mine.

Mahanoy City, Pa., April 5.—Fire broke out in a breast of the eighth level of North Mahanoy colliery Sunday and is burning fiercely. Mine Inspector Fenton is directing the work of fighting the flames. The mine employs about 1,000 men and boys.

Jewels Stolen.

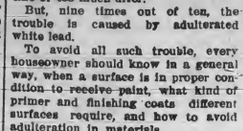
Montreal, Quebec, April 5.—Armed with a revolver and wearing a black beard, a man smashed the window of Theodore Grothe's jewelry store and escaped with a tray containing diamonds valued at $3,000.

THE CRACKING OF PAINT.

Property Owners Can Save Money by Learning the Cause.

Do you know what is wrong when paint peels, or cracks, or otherwise necessitates premature re-painting?

Well, sometimes it hasn't been properly applied—the surface being damp or there being too much turpentine or too much drier.



But, nine times out of ten, the trouble is caused by adulterated white lead.

To avoid all such trouble, every housewowner should know in a general way, when a surface is in proper condition to receive paint, what kind of primer and finishing coats different surfaces require, and how to avoid adulteration in materials.

A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, specifications for all kinds of painting work, and an instrument for detecting adulterations in painting materials, with directions for using it, can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York, and asking for Housewowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

This company, the largest makers of pure white lead, invite tests, by means of the blowpipe (included in outfit), or in any other way, of the purity of the white lead sold under their famous "Dutch Boy Painter" trademark. That trademark on a keg of white lead is in itself an absolute guarantee of purity and quality.

CHILD ATE CUTICURA OINTMENT.

Spread Whole Box of It on Crackers —Not the Least Injury Resulted.

Cuticura Thus Proven Pure and Sweet.

A New York friend of Cuticura writes:

"My three year old son and heir, after being put to bed on a trip across the Atlantic, investigated the stateroom and located a box of graham crackers and a box of Cuticura Ointment. When a search was made for the box, it was found empty and the kid admitted that he had eaten the contents of the entire box spread on the crackers. It cured him of a bad cold and I don't know what else."

No more conclusive evidence could be offered that every ingredient of Cuticura Ointment is absolutely pure, sweet and harmless. If it may be safely eaten by a young child, none but the most beneficial results can be expected to attend its application to expected to attend its application to even the tenderest skin or youngest infant.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Easter Storiette

How a Wife Was Regained at the Foot of the Cross.

THE night had crashed through the woods in storm, but the morning broke in sparkling sunshine—like a white burst of spray from a dark, bellowing wave.

The ring of an ax cut through the twitter of birds, and the throbbing notes of a meadow lark's song. On the edge of the clearing where Heathcot had built his log cabin, a young pine had been ripped up by the roots, and in swift flashes, catching the light as it rose and fell, his ax was denuding the trunk of all branches except two upper ones which on either side extended an outstretched arm. Any other settler would have seen in the fallen tree only so many cords of firewood, but in every crude incident of frontier life Heathcot beheld an inner, spiritual meaning—saw in the pine felled by the wind a Heaven-given cross for his Easter standard when he should preach his great revival sermon on the morrow.

The blood leaped in his veins as he swung his ax with tireless energy, and thoughts leaped to his brain in a rising torrent of religious fervor. Standing by the compelling form of the cross rough-hewn from their own forests by the hand of their own prophet he would speak to his people a word of power such as he had never spoken before—not even in his old church back in ——.

A sudden transformation swept over the zealot's face. The angel had fled and left only the man, the primitive man with fierce, elemental love, jealousy, hate. Crimson surged in his cheeks; his eyes blazed.

The ax rose and fell, physical labor beating into repression the stress of his passion. But while he chopped, cut, trimmed, while he and the helpers summoned from the settlement bore the cross through the woods and planted it at the head of the plaza, the sense of disgrace that had ruined his career and driven him into the wilderness still goaded his soul, for his home life had been a house upon the hilltop, its betrayed honor mocked at by every little dweller of the valley.

And on the following day when the settlers from far and near cabins gathered in the plaza, and Heathcot rose from his knees and stood beside the great pine cross to preach his Easter sermon, unconsciously it was the spark of personal anger that lighted his flaming denunciation of evil.

It was a dramatic scene. Above, a dull, gray sky, weighed low with heavy clouds; huddling on both sides and at the lower end of the plaza, the rude shacks of the Settlement high-walled beyond by the trees of the surrounding forest; at the upper end a sweep of open country stretching green to the horizon. The cross of pine planted at this end lifted its clear-cut strength against the background of the sky. Equally strong stood out the frontier preacher in his top boots, his corduroys, his crimson sweater, likewise strong in bearing the men and women of his congregation who had left the made ways of pleasantness and peace to blaze a new trail in history.

Only a man like Heathcot, who lived and labored and fought with them, side by side, shoulder to shoulder, could have touched them, quickened the spiritual within, and the vision of power that had flashed before him while he was hewing the cross the day before was fulfilled. When he had finished speaking, tears swept the cheeks of those who dry-eyed had faced privation, loss, death itself; those who had feared neither God nor devil were on their knees; and out from among them stole a woman of sin and threw her sobbing form at the foot of the cross.

As the others watched her, a hush of awe fell upon them, and breathlessly they waited for Heathcot to hurl the lashes of righteous wrath that should scourge her soul to fuller repentance.

For a moment he stood motionless, his face now white, tense, ablaze with a scathing light from his wonderful eyes. Then as though drawn by a magnet he turned toward the cross, the trunk of the tall straight pine pointing sternly upward, two branches extending like arms outstretched in pleading.

He stooped to the prostrate woman, bent over her, speaking in a low, hurried voice; lifted her to her feet.

"My people," he said in a tone of infinite sweetness, "I have a new word to give you. God is—love." He drew the shrinking woman to his side. "I cannot preach longer to you to-day, for I have found my wife—who was lost—and we must go home together."

He Drew the Shrinking Woman to Him.

Easter in Italy.

The boys and girls of this sunny land spend Easter morning in church. If they live in or near Rome they will surely go to St. Peter's, the largest church in the world. There they see thousands of lighted candles, altars covered with lovely flowers, and to their ears wonderful music softly floats. After the service is over the whole congregation pours out on to the square facing the church, and turning looks up at a balcony over the middle doorway. Here a figure is seen dressed in beautiful robes. It is the pope. As he rises and lifts his hand thousands of heads bow to receive his solemn Easter blessing.—Exchange.

FINISH WATERWAY REPORT

ST. LOUIS TO NEW ORLEANS PORTION IS PLANNED.

Engineers' Board Said to Consider Twenty or Twenty-Four Foot Channel Economical.

Washington. — Another big step in the plan for a deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf was taken Friday when the engineers' board in charge of the survey completed its report on the portion between St. Louis and New Orleans.

This is the biggest stretch of the proposed channel, and the report, according to telegraphic advices received at the war department, should be here to-day. The survey from Chicago to St. Louis was completed three years ago. The stretch from New Orleans to the mouth of the Mississippi will soon be complete.

Although Col. Bixby's dispatch as head of the engineers' commission in charge of the work merely announced the completion of the task, it is understood that the report will be highly favorable. It is reported that not only are the conclusions of the board favorable to the general project of a 14-foot channel from Chicago to the gulf, but that the board considers it practicable from a commercial standpoint.

Information has been received here that the board went even further in its conclusions and was of the opinion that a deep waterway of 20 or even 24 feet could be built with economy in preference to the 14-foot limit which is now proposed.

The report on the delta stretches of the proposed deep waterway is now all that is left before congress can map out its work. The national river and harbor commission of congress undoubtedly will urge speedy work when it brings in its report in December, especially if the Illinois legislature orders work begun meantime. Speaker Cannon is known to be favorably disposed toward the enterprise, and when he makes up the next river and harbor committee it is certain that it, too, will support the project.

BOAT BLAST KILLS TWELVE.

French Oil Bark Blown Up at Marsellies—Many Are Injured and Some Missing.

Marseilles.—The French tank bark Jules Henry, Capt. Escoffier, in the oil trade between Philadelphia and Cette, blew up Thursday and was practically totally wrecked. Twelve members of her crew were killed and many others wounded.

A representative of the Veritas agency, accompanied by the second officer, was inspecting the vessel at the time she blew up. In the course of their work the two men entered the tank hold. Immediately after there was a tremendous explosion. The entire deck of the bark was lifted, and the forward portion of the ship was wrenched off. Twenty men of the crew at work painting and repairing were blown into the air. Great sheets of fire shot up from the vessel, and in a few seconds she was enveloped in flames.

HUSBAND AND WIFE SLAIN

Toledo, O., Police Baffled by Mysterious Murder of Aged Couple, Evidently by Robbers.

Toledo, O.—In the finding of the bodies of Ludwig Krueger, aged 66, and his wife, aged 63, buried in the cellar of their home which was destroyed by fire Thursday, the police are confronted by a puzzling murder mystery.

M. Soboleski, a tailor, last Saturday gave Mr. Krueger $2,000 as part payment for the purchase of a farm.

It is believed that robbery was the motive and that the slayer, after burying the bodies and replacing the brick flooring in the cellar, set fire to the house to cover up the murder.

WOMEN TO CLEAN CITY.

Will Sweep Streets of Washington April 15 If the Commissioners Don't Get Busy.

Washington.—If the commissioners of the District of Columbia haven't found a way to clean the streets of Washington by April 15, the women of the capital will go out on the streets and show them how to do it. This has been decided by the Twentieth Century club of this city, an organization of the best known and most progressive women here.

Testimony was given by several members at the last meeting that the streets in front of their homes and in the parkways were littered with waste paper and other debris. Thereupon the club decided to act.

Eight Killed by Dynamite.

Chillicothe, O. — A terrific explosion occurred along the route of the Norfolk & Western railroad Tuesday in which eight workmen were killed and 20 or more were injured.

Rioters in Rome Wounded.

Rome.—An attempt made Friday by laborites to place wreaths in the Piaco Gesu, where the victims of a recent manifestation fell, led to disorders in which several persons were wounded and many were arrested.

Fixes Hours for Saloons.

Lincoln, Neb.—The Nebraska state senate Friday passed a bill compelling saloons to open at 7 a. m. and close at 8 p. m. The measure has already passed the house and will be sent to the governor.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Summary of Matters of Special Interest to Our Readers

CONDENSED FOR BUSY PEOPLE.

Democratic State Central Committee Selects Lexington as Headquarters of the Party and Thomas A. Combs as Chairman.

Lexington, Ky.—By the action of the democratic state central committee taken here the headquarters of the party organization are to be held in this city, and State Senator Thomas A. Combs, Lexington's former mayor and member of the state central committee from the Seventh district, is to be the chairman of a subcommittee of six, the other five of whom he is to appoint, which will be in charge of the headquarters and will direct and control the party organization.

MANDAMUS SUIT FILED

To Compel Christian County Fiscal Court to Levy School Tax.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—In filing a suit against the Christian county fiscal court, praying for a mandamus to compel the court to levy a tax to raise $10,000 for the support of common schools, the board of education took the first step in what is to be a test case of Kentucky's new school law. When the board of education asked for an appropriation of $10,000 on March 2 the fiscal court refused it, this course being recommended by County Attorney Duffy, who holds that the law is unconstitutional for several reasons. In order to make a test case he advised the refusal of the appropriation. The case will be passed upon by Circuit Judge Cook and an appeal will be taken at once and the case will be heard by the higher court at the April term. The school year for which the appropriation is asked begins July 1, and the validity of the law will have been passed upon long enough before to allow proper arrangements to be made.

STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS

Expected as Result of Bankruptcy Proceedings.

Louisville, Ky.—As a result of bankruptcy proceedings, recently instituted in the federal court against Isaac Levitch & Son, of Louisville, Uncle Sam's dragnet is out, and it is said that a swindle, with ramifications extending throughout the country, is to be uncovered. Isaac Levitch and H. Hyman were taken into custody, and more warrants are out. The arrests were made at the instance of District Attorney George Durelle on warrants charging "a conspiracy to defraud by use of the United States mails." This brings those arrested under the jurisdiction of the United States court. The extent of the alleged swindle involves thousands of dollars, and concerns more than 30 large eastern clothing firms. E. H. Ortner, a dry goods merchant at 1010 West Walnut street, son-in-law of Councilman Kreb, was arrested on a warrant taken out by Postoffice Inspector Sesong, charged with being implicated in the alleged swindle with which Hyman and Isaac Levitch are said to be connected.

HORSEMEN MEET

And Fix Racing Dates for Lexington and Louisville.

Lexington, Ky.—There will be seven days' racing here and 18 days at Louisville this spring. The pari-mutuel system of betting will be employed at both meetings. The local meeting will be under the auspices of the Kentucky Racing association and will open on Saturday, April 24, closing Saturday, May 1. The meeting at Louisville will be under the auspices of the New Louisville Jockey club at Churchill Downs track and will open Monday, May 3, on which day the Kentucky Derby will be decided, and will close on Saturday, May 22. The presumption is that the Latonia Jockey club will open a 30 days' meeting on some date during the week following the close of the Louisville meeting. There was nothing transpired here which gave a line on the plans of the Latonia Jockey club.

Lexington, Ky.—Richard Gentry, 45, widely known in racing and sporting circles, died after a lingering illness at the Good Samaritan hospital. His body was taken for burial to Standford.

Paducah, Ky.—Deb Mason, a river engineer on the steamer Kentucky, was shot and killed by Pat Lamoore, as the result of the renewal of an old quarrel. Lamoore was arrested.

Louisville, Ky.—Charges and counter charges of graft and alleged employment of political chicanery between a member of council and a member of the board of public works were made at a public hearing held by council's railroad committee.

Louisville, Ky.—William K. Summerhayes, superintendent of the home for aged and infirm, was fired upon five times by James Rigsby, night watchman at the institution. None of the shots took effect. Rigsby was infuriated because he had been discharged.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Kentucky's Deficit.

State Treasurer Farley's report shows in sinking fund, $160,807.51; school fund, $32,544.19; general expense fund, $24,217.34. There is charged against the amounts in outstanding warrants $302,837.87, leaving a deficit of $85,268.83.

Col. Ripley Pardoned.

Gov. Willson granted a full pardon to Col. Garnett Ripley, assistant adjutant general, who was arrested here on a warrant charging him with perjury in the damage suit of Mrs. Newton Hazelett against Walker Duncan, because of ulterior motive in the warrant.

Has Entered Suit.

Notices were received by Insurance Commissioner Bell and State Treasurer Farley that a suit had been filed by the Sun Life Insurance Co. of America to recover $100,000 deposited with the state treasurer for the protection of policy holders.

Patterned After Tuskegee.

The Kentucky Institute, the State Normal school for colored students, will be changed into a great industrial school patterned after Tuskegee and Hampton institutes. Such is the conclusion of the board of trustees of the Kentucky institute.

Assessments Raised.

The state board of equalization increased assessments in Campbell and Kenton counties 10 and 5 per cent, respectively. The assessors this spring made such heavy reductions that the board of equalization found it necessary to make the raises.

Kentucky Pick-Ups

Frankfort, Ky.—The local lodge of Elks elected Grant T. Roberts exalted ruler and Pruett Graham representative to the National Grand Lodge.

Louisville, Ky.—A movement toward the formation of the nucleus of a national no-treating league has been started by the National Model License League here.

Lebanon, Ky.—Fire which originated in the confectionery of J. W. Tharpe on Main street did damage to the extent of nearly $20,000, the greater part of which is covered by insurance.

Louisville, Ky.—W. H. Wright, a colored lawyer, announced his candidacy as representative from the 50th legislative district. His announcement is subject to the action of the republican party.

Louisville, Ky.—Mrs. Pearl A. Robinson, of Lexington, first vice president of the Kentucky Hotel Keepers' association, is in Louisville completing arrangements for the annual meeting of that body here on April 15.

Louisville, Ky.—As the result of injuries received while fighting fires, Capt. Mike Dolan, of Engine Company No. 5, has become incapacitated and was retired for life on half pay. The pension amounts to $50 a month.

Lexington, Ky.—The strike of union painters is practically at an end. Five firms, employing more than half the painters of the city, have signed agreements to give the strikers the 30 cents per hour for a nine-hour day, as asked.

Frankfort, Ky.—L. and N. Passenger Train No. 7 was wrecked on a bridge 100 feet high near Walton, and Passenger Train No. 1 had to go to Louisville via Lexington and this city. The wreck was caused by the tender jumping the track.

Paducah, Ky.—Burquo Parham, a negro, wanted for murder at Evansville, Ind., was arrested in this county and lodged in jail. He killed Arthur Balisch, an 18 year-old white boy, December 7, 1908, while the latter was talking to a girl.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Several tobacco plant beds have been ruined recently in Trigg county by being sown with salt or grass seed. Near Caledonia the beds of T. N. Wadlington and C. R. Wadlington, his son, were salted. Near Dinn's Mill every bed of Elmo Jones was sown with grass seed.

Louisville, Ky.—On two warrants charging him with selling poison and two with disposing of opium, Louis Yuen, a Chinaman, who conducts a restaurant, was arraigned in the police court and his case postponed. The state board of pharmacists is prosecuting.

Louisville, Ky.—Following the securing of a 50 years' lease from J. B. Speed for a large plot of ground opposite the Seelbach hotel, McDonald & Dodd, architects for the Seelbachs, announced that their employers would soon begin the erection of a $500,000 office building, theater and music hall, which will be the finest in Kentucky.

Lebanon, Ky.—At the republican convention, held here, John W. Lewis, of Washington county, and J. H. Graham, of Green county, were named nominees for circuit judge and commonwealth's attorney respectively in this (the 11th) judicial district.

Louisville, Ky.—Listing its liabilities at nearly $47,000 and its assets at $64,263 the clothing firm of S. A. Hipp & Co. filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the federal court. Six Louisville banks and numerous creditors in the east hold unsecured claims.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wood en tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in prefereuce to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—it will cost you nothing.

$12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,

money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

The Fine Black Jack, JOE,

Three years old, 15½ hands high. Will make the season at the same time and place at $8.00 to insure a colt to stand up and suck.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

BURLINGTON & WATERLOO HORSE CO.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20 00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and breding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

Local News.

Fruit is alright yet.

Last Saturday was an ideal March day.

Now don't let the town go dramatic crazy.

The roads began getting dusty last week.

No bad roads this spring to complain about.

Geo. C. Goode has something new to say to the readers of this paper this week.

There are four vacant residences in Burlington, which ought to be occupied.

S. J. Cullom and niece, Mrs. Anna Cullom, were visitors to Burlington, last Thursday.

The base ball season and the corn planting season open about the same time of the year.

Investigate C. L Gaines' 3 months' offer—10 magazines 3 months for $1—it can't be beaten.

The base ball scores that are now appearing in the daily papers give them a spring like appearance.

The remains of Mrs. Charles McKim were interred in the family lot in the old cemetery here last Thursday.

The coming of warmer weather is heralded by the move the painters and paper hangers are getting on them.

Grass has not done much growing in the last few weeks, as the ground has been too cold to advance vegetation.

The weather has been of a disagreeable pattern nearly every day since the sun crossed the line on March 21.

Very few farmers made their appearance in town last week. They were too busy to lose the time to come to town.

Some say there are large spots in their pastures where the grass is absolutely dead, the result of last year's drought.

The first colt of the season to show up in Burlington was that following the mare ridden by Elbert Clore, last Thursday.

Floyd Ryle, of Erlanger, spent several days last week in Burlington, the guest of his graud-mother, Mrs. Anna Kirkpatrick.

Joseph W. Scott, the leading breeder of Jersey cattle in Northern Kentucky, made the RECORDER a brief call one day last week.

Before subscribing or renewing your subscription to any publication, see if C. L. Gaines can't supply it. He will appreciate your patronage.

Mr. and Mrs Elmer Coneley's baby got a piece of apple fast in its throat, one day last week, and for a while it was thought it would choke to death.

The RECORDER building was reroofed, last week, with the Cortright metal shingle, for which J. J. Kirkpatrick is the local agent. It is a handsome roof.

Miss Olga Kirkpatrick was one of the theater party given last Thursday night by Dr. C. R. Slater, of Erlanger, in honor of Miss Essie Parish, Chas. Gurney.

W. L. Kirkpatrick, the local butcher, and F. H. Rouse, ex-butcher, have made a deal whereby the latter is to work for the former for the next 12 months.

Rev. Stith and family moved to J B. Rouse's residence out on the Florence pike, last Thursday, and J. M. Eddins' wife and childreu are at their old home again.

There will not be much turnpike building in the county, this year, the large crop of tobacco that will be pitched requiring all the labor that will be obtainable.

The Boone Circuit Court will convene next Monday for its regular April term. The grand jurors who have been summoned are not required to report until Tuesday.

A small acreage of oats will be sowed in this county. The oats crop has been growing smaller year by year in this part of the State until fields of that cereal are very scarce.

Lanky Rob, the fine jack belonging to Edgar Graves of Bullittsville, and others, died last week. It is a heavy loss to the boys, who purchased him at the beginning of last season.

The Burlington and Florence Turnpike Company reelected the old board of officers at its annual [illegible] Saturday. The road is keeping itself in good repair and yielding a dividend.

Mr. Farmer, don't plant too much tobacco. An acreage that can be properly cultivated and handled will be a greater money producer than a very large crop that cannot receive proper attention at critical times during the season.

The State Board of Equalization increased Boone county's 1908 assessment as returned by the assessor as follows: Land, 5 per cent; town lots, 5 per cent; personal property subject to equalization, 5 per cent. This increase, if it stands, will make Boone county yield about $2,000 more revenue than it would were the assessor's work not molested.

Some of the farmers in this locality are sending to Illinois for Yellow Dent seed corn. They understand it will produce from 10 to 20 bushels more corn per acre than anyother corn, and will mature in 120 days. It stands a drought better than other corn.

James E Smith, assessor for the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, went to Richwood, last Saturday, to view the ruins of the Ransler residence, which was destroyed by fire the day before. The building was insured for $1,950 which will not cover the loss.

The April term of the Boone circuit court will convene next Tuesday morning with not a very large docket. On the ordinary docket there are 7 appearances and 18 old causes, while the equity docket carries 11 new and 34 old suits, 4 of the 7 new suits being for divorce.

NOTICE—The members of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee are hereby called to meet at Burlington, Ky., Tuesday, April 13th, 1909, at 1:30 p. m., for the purpose of selecting election officers for the primary election, April 20.

A. B. RENAKER, Chairman.

The flying machine that is quartered on the Brobrink farm between Aurora and Lawrenceburg, and opposite Petersburg, this county, was given a trial one day last week, but it failed to make good. The proprietor expresses himself confident that he will make it perform properly at an early dater

No change in the matter of assessing the banks of the State will be made this year. The banks will be assessed on their capital, surplus and undivided profits, as last year, the valuation being 80 per cent. instead of par. This method of taxation has proved satisfactory in the past and the State officials thought it wise to continue the arrangement.

Sammie Adams received a letter one day last week, from Dr. W. O. Rouse, who has located at St. Petersburg, Fla. He states that he and his wife and child are having splendid health, and rejoicing that they are not coming back to Kentucky again this spring. The doctor is engaging in the growing of vegetables and anticipates great success. He sent his regards to all.

They tell this good one on one of the candidates who is at large in this judicial district. The candidate in question went into a house after his opponent and found only a little girl there to welcome him He told her who he was, gave her his card and, noticing an expectant look upon her bright face, handed her a stick of barber-pole candy. "Did the man ahead of me give you anything?" he asked. "Es'er, he gimme er nickie, too," replied the little girl. Out came a nickie, and as it changed owners the candidate took the little one up and kissed her. "Did the man ahead of me kiss you?" he asked. "Es, 'er, and maw, too," she replied.

Swept Over Niagara.

This terrible calamity often happens because a careless boatman ignores the river's warning—growing ripples and faster currents—Nature's warnings are kind. That dull pain or ache in the back warns you the Kidneys need attention if you would escape fatal maladies—Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's disease. Take Electric Bitters at once and see Backache fly and all your best feelings return. "After long suffering from weak kiduevs and lame back, one $1 00 bottle wholly cured me," writes J. R. Blankenship, of Belk, Tenn. Only 50c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

In driving to Georgetown the other day we were struck with the large number of tobacco beds dotting the fields and hillsides here and there. At no time the whole way is one out of sight of them, Some farms had as many as six or eight immense ones and at one place we counted at least a half dozen, all of them 100 feet long or more, and all within a few huudred yards of each other. Then as far as the eye could see in every direction were these big white spots glistening in the sunlight. If what we saw in Woodford and Scott counties is but a fair sample of what is to be seen in the other counties of the burley district then the statement issued by the Kentucky Agricultural department as to the size of this year's crop is the truth. We have never seen anything like it.—Blue Grass Clipper.

The Chicago Examiner of March 28, prints the picture of 104 Chicago attorneys, each of which was given a short write up, among them that of C. A. Winston, a native of Burlington. It is as follows: "Mr. Winston was born in Boone County, Ky., Dec. 6th, 1865. He was educated in the public schools of Kentucky and at Woodward College, Cincinnati. He was admitted to the Ohio and Kentucky bars in 1891. He graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1893 Mr. Winston came to Chicago in 1896 and began the practice of his profession, but returned to Harvard University in 1897 to take special work in constitutional, corporation and civil law. He accepted a professorship, the Chair of Real Property, in the University of Minnesota He resigned his professorship in 1899 and returned to Chicago to re-engage in active practice. Mr. Winston specializes in corporation law. He is a Republican in politics, but has never sought any political office. Mr. W[illegible] member of the [illegible] Club and the Chicago Athletic Association. Mr. Winston married Miss Nina Wright in 1900."

Words To Freeze the Soul.

"Your son has Consumption. His case is hopeless" These appalling words were spoken to Geo. E. Blevens, a leading merchant of Springfield, N. C. by two expert doctors—one a lung specialist. Then was shown the wonderful power of Dr. King's New Discovery "After three weeks use," writes Mr. Blevens, "he was as well as ever. I would not take all the money in the world for what it did for my boy" Infallible for Coughs and Colds its the safest, surest cure of desperate Lung diseases on earth 50c and $1 00. Guaranteed satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress from Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes in Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach, it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22 grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery:

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, billiousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

There May Be

as good flour made as

and no doubt there is; but we do not believe there is any better made.

Capitol

is as white as any unbleached flour can be made and has all the good baking qualties not always found in other flour.

June 1st will see the end of the unhealthy, chemical bleaching of flour by injecting Nitrogen Peroxide into it for Uncle Sam has decided that is injurious.

PE-RU-NA

For Cramps in the Stomach of Six Years' Standing.

"I was troubled with cramps in the stomach for six years. I tried many kinds of medicine, also was treated by three doctors.

"They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I took the medicine for two years, then I got sick again and gave up all hopes of getting cured.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine, being cured by Peruna, so thought I would give it a trial. I procured a bottle at once, and commenced taking it.

"I have taken nineteen bottles, and am entirely cured. I believe Peruna is all that is claimed for it."—Mrs. J. C. Jamison, 61 Marchant St., Watsonville, Cal.

HAD A RIGHT MERRY TIME.

Presents and Souvenirs Distributed on Casey's Birthday.

"Yis," began Mrs. O'Toole, "ye see, it was Casey's birthday yisterday, an' Casey brought home two bottles of rale stuff—one inside an' one outside—to sillybrate the occasion, an' they jist had the tolme of their lives last avenin'. Iv'rybody happy an' iv'rybody handin' out prisents an' souvenirs of the evint to iv'rybody else!

"Casey gave his wife an' his mother-in-law a black eye apiece; his wife give Casey a punch in the bread basket; his mother-in-law give him a side swipe with a skillet; an' Casey give the old lady another black eye to keep company with the first one; an' the police come an' give Casey a ride to the station house; an' this mornin' the judge took a hand in the game, an' give Casey ten days!

"Oh, 'twas a gran' sillybration they had all 'round, wid remimbrances an' souvenirs handed out regardless of expense or who they happened to hit!"

SNAP FOR JIMMIE.

"Oh, Jimmie, our pa's been appointed postmaster!"

"Good! Now I won't have ter put any stamps on de letters I sends youse!"

The Strenuous Blanche.

One of Blanche Bates' most intimate friends is telling a rather funny story about this clever actress.

"She came into my house one evening very much excited, and I said to her: 'Blanche, for heaven's sake, what is the matter? You seem to be all gone to pieces.'

"'Matter enough,' she answered, as her voice shook with anger. 'I have been accosted by a man in the streets.'

"'What did you do?' I asked.

"'I hauled off and hit him in the face,' she answered, 'and I said to him: "You dirty dog, would you speak to a defenseless woman?"'

"'And where was he when you said this?' I again inquired.

"'Rolling in the gutter where he fell when I hit him,' she said, in a surprised tone at my question."—Toledo.

A Dubious Tribute.

The young theological student who had been supplying the Rushby pulpit for two Sundays looked wistfully at Mrs. Kingman, his hostess for the time being. "Did you like the sermon this morning, if I may ask?" he inquired.

"You done real well with the material you selected," said Mrs. Kingman, with much cordiality. "As I said to Zenas on the way home, 'I've heard a dozen or more sermons preached on that text, and this young man's the first one that ever made me realize how difficult 'twas to explain.'"—Youth's Companion.

SISTER'S TRICK

But It All Came Out Right.

How a sister played a trick that brought rosy health to a coffee fiend is an interesting tale:

"I was a coffee fiend—a trembling, nervous, physical wreck, yet clinging to the poison that stole away my strength. I mocked at Postum and would have none of it.

"One day my sister substituted a cup of Postum piping hot for my morning cup of coffee but did not tell me what it was. I noticed the richness of it and remarked that the coffee tasted fine but my sister did not tell me I was drinking Postum for fear I might not take any more.

"She kept the coffee and kept giving me Postum instead of coffee until I grew stronger, more tireless, ... better color in my sallow cheeks and a clearness to my eyes, then she told me of the health-giving, nerve-strengthening lifesaver she had given me in place of my morning coffee. From that time I became a disciple of Postum and no words can do justice in telling the good this cereal drink did me. I will not try to tell it, for only after having used it can one be convinced of its merits."

Ten days' trial shows Postum's power to rebuild what coffee has destroyed. "There's a Reason."

GENTILE DAYS

Malachi's Prophecy Arouses Hatred of His Countrymen.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. H. Edson.)

Scripture Authority:—Malachi, chapter 1, esp. verse 11.

Malachi, the Prophet.—The name means Messenger of Jehovah. He was the last of the prophets, and therefore called "the seal" of the prophets, as his prophecies constitute the closing book of the canon. Of his personal history nothing is known. According to one tradition preserved in Pseudo-Epiphanius it is stated that Malachi was of the tribe of Zebulun, and was born after the captivity at Sophis, in the territory of that tribe. According to the same apocryphal story, he died young, and was buried with his fathers in his own country. Jerome, in the preface of his commentary on Malachi, mentions a belief which was current among the Jews, that Malachi was identified with Ezra the priest. With equal probability Malachi has been identified with Mordecai, Nehemiah and Zerubbabel. The LXX render "by Malachi" (Mal. 1:1), "by the hand of his angel;" and this translation appears to have given rise to the idea that Malachi, as well as Haggai and John the Baptist, was an angel in human shape (comp. Mal. 3:1; 2 Esd. 1:40). Internal evidence is conclusive in favor of the writer living after the death of Ezra and the second immigration of captives, since the abuses noted in the book are exactly those which Nehemiah reformed.

SERMONETTE.

In the present day we find fulfilment of the vision which Malachi saw in verse 11.

The day of the Jew was to pass and the day of the Gentile was to be ushered in.

God's patience is seemingly inexhaustible as he deals mercy and love, but here is the other view of the Divine character. "He will not always chide, neither will he withhold his anger forever."

At last when every means of bringing his people back to him are exhausted, then the judgment of his wrath falls and it is then too late.

In the declining days of the Jews, when, in spite of all his warnings and his punishments, the nation persisted in forgetting him, there was still shining ahead of them the promise of the Coming One, the Messiah, in whom the nation should find a perfect deliverer. But it was beyond that which Malachi looked when he said that the day was coming when the Jew should be set aside and the Gentile should find favor with God.

Such prophecy could not be welcome to the Jew, whose great pride in his nation made him feel that God could love only his chosen people.

And while to-day there is not danger of the same feeling, at least in degree, on the part of the Gentile which existed in the heart of the Jew, still there is something like the thought lurking in the heart of the Christian. The day of God's gracious dealings with the Gentiles will have its end just as at last the day of the Jews had its ending.

But there is danger in the world to-day of the same complacent view of conditions as existed in the days when Malachi saw this vision of the Jew's rejection.

"From the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same," the name of the Lord is "great among the Gentiles."

But where is the Jew? He is the despised and the persecuted among all the nations of the world. But dare the Gentile Christians rest secure in the present hour of favor? As certainly as did the Jews forget God and forfeit his favor, there is danger of the Christian church of to-day falling into corruption and forfeiting its rich heritage in Christ.

THE STORY.

"WHAT heresy is this which that young Malachi is preaching?" exclaimed one of a group of priests gathered in counsel in the temple at Jerusalem.

One of their number had been making a statement in which he had reported the words he had overheard while passing through the streets of the city, and as he finished the leader of the party rose, and looking angrily around upon the others, demanded to know what it could mean.

"Tell us again," he said, turning to the priest who had made the statement; "just what it was that Malachi said, that there can be no misunderstanding."

"He was speaking to a group of people in the market place, and as I drew close to see and hear, I overheard him say: 'Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, I have no pleasure in the priests, neither will I accept an offering at their hands. For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down thereof, my name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering. For my name shall be great among the heathen.'"

"Did he denounce the priests before the people in that way?" demanded the leader.

"He did, in those very words."

"And did he say that God was only going to receive offerings from the Gentiles?"

"Yea, he said that very thing."

The leader looked about upon the faces of those before him, silently, but with a darkening expression which indicated the violence of the hatred within.

"Where did this fellow, Malachi, come from?" asked one, breaking the long silence.

"'Tis said he comes from the tribe of Zebulun, and appeared first several years ago while yet Nehemiah was here. And after Nehemiah had gone and the priesthood had again gained a measure of its liberties, which had been so strictly curtailed under his rule, this Malachi presumed to set himself up as a prophet and to go about pointing out what he called the great evils of the day and denouncing them in the name of our God. But I thought he had departed, for after we had denounced him and threatened him nothing more was heard of him."

"Well, he is very active, now, surely, and with some of the people at least it is plain to see that he is held as a prophet."

The leader of the priests gritted his teeth and muttered almost incoherently, so angry was he:

"What right hath he to speak without authority from the priests? He is only preaching heresy, but is undermining the very life of the nation. What will become of us if the people of our nation come to believe that we are to be set aside and the dogs of heathen about us are to become supreme? Nay, it is impossible. Our God is the God of the Jew but not of the Gentile, except he become a Jew. Is not that right according to the law of Moses?"

"Thou hast stated it exactly," responded the others.

"Then how can we permit this fellow to continue to speak not only against the truth which Moses hath spoken, but also against the present continuance of our nation? Are not the daily offerings made? Is not the temple worship maintained? Is not the incense burned? Then what knoweth this fellow more than we, or what complaint hath he to make concerning these things?"

"Let us bring him before us and question him concerning these things," ventured one of the number. "As you have said, it will not do to suffer this fellow to continue to preach such doctrine."

"Who will bring him?" questioned the leader, dubiously. "Perhaps he will not come without violence, and who knows but that the people may turn against us and stand in his defense."

"Let us go then, in a body," answered the priest, who had ventured the first suggestion.

"Agreed," they all exclaimed in unison.

"Bring the scroll containing the law of Moses, and we will refute this heresy to his face, and before all the people," exclaimed the leader. "We will show him that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is not the God of the Gentiles, except they become Jews."

And so this imposing body of men, in their priestly robes, marched forth, and going to the market place found the object of their ire still speaking to the people.

As the priests passed along the street their coming caused no little commotion. People turned and looked and then, in curiosity, followed, so that when the priests had reached the place where Malachi was addressing the people, the crowd there was greatly augmented.

But if Malachi noted the presence of the priests he gave no heed, but continued to address the people.

"Yea," he shouted, "from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same the name of the Lord shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, for my name shall be great among the heathen."

"Away with such a fellow," shouted the leader of the priests, pressing forward through the crowd. "Can the God of Abraham, and Isaac and Jacob forget his people? Does not Moses, in the law which God gave him, say that the seed of Abraham are God's chosen people? Away with this fellow who would teach that God had turned from his people."

Malachi turned at the sound of the voice and watched intently as the priest pressed up to his side. He noted the intense look upon the faces of the people as they listened to the words of the priest. Then with one swift glance upward, as though in mute appeal for the help which he needed in that trying hour, he turned full upon the priest as he came before him, and pointing his finger at him, he shouted:

"And now, O ye priests, this commandment is for you. If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the Lord of Hosts, I will even send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings; yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart."

Under the awful arraignment the face of the priest became ashen, and he trembled and quailed before the unflinching eyes of Malachi. What was it that struck terror to his heart? Was it the consciousness of the truth of the words which were spoken? Was it the fire of righteous indignation which flashed from the unflinching eyes of Malachi? Whatever it was the priest, completely cowed, turned, and, with his followers, silently and sullenly wended his way back to the temple.

"Ah, let the fellow alone," they exclaimed to each other. "We have the temple and the daily ministrations. He is but a wanderer from Zebulun. What care we what he says. We have the law of Moses. We are God's chosen people."

COERCION OF LABOR

WORKMEN ARE AT THE MERCY OF TRUST MANIPULATORS.

Demand for Tariff Cut on Steel Products Met with Threatened Cut in Wages—Stock Weapon of Tariff Barons.

Not very long ago a millionaire gambler in steel stocks, temporarily in control of important manufacturing plants, astounded the business world by closing down and throwing thousands of employes out of work in prosperous times.

When this stock manipulator got ready he opened his plants again. Market conditions had absolutely nothing to do with the temporary idleness he forced on his men. He was gambling on the speculative chess board and the pay rolls of his employes were his chief pawns.

It is not surprising that employes of steel manufacturing plants are again apprehensive. They know by experience that they are at the mercy of trust manipulators. Steel trust officials deny that there will be any present cut in wages. But their denial does not cover the immediate future. Demoralized prices is all the excuse they need for reducing wages.

Balance causo and effect. Steel trust officials, in spite of Carnegie's ridicule, are opposed to tariff reduction. They have lately discovered a serious purpose to reduce the steel schedules. Instantly there is a flurry in Wall street, and an organized squeeze of small holders of steel stocks.

But the threat of a tariff cut on steel products has a far wider and deeper effect than the stock tickers show. Simultaneously with the threat there arises the shadow of empty dinner pails. There is a counter threat, though partly veiled, of wage cuts and lockouts. It is the same old story of coercing labor into an advocacy of high tariff.

Ever since the high tariff barons were intrenched in power this periodical coercion has been more or less effective. They do not stop at threats, as we have seen. They close down plants, regardless of market conditions, at the psychological moment when hard times will influence public sentiment. The wage weapon is the tariff barons' strongest.

Recent "hearings" before the ways and means committee riddled the absurdity of the claim that labor gets a fair proportion of tariff taxes. Labor gets the crumbs, while the holders of trust stocks and bonds divide the real winnings. Yet labor's more or less helpless position enables the trust barons to use it in the manufacture of public sentiment.

That is why wages fluctuate when there is no real economic reason why they should.

The Duty on Coffee.

The Louisville Courier-Journal improves the occasion to set out some revenue doctrine in the way of tariff taxation thus: "The truth is that as long as we must raise public revenue by means of customs duties, coffee and tea should always be thus taxed unless we import enough foreign luxuries to afford the required revenue. Under any intelligent system of revenue tariff in this country coffee and tea would be so taxed. They are free under the present system of high protection because the revenues they would yield would furnish reason and means of reducing or abolishing many of the duties on home products which exact of the consumers so much money, not for the government, but for a few classes who virtually dictate the tariff schedules as laid by the Republican party."

Too Soon to Boast.

We note a certain disposition to brag on the part of some of the young men named by President Taft for high official places. Mr. Dickinson's assurances of what he is going to do and how he is going about it and what tremendous things he intends to achieve in the war department are quite unnecessary; and Mr. Loeb's assurances that he is going to be the best collector of customs the port of New York ever had, would just as well have been omitted. Discreet men rarely inform the world in advance of what they are going to do; and there is a scripture which informs us that away back in the days of the Hebrew prophets it was adjudged wise to beware the hazards of boasting.

The one certain factor in the struggle is that no matter how the first battle goes the tariff reform sentiment of the west can not be smothered. If the west is betrayed in the opening battle, by agents of the money power, it will merely strengthen the people's determination to attain their ends. They can make and unmake congresses.

National Railroad Merger.

The report that a national merger of railroads is in preparation is not surprising. The Taft administration has indicated its opinion that the Sherman law was not intended to apply to railroads. If it acts up to that belief what have the railroad magnates to fear, if they decide to unite?

Every moment we acted as though it was in time of war.—Admiral Sperry.

Judging from the reports received during the progress of the cruise there has been a great improvement in the quality of war since Gen. Sherman made his estimate.

REPUBLICANS FACE A CRISIS.

Can New Administration Undo the Evils of Its Predecessor?

Besides the tariff, to which President Taft would confine the work of the special session of congress, it is almost inevitable that the census bill vetoed by President Roosevelt will come up for final passage, either as it was passed by the Sixtieth congress or amended to meet the objections stated in the veto. The work of the census bureau cannot well wait for the regular session.

The importance of the census in making the basis for distribution among the states of representation in congress and the election of president and vice-president is so great that every person employed in taking it, whether in clerical or field work, should be chosen with an eye single to efficiency and accuracy in the count of heads. If the application of civil service rules to some thousands of census employes left exempt by the bill as it passed in the last congress will contribute to this end, the bill ought certainly to be amended in this particular before it becomes a law.

It seems that everything is cut and dried for the passage in the house of whatever tariff bill President Taft and Speaker Cannon may agree upon, by compromise or otherwise. The bargain appears to be already made, and if Mr. Cannon can hold down the lid upon the Republican insurgents there will be no wide latitude in the discussion of schedules.

It is a condition and not a theory which confronts the new administration. The increasing extravagance of the last eight years has brought the Republican party to the necessity of raising more money, either by an unpopular bond issue or by still more unpopular taxes. The needed revenue might be provided by revising the tariff with a view more to revenue than to protection, but neither President Taft nor the house leaders will depart from the principle of protection. The Republican senate leaders certainly will not.

The Republican party faces the most troublesome crisis it has seen since McKinley's first election. Every party is in deep water under whose control the finance and business of the country go wrong. The question of the next few months is: Can President Taft pull his party back to dry land? If he cannot the house of representatives to be elected next year will surely be Democratic.

Mr. Taft is pledged to give us relief from the tariff burden. We confidently await his definite action to that end.

Presidential Power Assumed.

A conference committee of the two houses of congress agreed to a provision in the diplomatic and consular bill that no ambassadorship shall be created unless it has been provided for by act of congress, and the conference report has been agreed to by both houses. What it was that led to the adoption of this wise restriction we do not know. But certainly there should be no power in the president to create new offices without authority of congress. The status of men in office ought to be fixed by law. And when it is thus fixed it ought not to be changed except by the action of congress. A man who is appointed to the diplomatic service is appointed to a legally created and a legally defined office, either that of ambassador or minister. To hold that a minister can be changed into an ambassador by the act of the president is to admit that the president has the power to create a new office. Of course he has no such power.

Struggle Clearly Defined.

No new congress in the history of the United States has ever had a more direct commission from the people to lighten tax burdens than the coming one. The west is aflame with tariff reform sentiment. The struggle resolves itself into one between the money power and the masses. The predatory trusts have the forts, the big guns and the ammunition. Not only have they the munitions of war, but they own the ablest generals and strategical captains.

Pitted against them is the disorganized body of American consumers. The people know what they want, but their campaign is necessarily against an intrenched enemy. The people are compelled to rely on the dominant political party's redemption of its pledges. They have no reason as yet to doubt Taft's sincerity.

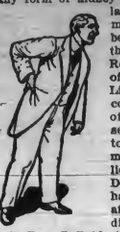
Ex-Secretary Shaw is quoted as saying congressmen are not usually brainy. Perhaps he has reached that conclusion after watching the Republican majority perform under the direction of Speaker Cannon.

The standpatters believe that, with a plastic president and a majority in both houses of congress, they are supreme. Perhaps so now, but their abuse of power will merely mean a democratic house in 1910.

Don't Abbreviate States.

"Your letter to [illegible] village went wrong, eh?" said the postmaster. "Well, it's your own fault. You should have written out the name of the state in full."

"Ah, what for?" snarled the complainant. "I put 'Tenn.' on the envelope. That couldn't be confused with any other state name."



"How about 'Penn.?'" said the postmaster. "Aren't 'Penn.' and 'Tenn.' a lot alike? Of course they are, and if people want their letters to go straight and prompt, they ought always to write states out in full.

"For 'Cal.' and 'Col.' get confused continually; so do 'Nev.' and 'Neb.' 'N. Y.' and 'N. J.' 'Miss.' and 'Mass.' and 'Minn.' 'Pa.' and 'Va.,' 'Me.' and 'Mo.'"

IT WAS NOT HER BACK.

Woman Had No Idea of Being Proxy for Medical Treatment.

A missionary, discoursing upon India, told of a woman who had come to her complaining of a very sore back and desired that she pray for its cure. This Mrs. Jackson did, but the woman again appeared before her and declared that the back was still in a bad condition. Mrs. Jackson advised the use of an application of iodine, and brought out a bottle of the drug to apply upon the afflicted part of the woman's anatomy. But she regarded the bottle suspiciously and acted as though it would hurt her were she to use it. To allay her fears upon this score Mrs. Jackson applied some of the drug to her own finger and showed her that it would not burn, and that she had better allow her to put some of it upon her back.

"But," said the woman, "it would do no good."

"How so?" inquired Mrs. Jackson, sympathetically.

"Because," replied the woman, "it is my old man's back that is sore."

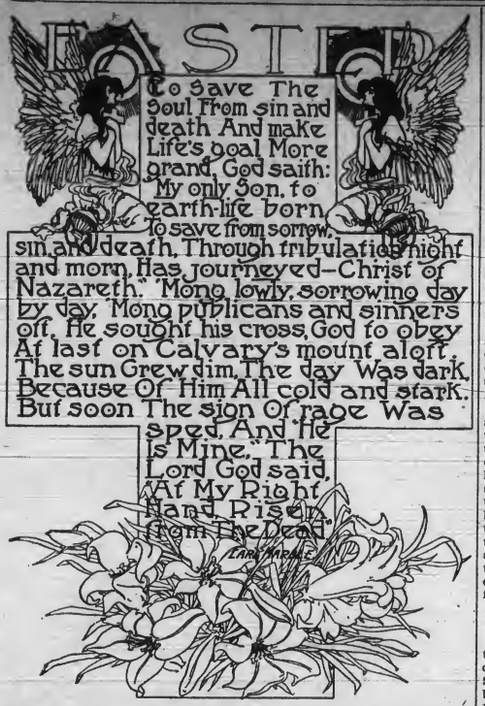
WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD



During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble [illegible] you may use this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

HINDU TEMPLE VERY OLD.

Remains Found in Java of Great Works of the Eighth Century.

The Boroboedoer unearthed by Sir Stamford Raffles when the English ruled in Java was built by the Hindus in the eighth century and is by far the finest example of their work in the island. Standing on a hill in the middle of the valley, this imposing edifice, covering nearly ten acres, rises to a height of upward of 100 feet above the summit of the hill.

It consists of a series of stone terraces built on top of each other in diminishing magnitude, so as to leave circumscribing galleries, and crowned by a vast cupola; entrance to the galleries is gained by four stairways, north, south, east and west, which run from the ground straight up to the big top terrace, in the middle of which stands the crowning cupola, surrounded by numerous smaller lattice work cupolas, and from which one may step aside into any of the intermediate galleries.

The whole is built of stone, showing an immense amount of carving, and though there is no genuine inside to the temple, many of the galleries are covered in, innumerable images of Buddha occupy niches or prominent positions on the walls, and the sides of the galleries are paved with bas-reliefs, indicating the glorification of this god and other incidents in his history. When one considers that there are several miles of bas-reliefs alone, the works expended on the pyramids of Egypt pales into insignificance before this stupendous undertaking.

Ivory from Nuts.

Ivory nuts, popularly called vegetable ivory, are the fruit of a species of palm, and are known in France and Spain as corozo nuts, and in Columbia as fagua nuts. The trees require 15 years or more before they can properly mature nuts for manufacturing purposes. Vegetable ivory is used commercially for the manufacture of buttons, gaming counters, various electrical appliances, and for various kinds of inlaid work, for which they are turned or carved.

The chief consuming countries of this article are France, England, Germany, the United States, Italy, Russia and Spain. The port of Cartagena in Columbia alone exported 3,423 tons of ivory nuts to Germany in 1907; 505 to France, 441 to this country, and 53 to England. These shipments all originated in the departments of Bolivar, Magdalena and Atlantico on the Atlantic coast, and Cauca on the Pacific coats.

How They Do It.

It's just the same in every country on earth. Two boys who are strangers to each other meet for the first time. After standing and looking at each other for a moment one of them sticks up his nose and says:

"Hump!"

"Hump!" repeats the other as his nose goes up.

"You can't fight."

"Neither can you."

"I can lick you with one hand tied behind me."

"So can I you."

"I'm awful when I'm mad."

"So'm I."

"You orter see me kick once!"

"And you orter see me bite!"

"Hu!"

"Hu!"

And then they go to talking about goats and dogs and kites and marbles, and ten minutes later are friends and taking bites from the same apple.

Women's Work and Infant Mortality.

In eight industrial towns, where the proportion of married women of child-bearing age at work in the factories was 43 per cent., the infant mortality rate for ten years averaged 182 per 1,000. In eight industrial towns of a different type, where the proportion of married women at work was only three per cent., the infant mortality was only 150 per 1,000. The excessive rate in the first group is not due to bad wages nor bad conditions, but to the absence of the mother.—London Post.

Habitual Constipation

May be permanently overcome by proper personal efforts with the assistance of the one truly beneficial laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, which enables one to form regular habits daily so that assistance to nature may be gradually dispensed with, when no longer needed, as the best of remedies when required are to assist nature, and not to supplant the natural functions, which must depend ultimately upon proper nourishment, proper efforts, and right living generally.

To get its beneficial effects, always buy the genuine.

Western Canada the Personal Winner

"The Last Best West!"

FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

"The thing which most impressed me was the magnitude of the country that is available for agricultural purposes."—National Editorial Correspondence, 1908.

IT was all right so far, anyway. Helen sat very straight, with her toes just touching the carriage floor and a seraphic smile on her chubby face. Nobody suspected, not even grandma, who was so busy smiling at all the other old ladies on their way to church. It had been difficult getting in the carriage with it under her arm, and although it was hard and seemed to have un-egglike points on it, the ride to church was not so bad after all. And what a beauty it was—all gold except the pink and blue spots, and they had tiny gold specks on them, too!

Luckily the egg arm was away from grandma, so Helen slipped the egg down into her hand and sat in comfort, though with some misgiving as to the safest way of conveying her burden of guilt into the church. One hand? No, the egg was too big. Both hands? No, that wouldn't do, for grandma's friends were always shaking hands. Now, if little girls only wore muffs at Easter time—but then they never did so why think of that? Oh, there was Simpson opening the door! Helen made a convulsive grab at the egg and hooked it up under the pretty lace ruffles; but the stealth was unnecessary, for grandma was bowing to a very round gentleman with white hair that stuck up toothbrushy fashion around his nice red face. "So here is little Helen! How do, Helen?" and he briskly shook her hand. Helen pumped it stiffly up and down from the elbow. Oh, the egg, the egg! Why hadn't she put it under the other arm? That regret quickly left her when grandma took hold of the safe arm and piloted her by it into the church.

Helen wondered why she had never noticed how many miles and miles of aisle one must travel before grandma's pew was reached, while everywhere were people staring with knowing eyes that seemed to say, "There she is! There's the bad child that takes an egg to church!" But the journey ended, and after a little prayer Helen and the egg [illegible] baby in the big pew. What a relief! Well, she was here and so was the egg, and now, when she had listened to the music and had counted all the organ pipes on each side, she could play with the egg and—Helen looked lovingly at its gorgeous glitter as it lay on the crimson cushion, not on the grandma side, but snugly between her and the dark pew wall. Just think of it! Susie had boiled it hard, and then she had painted the spots, and then she had gilded it, and now here it was in church. Who ever heard of an egg in church? A warning poke from grandma, who was becoming curious, reminded Helen that her egg must be invisible as well as inaudible.

The fat red-and-white man kept walking up and down the aisle showing people where to sit, and finally he sat down in the pew directly in front of Helen. "I thought he used to be a rusher, but I wasn't quite sure," Helen told the egg.

The long prayers did not seem half as long as usual, for it wasn't hard to kneel when you could put the egg down in a dark corner and see it glitter as you turned it around. The organ pipes lost their old time fascination, and Helen hardly realized that the rector had begun to talk before she heard him say: "Now to the King"—and they all jumped up.

And the egg! However in the world could it have jumped right out of her hand and into the fat man's pew? But it had, and there it shone as brightly as ever. If she could only snatch it up quickly! She leaned 'way over to make the attempt, but every one else was sitting down. "Sit down, Helen," whispered grandma, sharply, and in the blindness of humiliating tears Helen sat. Visions of disgrace rose up and threatened to overwhelm her. To have one of the "rushers" come up after church and say: "Madame, is this your egg?" and grandma would say: "Why, no," and then she would have to say: "Please, it's mine!" and everybody would know that Helen Gardiner had brought an egg to church! Oh, why hadn't she been born a heathen, so she wouldn't have to go to church on Easter, but could stay at home and roll eggs without waiting until next day! But, most bitter thought of all, maybe grandma would not let her have the egg again after the rusher man gave it back, and she couldn't roll it even next day.

"Freely ye have received, freely give," the rector was saying. Give—what wouldn't she give just to get the egg back without grandma's knowledge? Perhaps when the man got up— He was getting up! Of course; he always passed the shiny gold plate and it was time to get her money out of her handkerchief. But why did grandma's figure stiffen in a sudden dazed comprehension as she gasped in dismay, and why did people titter in that disconcerting way? They must surely have seen the egg in the fat man's pew. Helen dashed the tears out of her big eyes and looked at him as he marched in blissful ignorance up the aisles with the other ushers. What was that awful glittering mass of ruin on his broad black back? Oh, it was, it was!

"Sit down!" commanded grandma, fiercely, but the tragedy was too great.

"My egg! my lovely egg!" screamed Helen. "He sat on it! He's—he's spoiled it!"

Easter in the Tyrol.

Children living in this province of Austria follow bands of musicians, who go through the streets and up the steep hillsides singing Easter carols and playing on guitars. The children carry lighted torches, and when a song is finished run up to the doors and knock on them. They open quickly and there stand the housemothers with lots of beautifully colored eggs for the young people.

Mrs. M. E. Fields and Mrs. R. W. Carpenter spent part of the past week at Ludlow, visiting Mrs. Fields daughter, Mrs. O. W. Acra.

Miss Sallie Herndon, a pretty and popular young lady of Ludlow, spent the past week here with her sister, Mrs. J. G. Tomlin, who has been sick.

Robert M. Ryland, private secretary to Judge John M. Lassing of the Court of Appeals, spent the past week here, returning to Frankfort this week.

Hon. E. E. Winn, of Warsaw, was here Tuesday in the interest of his race for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney in this district.

Miss Kathryn Bolington spent last Thursday in Cincinnati and was nicely entertained in the afternoon by Miss Mary Graham and Mrs. Hedger Tuelle at Ludlow.

Mrs. Margaret Gemmill spent the past week in Covington, guest of her sister, Mrs. T. F. Blackwell, and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Franks spent Sunday at Covington with them.

Jos. L. Hendrix, of Glencoe, spent Saturday here on business. Mr. Hendrix is the president of the bank of Glencoe, and is one of the public spirited citizens of that town.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Conner and daughters, Misses Sara and Rachel, and son Rueben, were delightfully entertained by Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Fields, of Kensington, Sunday.

Dr. B. K. Menefee is taking a post graduate course in eye and ear diseases under a specialist in Cincinnati, spending a part of a day there so as to not interfere with his general practice.

Mrs. Henry Coates, who recently moved from Dry Ridge to the Mrs. Anna Hind farm, which Mr. Coates purchased, has been quite ill since they moved to the farm near Richwood, but is now improving slowly.

The Farmers' Club held a very interesting meeting here last Saturday. Much good can be accomplished by these meetings and organization if all of the farmers would take an interest and attend the meetings.

J. C. B. Conrad, of Dry Ridge, spent last Saturday here attending the meeting of the stockholders of the Equitable Bank. Mr. Conrad is one of the best citizens of Grant county and is a most pleasant gentleman to meet.

George Fornash is very ill and his recovery is doubtful. The Walton Thespian Club has arranged to give an entertainment at the Walton Opera House, Saturday evening, April 17th, the proceeds to be given to Mr. Fornash. A good program will be presented and as the admission will only be 25 cents. Everybody should patronize the show.

Miss Wilella Hance, who taught the public school at Hamilton for the current term of six months, completed her work the last week and has returned home here. Miss Hance is said to have given the patrons of the district a splendid school, and she was well liked by both patrons and children.

Last Friday was Arbor Day and the Walton Graded School had special exercises for the occasion, a most entertaining program being rendered, at the conclusion of which 18 trees were planted in the school yard by the pupils who christened each tree with the name of some man who had achieved distinction in public life.

Mrs. B. W. Records, of Sparta, came up last week to attend the bedside of Mrs. Jane Johnson and daughter, Miss Hattie, who have been quite ill, but are now much better. Mr. Records came up Saturday night to see the sick folks, Mrs. Johnson being his mother. He is the cashier of the Sparta Deposit Bank and returned home Monday morning to resume his duties.

On Tuesday evening, March 30th, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Allen, of North Walton, delightfully entertained the young people of Walton and vicinity with a social in honor of Mrs. Allen's sister, Miss Roxanna Aylor, the charming and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Aylor, of Landing. The evening was enjoyably spent by all until a late hour, when delightful refreshments were served. There were about forty in attendance.

The members of Walton Lodge Knights of Pythias were most pleasantly entertained and instructed last Thursday evening by a visit from J. W. Carter of Lexington, Grand Keeper of Records and Seal, W. G. Dorman of Corinth, District Deputy of the 19th district, Geo. C. Carter, of Latonia, Grand Inner Guard, and Charles Miller, of West Covington, District Deputy of this the 13th district. The members were out in full force and enjoyed the excellent talks by the visiting brethren, and the membership here was much revived.

The fast train on the L. & N. Railroad, passing Walton shortly afternoon, met with an accident at the bridge between Walton and Verona by which a part of the train was derailed, but fortunately no one was injured. It is supposed the high rate of speed at which the train was running caused the tender to jump the track. Quite a number of the railroad ties were torn up, but otherwise the damage was light. A wrecking train was rushed to the scene to put the road in proper shape for travel, but it was night time before traffic could be resumed.

Hon. F. M. Griffith, of Vevay, Indiana, spent last Friday afternoon here visiting his friend of many years' standing, D. B. Wallace, of the Equitable Bank. Mr. Griffith served several terms in Congress from the Fourth District of Indiana, known as the Wm. Holman district, the district lying along the Ohio river, from Lawrenceburg to Madison. Mr. Griffith made a splendid Congressman, but he could make so much more money out of his practice of the law that he declined to stand for re-election. Mr. Griffith went from here to Crittenden to visit his sister, Mrs. Ed. Brown, and returned to his home at Vevay, Saturday.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company was held at the bank building last Saturday, 381 stockholders being present in person and by proxy. J. C. B. Conrad, of Dry Ridge, was made chairman of the meeting, and D. B. Wallace, secretary. The following eleven directors were elected for the ensuing year: Chas. L. Griffith, J. D. Doubman, A. B. Tompkins, B. B. Allphin, W. M. Hudson, R. B. Brown, John C. Miller, John L. Vest, D. B. Wallace, Dr. T. T. Metcalfe, A. M. Edwards, the latter being elected to fill the vacancy caused by O. S. Watts selling his stock, the other directors being re-elected. A full statement was made by the cashier, D. B. Wallace, showing the bank to be in excellent condition, and the report was heartily approved by the stockholders. The old officers were continued.

Tuesday afternoon of last week the handsome residence of John Ransler, near Richwood, was destroyed by fire. It was about 2:30 o'clock when the upper story of the building was discovered in flames and so rapid was the progress of the fire that nothing upstairs could be saved and only a part of the household effects down stairs. The fire originated from a defective flue. The neighbors responded quickly to the alarm but it was impossible to save the building. The house was a commodious and handsome structure, and was built about fifteen years ago at a cost of about $4,000. It was insured in the Boone County Company for $1,350, and the household effects for $350 in the same company. Mr. Ransler will rebuild before long and will occupy the old house on the hill until he gets the new house built. A tenant occupying this house, Gaines Robinson very kindly tendered the use of a part of his house to Mr. Ransler and family until they could get possession of their own house. It was a severe blow to Mr. Ransler, and the sympathy of many friends is tendered him. He desires to thank all for their assistance and words of sympathy in his misfortune.

Big Bargains in Paints.

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and that is the reason for the difference. You set milk the crock and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Doing a Banking Business has become essentially necessary in every sphere of business from the private individual to the capitalist. Every good farmer as a rule keeps an account with a bank, and it saves him many dollars, and gives him a better business standing with the public at large. No danger of money being destroyed by fire or lost by robbery when it is in a good bank. Your check given for an account is a positive receip, and a record of it is kept by the bank. The Equitable Bank and Trust Company, at Walton, Boone County, Ky., makes a study of all the public wants in the banking line, and transacts much of its business by mail. It pays interest on time deposits, and takes care of any sized account from a dollar up. Write us if you have anything in our line and we will interest you more than you can imagine.

James Brown and wife, of Idlewild, Alfred Ogden and wife, of Rileys Ridge and Charles Utzinger and family of Weneeda, spent Sunday with Ernest Brown and wife.

Lonnie Price, of Erlanger, brother of Carl Price, of Oak Knoll, was down on business twice during last week. Mr. Price is an intelligent and pleasant conversationalist.

The Ashbytes are puzzled to know how we get the news from here, especially T. C. Masters. We have an educated and trained pollparrot that shadows the place and reports.

Mrs. Chester Davis, of Ludlow; Miss Lizzie Stephens, of Bullittsville and Mrs. Lizzie Gaines of Idlewild, spent Wednesday with Mrs. B. R. Gaines and sisters, Miss Ida Berkshire and Mrs. Ellen Terrill.

T. C. Masters, of Ashby, has quite a nice peach orchard and is building a wire fence around it, using all barbed wire. When asked why he was using all barbed wire he said, "I intend to see what kind of clothes my neighbors wear."

Jamie Clore and wife, of Rushville, Indiana, arrived at Bullittsburg last Saturday and visited his parents, Fl... Clore and wife until Tuesday, when they went to Delhi, Ohio, to visit his wife's parents until the following Saturday, when they will return home.

William Helms and wife, of Walnut Hills, Ohio, and sister Ollie, of Ludlow, were Sunday guests of Yancey Clore, of or near Bullittsville. They came down in an auto, splitting the pike wide open. Miss Lizzie Houston was also a guest at Mr. Clore's and on their return got a ride home.

Otto Rector, of Camp Foster, on Ashby, has just completed grubbing 4 acres of ground on which tobacco will be grown this season. Mr. Rector thinks he has saved a... $15 by grubbing it himself. His father, W. D. Rector, will put out 7 acres on his son Ott's farm, which they have engaged from the ground up.

Mail carrier McGuire made last Friday morning's trip to Bullittsville with the mail and, of course, went on his bike, then went to Lawrenceburg, cut a few didos around town to show his skill as an expert bike rider; then went to Aurora and back; then home and made his evening's trip with the mail, then went to the dance at Petersburg. That was riding some, wasn't it??

A large congregation was out to hear Rev. Brooks, Sunday at Bullittsburg. While on his way to fill his appointment at Petersburg, he stopped and thanked us for advertising his meetings. In size Bro. Brooks is a small man, but he preaches great big sermons; nothing small about them. We were given a cordial invitation to attend some of his meetings which we would be glad to do if we could.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hall, of Gaines' Heights, entertained the following guests last Sunday: Mrs. Ruth Fogle and children; Miss Lizzie Hewitt; John Feeley and wife, of Weneeda; Farmer Jones and wife, of Pushburg; Mrs. Katie Kelly and Mike Corcoran, of Bullittsville; Mrs. Jennie Hewitt and son Leonard, and Miss Goldie McCool, of Woolper Heights. An up-to date dinner and a pleasant time was had. About 4 o'clock the guests departed, singing the praises of host and hostess to the tune of Old Dan Tucker, Farmer Jones leading.

Subscription papers are out to raise money to build a turnpike from Rabbit Hash to Gunpowder—a road which is very badly needed.

They do say since Harry Acra has moved to J. P. Ryle's place on the river, that the river has been rough every day since—wind waves.

Sorry to hear of the death of Ollie McCarty, of Belleview. He was a promising young man and our sympathy goes out to his parents in their sad bereavement.

Robt. Rouse and wife, of Big Bone, were in town last Friday. They informed us that the "Major" had invented a flying machine, and we promised not to tell.

From the broad smile and a pump handle shake that our friend John Jones, of Hamilton, gave us last week, leads us to believe that he will be aspiring for some office before long.

Ben Stephens and wife, Bob Wilson and wife, Joe Walton and wife, Colon Kelly and wife, Ernest Stephens and wife R. H. Stephens and wife. Now we have their names in the paper.

Lost, strayed or stolen, in trouble or happy. What has become of the Waterloo correspondent? We all miss him. "Verily thou holdst a sluggish pen" would be the exclamation of a quaker and we are tempted to use the same language, if he does not show up.

Since Rising Sun voted dry several in this place carry mighty long faces. We don't know whether it is because they feel sorry for some of their ... or it hurts them. Among those we notice are C. G. Riddell, Ben Wilson, J. H. Walton and J. J. Stephens. But we think the ... named above had already reformed.

Farmers are farther along with their spring work than we ever knew them to be at this time of the year. Potatoes all planted, oats sown and most all the corn ground broken. Indications point to a large acreage of tobacco being planted. What little wheat was sown last fall looks well. Meadows are rather backward and the long drought last summer has hurt them considerably.

Verily the minds of some people contain a great many fanatic notions. Last fall while the contractors were building our turnpike they kindly asked people to travel the lower road so they would not interfere with their work. Their excuse for not going the other way was the lower road was so rough that a goat could not travel it. But since the directors have put up a toll-gate at the cross roads these same persons travel the other road for the sole purpose of saving 2 or 3 cents.

Mrs Martena Craig, widow of the late G. B. Craig, died at her home in East Bend, last Monday, April 5th, of cancer. Her funeral was preached by Rev. Fletcher, of Rising Sun, at the Methodist church last Tuesday to a large concourse of relatives and friends. Martena Bradford was born in Switzerland county, Indiana, November 5th, 1846. She united with the Methodist church at an early age. She was the mother of two children, only one Frank, surviving. She was a kind and affectionate mother, a good and generous neighbor, a woman who bore all of her suffering in silence. All that we can say in consolation for the bereaved son is that while the loss of a dear mother will be deeply felt, she is beyond all suffering and is at rest, sweet rest.

Through the persistent efforts of a few ladies and the generous help of many friends, we have succeeded in buying little Irene Carpenter an invalid chair. Although she can scarcely walk, yet she is so bright and cheerful, and so thankful for every kindness shown her, and now thanks be to God and her many good friends, in that she will have been enabled to go to school and Sunday school and get out in the sunshine. When Jesus was on earth He went about doing good, curing the cripples and healing the sick, and if we now propose to be his followers, we will, as far as we can, endeavor to walk in his steps.

Would you know earth's greatest happiness
Make some other heart rejoice;
Give a pleasant smile, speak a kindly word;
Lend a hand to help another.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY.

Terrific Waste of Natural Gas.

Natural gas sufficient to light the streets and homes, heat the buildings and turn the factory wheels of every enterprise in Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans is going to waste in the Caddo gas and oil fields near Shreveport, La., at the rate of 100,000,000 cubic feet a day. Gas is rushing from the bowels of the earth through two wild wells and over fifty gas and oil wells left uncapped. The crater of one wild well covers over two acres. The attention of President Roosevelt has been attracted to conditions and by his order all public lands lying in Caddo and Bossier parishes have been withdrawn from entry until the government may take what steps are deemed necessary to stop the terrific waste and preserve what is conceded to be the greatest gas field in the western hemisphere. In the meantime, says the Technical World Magazine, the city of Shreveport is thronged with oil investors from every section of the country, rival claims have been filed on government lands near the oil wells, the price of real estate has reached heretofore unheard of figures, men who a few months ago held nothing but a few scant acres of cut-over pine lands now count their wealth by the thousands, and armed guards stand watch over ground which is claimed under various acts and entries applicable to the securing of public lands. This territory is underlaid with two strata of gas sand, averaging from 40 to 140 feet in width, the first 800 to 900 feet beneath the surface and the second lying between 1,800 and 2,200 feet. The gas sands show their greatest width at Morningsport, which lies in the more southern portion of the field.

Do You Agree with Him?

President Taft, in an address delivered in Carnegie hall April 1, 1908, said: "In the progress of civilization you cannot overestimate the immense importance of Christian missions. If in China to-day you try to find out what the conditions are in the interior, you consult in Peking the gentlemen you are supposed to know, and where do you go? You go at once to the missionaries. . . . Those men who are doing a grand good work. I don't mean to say that there are not exceptions among them, that sometimes they don't make mistakes, and sometimes they don't meddle in something which it would be better for them from a political standpoint to keep out of, but I mean as a whole, those 3,000 missionaries in China and those thousands in other countries, worthily represent the best Christian spirit of this country and worthily are doing the work that you have sent them out to do."

Apparently South America, which is rich in material possibilities if not in ready cash, finds little difficulty in getting capital with which to prosecute promising enterprises. The latest proof of this is the arrangement with foreign financiers for constructing a line that will be an important link in the Longitudinal railroad, which when completed will traverse practically the entire length of Chile, a distance of 3,000 miles or more. The Longitudinal road will be a sort of backbone with numerous side connections and must have an important effect in developing the interior of the country. Moreover, and of still more consequence in an international sense, the line will be a great addition to the "three Americas" system which is certain to be completed at no distant day.

Gen. Evans of Georgia wants the dull thud and the seared flesh removed from our literature. He would have the hangman's necktie and the electric rocking chair sent to the museum along with other relics of barbarous ages. He would have the convicted one lie down to quiet slumbers and go gently over by the chloroform route. All our tendencies are in that direction, although it may take some time to effect the reform. It will be observed that no one advocates that the criminal, however execrable, be talked to death.

"You can find the microbe of tetanus on every workman's hand," was the startling statement made by a physician in a hospital the other day. It is lurking there for a chance to get in its full work with some wound or prick made by a nail or tool. Boys might as well remember this next Fourth of July. It won't harm them to realize that this microbe of tetanus is not monopolized by workmen by any manner of means.

PASS TARIFF BILL

HOUSE ADOPTS PAYNE MEASURE BY VOTE OF 217 TO 161.

IGNORE PROTESTS OF WOMEN

Increases Duty on Gloves and Stockings—Coffee, Tea, Oil and Hides Placed on Free List—Keep Tariff on Lumber.

Washington.—By a vote of 217 to 161 the Payne tariff bill, which has been under consideration for three weeks, was passed Friday night by the house.

One Republican, Austin of Tennessee, voted against the measure, and four Democrats, all from Louisiana, Messrs. Broussard, Estopinal, Pujo and Wickliffe, voted for it. An attempt by Champ Clark, the minority leader, to recommit the bill with instructions signally failed.

Hides, hosiery and gloves were left as reported by the committee, hides remaining free and an increased duty being presented for gloves and stockings.

One of the principal changes effected in the Payne bill since its introduction was the placing of petroleum on the free list. This involved a more seriously contested fight than any of the other amendments. Speaker Cannon, during the debate Wednesday on the amendment to reduce the duty, took the floor in defense of the higher rate of duty. Although an amendment to place oil on the free list was lost Thursday, a similar amendment offered by Chairman Payne yesterday was carried.

Among the other important amendments that have been made since the bill came from committee were those striking out the provision for a duty on tea and the countervailing duty proviso on coffee. The elimination of the maximum duty of 20 per cent. on coffee, contained in the maximum and minimum section of the bill, was also significant.

To the free list were added evergreen seedlings, cloves and nut oil, which is used in making varnish. The patent law provision, intended to retaliate for the new British patent law, was stricken out on account of an international convention. The so-called "joker" in the cotton cloth schedule which it was claimed would increase the duty of the Dingley bill several hundred per cent. was corrected, the proviso for the method of counting threads in the cloth being made the same as in the present law.

The section of restricting the contents of packages of tobacco was amended to conform with the present law in order that union labels may not be excluded from such packages. The countervailing duty clause on lumber was stricken out, but a strong effort to place lumber on the free list did not succeed.

The duties on barley, barley malt, charcoal iron, pineapples in crates, saccharine, medicated cotton and cotton collars and cuffs, as originally in the bill, were increased. To retaliate against Turkey, which country prohibits the importation of American filler tobacco, a proviso was included in the tobacco schedule increasing the duty on filler tabocco from any country which prohibits the importation of the American tobacco.

$10,000 BILL IN BOX.

Pennsylvania Church Thinks Mistake Was Made and Offers to Return the Money.

Washington.—The insertion of an advertisement in a local paper Thursday that there had been found in the collection plate of the Roscoe Methodist Episcopal church, near here, after the service last Sunday night a $10,000 bill, developed the fact that the church officers think the donor made a mistake.

The yearly collections of the church do not average much more than this amount, and the officials, in the advertisement, state that they will return the money to the owner if he wants it back and can prove he inadvertently dropped it into the plate.

Walter Reeves Dies Suddenly.

Streator, Ill. — Walter Reeves, one of La Salle county's foremost citizens, and a member of the Republican state central committee, died of heart failure Friday night. Mr. Reeves was 60 years old and a native of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. He moved to Illinois with his parents in his boyhood and located at Odell, Livingston county.

F. Marion Crawford Dead.

Sorrento, Italy. — F. Marion Crawford, the novelist, died on Friday afternoon. Although he was known as an American writer, Mr. Crawford was born in Bangi di Lucca, Italy August 2, 1854. He was the son of Thomas Crawford, an American sculptor, who was studying in Italy.

Jeffries Refuses to Fight.

New York.—Jim Jeffries Friday declined to accept Hugh McIntosh's offer of $50,000 purse to fight with Jack Johnson, in Australia. Jeffries reiterated that he was not as yet convinced that he could get in proper shape.

"King of Usurers" Flees.

Vienna.—Fritz Reicher, "king of the usurers," of Vienna, has bolted with an immense sum of money, leaving fraudulent debts amounting to $2,000,000. He is supposed to have gone to America.

THE PRESIDENTIAL COW.

AURORA MANIAC KILLS TWO

SLAYS WOMAN, SHOOTS TWO AND COMMITS SUICIDE.

Starts Out with Two Revolvers, Three Bombs and Shotgun, to Murder Twenty for Fancied Insults.

Aurora, Ill.—Armed with two pistols, a shotgun and fastening three bombs to his body with a harness, John Anderson, whose mind has been afflicted, became suddenly violent Thursday, and started out to avenge fancied wrongs. When he had finished he had killed one woman, wounded her husband, shot another woman and ended his own life. Scores of persons were panic stricken.

The dead:

Mrs. John McVicker, shot through heart.

John Anderson, committed suicide by blowing off head with shotgun.

The injured:

Mrs. John Belford, flesh wound and broken arm from pistol bullets.

John McVicker, scalp grazed by bullet.

Anderson's violent manner and his insane armament of bombs and revolvers terrorized the entire square to which he had announced his intention of laying waste. That his already weakened mind had completely given way was obvious. Doors were locked and barred and women and children fled to cellars and attics as soon as they saw the maniac walking along the street.

His first stop was at the home of Mrs. John McVicker, probably his oldest and best friend. Mrs. McVicker and her husband had repeatedly befriended Anderson, who was a widower. They had received him at their home, and had nursed him when ill.

With a pistol in each hand Anderson began firing. The first bullet grazed Mr. McVicker's scalp. Mrs. McVicker ran toward the kitchen where her four children were playing, in order to protect them. She fell dead across the threshold with a bullet through her heart.

Apparently satisfied, Anderson left the place and proceeded to the home of John Belford, a few doors distant. Anderson's resentment was centered in Belford, whom he accused, with what neighbors state was without a shadow of reason, with circulating slanderous stories about him. Mrs. Belford and her mother, Mrs. Amanda Minton, 80 years old and blind, were alone in the house.

Anderson opened fire with his pistol on Mrs. Belford. One bullet inflicted a flesh wound and another shattered her arm and she fell to the floor.

Then he shot himself and fell on a couch across the form of the blind woman, which kept the bombs from exploding.

STUDENTS ON A STRIKE.

Minnesota University Pupils Demand a Full Week's Vacation Which Had Been Promised.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Two hundred engineering students at the state university have gone on strike for a week's extra vacation. The strike became effective Tuesday afternoon.

The students say last year a full week's extra vacation was requested of the faculty, but the students were informed that while the request could not be granted for 1908, arrangements would be made for a full week this year.

The students were appeased for the time being, but when they learned last week that only two days' absence from recitation were to be given them, they decided it was time to declare themselves.

Elephant Kills Keeper.

Des Moines, Ia.—"Tom," an elephant in the winter quarters of the "Yankee" Robinson circus here Thursday evening suddenly ran amuck and seizing his keeper, Charles Bellew, buried him high into the air and then trampled him to death. The infuriated beast then ran through the animal park, uprooted small trees, destroyed three circus wagons, and demolished a bridge across a lagoon. Forty bullets were fired into the beast before it was subdued. Bellew was 44 years old and single.

EIGHT MEET DEATH IN STORM.

Michigan and Ohio Swept by Fierce Winds—Bet of Five Dollars Costs Three Lives.

Detroit, Mich.—This and other cities and towns in Michigan were swept by a windstorm Tuesday night and Wednesday which caused at least eight deaths.

Anthony Ksup, a saloonkeeper; Joseph Kadich, a barber, and Adam Felin, all of Wyandotte, attempted to cross the Detroit river in a rowboat from Wyandotte to Canada in a 50-mile gale, to settle a five-dollars wager, and all three were drowned when their boat capsized.

At Jennings, in Missaukee county, three young men named Bernard Carlson, Charles Jacobson and John Torrey, were killed by being caught under a wall that was blown down by the wind at the Mitchell Brothers' mill.

Eight-year-old Benjamin Hellmes was killed by lightning near Ionia and May Miller was killed at Brighton when he was struck by a roof that had been blown off by the wind.

The damage to roofs, chimneys, plate glass, etc., probably will reach $50,000 in Detroit and Michigan. The wind velocity reached 70 miles an hour early Wednesday.

The copper country is practically isolated from the outside world as the result of a blizzard which swept down on the district Tuesday.

Toledo, O.—Northwestern Ohio experienced one of the most severe windstorms in its history. Scores of persons were injured, many of them seriously, and the property damage is large. In Toledo losses are estimated at $25,000.

FORCE CASTRO TO STOP.

Former Venezuelan Dictator Not Permitted to Continue His Voyage and Leaves Ship.

Fort de France, Martinque.—Cipriano Castro, in a rage against the British government and the state department at Washington, left the steamer Guadeloupe at this port Wednesday and has taken up quarters on shore.

Finding all ports in the West Indies except Fort de France barred against him, the present course was the only one left open to the former Venezuelan dictator.

Senor Castro's wife continued on board the Guadeloupe, which left at noon for Port of Spain and Venezuelan points. She was followed out of the harbor by the United States cruiser Montana, which came into port in the morning.

The decision of the British government, acting on a request from the state department at Washington not to let him land at Trinidad, was unofficially communicated to Castro a second time Tuesday morning.

SLAY MURDEROUS FATHER.

Three Boys Kill Sire After He Attacks Their Mother and Leaves Her Unconscious.

San Bernardino, Cal. — Harry Irvington, a miner, arrived and brought news of a tragedy at Delamar, Nev., in which three boys killed their father in defending themselves after he had attacked their mother. According to Irvington, William Thomas, a well known miner at Delamar, attempted to kill his wife by beating and kicking her to death. Leaving her unconscious he went to a shed near by where his three sons were chopping wood. Thomas, who had armed himself with a rope, declared that he had come to hang them all. He had placed the noose about the younger boy's neck and was preparing to haul him from the ground when his other sons interfered. With axes they rushed upon their father and killed him.

GERMAN PATRIOTS HISS DU MAURIER'S PLAY

"An Englishman's Home," Depicting British Valor, Jeered At—Best Class of Berlin Society in Audience.

Berlin, April 12.—Germany Sunday night retorted angrily, through the medium of the theater, to England's policy of pin pricks, pursued through press and parliament for the past six months. Maj. DuMaurier, by his play, "An Englishman's Home," has endeavored to arouse England to a sense of her military weakness by showing in the theater what would happen when Germany invaded England.

DuMaurier's play was produced at the Neues theater Sunday night, and it produced the greatest racket Berlin has ever witnessed at a theatrical performance. The play was hissed, howled and jeered at from start to finish. The noise became a tumult in the second act, when the English volunteers entered, and from then until the curtain went down on the last act the noise was so great that the actors and actresses could not be heard.

Sunday night's demonstration was most significant because the audience was made up of the best classes of Berlin society, including several officials of the imperial court. The official news agencies are busy Sunday night circulating the impression that the hostile demonstration had no anti-English bearing. The fact, however, remains that this was the first opportunity a German audience had to express its vehement disapprobation of the present hostility of the English press and parliament to everything German.

The reception of Sunday night's performance may be remembered hereafter as Germany's first reply to England's belief that Germany's sole present ambition, military, naval and industrial, is the invasion of England with or without a casus belli.

NEGRO ASSAULTER LYNCHED.

Taken From Sheriff and Carried To Edge of City and Strung Up To a Tree.

Arcadia, Fla., April 12.—John Smith, a negro, who joined the ranks of white woman assaulters Saturday, paid the penalty Sunday when a mob took him from the sheriff and hung him to a tree. But for the arrival of two white men who heard her screams, Miss Mary S. Ewing would have been his victim.

Miss Ewing, who had been to the city on a shopping tour, was returning to her home, four miles from the city, when the negro sprang into the buggy, and dragged her into the bushes. The young woman begged and fought with the negro to let her go, offering him $100 in cash if he would accompany her home.

Miss Ewing's screams attracted Will Knowles and his brother and they rushed to her assistance. The negro beat a hasty retreat. After taking Miss Ewing to her home, the men hurried to this city, spread the news and a posse was soon on the black's trail. The negro was found at a turpentine camp. Miss Ewing positively identified him. Sheriff Freeman and his deputies succeeded in placing Smith in jail, but being afraid of an attack, attempted to spirit him out of Arcadia. They were met by an automobile party and forced to give up the prisoner. The negro was carried to the edge of the city and strung up to a tree, where his body was left hanging.

Six Persons Killed in Fire.

Lenox, Mass., April 12.—Six persons lost their lives in an early morning fire Sunday that caused a property loss of more than a quarter of a million dollars in the business section of the city. The blaze was accompanied by the explosion of 75 pounds of dynamite in the hardware store of James Clifford & Sons. It was this which caused the loss of life. One body was blown into the street. The others were cremated in the building.

Mt. Etna in Eruption.

Rome, April 12.—Mt. Etna broke out in eruption Sunday morning and is now belching clouds of smoke and cinders. The Sicilians are greatly alarmed, fearing that the eruption presages another earthquake, like that which destroyed Messina. The inhabitants of Catania, Acireale, and the country around the base of the volcano are preparing to leave their homes.

Wind Blew Train From Track.

Higginsville, Mo., April 12.—Passenger Train No. 14, east-bound on the Chicago & Alton, was derailed near Mayview, six miles west of the city, Sunday. The accident was caused by the terrific windstorm raging at the time, which literally lifted the coaches off the track and rolled them down an embankment. The passengers were terribly shaken up, but miraculously no one was seriously injured.

Train Derailed.

Asheville, N. C., April 12.—Four cars of Pasenger Train No. 22, on the Southern railway, were derailed near Old Fort, N. C., just east of here Sunday. Six passengers and two trainmen were slightly injured.

Severe Earthquake in Sweden.

Copenhagen, April 12.—A violent earthquake occurred Saturday morning near Sundsvoll, Sweden. It lasted nearly a minute, and, according to reports, did considerable damage.

HARDSHIPS OF ARMY LIFE.

The experience of David W. Martin, a retired merchant of Bolivar, Mo., is just like thousands of others. Mr. Martin says: "I think I have had kidney disease ever since the war. During an engagement my horse fell on me, straining my back and injuring the kidneys. I have been told I had a floating kidney. I had intense pain in the back, headaches and dizzy spells, and the action of the bladder very irregular. About three years ago I tried Doan's Kidney Pills and inside of a comparatively short time was entirely rid of kidney trouble."

Wifey's Addition to List of Her Household Duties Of Course Was Not Personal.

After dinner the other evening Mr. and Mrs. Brown started to speak of their respective duties, and soon an argument as to whether the husband or the wife had the hardest work to perform was in full swing. First Brown warbled, and then wifey sang.

"A wife," argued the good lady, "has to cook, wash dishes, clothe the kids, scrub the floors, sweep the house, make the beds, build the fires, carry up coal, nail slats on the back fence, dig—"

"Is that all?" sarcastically interrupted Mr. Brown.

"No," was the prompt rejoinder of Mrs. Brown. "In addition to those duties every wife has to keep her husband from making a fool of himself!"

TOTAL LOSS OF HAIR

Seemed Imminent—Scalp Was Very Scaly and Hair Came Out by Handfuls—Scalp Now Clear and

New Hair Grown by Cuticura.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my coat by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Penn., May 7 and 21, 1908."

GENERAL BOOTH IS 80 YEARS OLD

SALVATION ARMY CELEBRATES THE ANNIVERSARY.

ALL LANDS DO HIM HONOR

Day Is Marked in America by Launching of His Plan for a University of Humanity.

New York.—With great mass meetings in every city and rejoicing wherever its soldiers are found, the Salvation Army on Saturday celebrated the eightieth birthday of its founder and commander-in-chief, Gen. William Booth. All the Christian world participated in the occasion, for everywhere the venerable philanthropist is honored for his deeds for unfortunate humanity.

Gen. Booth himself presided over several monster mass meetings in London. His advanced age and the fact that he was operated on recently for cataract did not deter him from taking part in the celebrations held by his devoted soldiers.

University of Humanity Launched.

In America the day was marked especially by the launching of another of Gen. Booth's original schemes for social reform in the United States. At every post of the army was announced the beginning of work to found a University of Humanity, a great institute for the training of workers in social service. The university will be divided between New York and Chicago, and it is expected to begin with a fund of $1,000,000. The gathering of this fund is the work that the army now enters upon in commemoration of its famous leader's completion of his eightieth year.

As a much-needed stone in the great organizational structure that William Booth has been building during the past 47 years, this idea of a school for the systematic training of his workers has been in his mind for several years. On his last visit to the United States the general made his first tentative announcement of the plan. Since then he has worked out many of the details and he has just consented to the beginning of preliminary work in this country where the need for trained workers has been especially great.

Growth of Great System.

It is perhaps not generally realized that the whole intricate modern machinery of civilization for the uplifting of the submerged tenth, the vast system of charities now so essential a part of modern life, is to a very large extent an outgrowth of the Booth idea. He was the first to see that the unfortunate could be he reached by those who had suffered as they had, and that they must be reached by practical worldly help before they could be prepared to begin the cleaner life. It was the Salvation Army which first made a practical working success of this now familiar principle of so-called missionary work.

This whole plan of campaign for raising the fallen began on a very simple scale in the poverty-stricken and crime-infested East end of London and under the impetus of William Booth's singular force of mind and personality and the momentum that it has gathered with almost miraculous rapidity it has developed into a truly astonishing organization.

Some of the departments of its work are: Prison-gate and Rescue, inebriates' homes, Boys' and Girls' homes, Farm colonies, Emigration, Naval and Military homes, Maternity homes, nursing, Samaritan brigades, hospital and benevolent visitation, police court work and Indian school training.

No other religious organization in the world's history has branched out into so many departments of philanthropic effort and absorbed them as part of its religious duties.

Need of Trained Workers.

The scheme for a University of Humanity grew naturally out of the development of the 20 other departments. With a field as wide as the world itself the work of the Salvation Army is only limited by the number of workers that can be secured and its effectiveness by the understanding and earnestness of these workers. As uplift work has grown from local efforts to help a few into a great inclusive movement which must miss none, the problems of organization have grown greater. Charity has become a science and its application an art requiring the highest development of personal qualities of insight and altruism. There is thus pressing need for workers of quite exceptional qualification. These qualifications must first of all be inherent and must then be developed by experience and special training.

This is the new work planned by Gen. Booth. Those women, for instance, who are to go among the slums of the big cities must not only have the desire to help but must know how real helpfulness can best be secured. They must understand by a study of practical sociology something of the social forces that create this poverty and crime and wretchedness. They must understand the danger of the unwise charity that merely increases dependence and understand the value of better living conditions in raising the moral courage of those to whom fate has been unkind. They must be able not only to correct home conditions themselves but to impart their knowledge and to inspire with a desire for betterment.

Value of the Organization.

This will be but a small part of the university's training in social service as planned by the patriarchal evangelist, but it serves to show of what value such an organization will be.

Of the general's plan for the university he himself said recently: "I want to train men and women to deal with misfortune. I want them instructed to combat with the weaknesses and sins of the drunkard, the criminal, the pauper and the would-be suicide."

At 80 years of age the head of the Salvation Army, after more than half a century of almost unceasing activity, is as vigorous and untiring as at any time in his career. The inexhaustible vitality and intellectual and physical activity of this social reformer, philanthropist, preacher, author and traveler are marvelous. At fourscore he is traveling many thousands of miles over the world every year, controlling the destinies of his more than 7,000 corps of Salvation soldiery with their 18,000 commissioned officers, distributed among every civilized country, preaching constantly to vast audiences and doing an amount of literary work that would be a factor to many a professional author with no other occupation.

William Booth was born on April 10, 1829, in Nottingham, England, and was trained for the Methodist ministry, which he entered and became one of the strongest evangelistic forces in that church. He grew dissatisfied, however, at reaching only those with some religious training and conviction. He felt that there were thousands whose need was far greater and he gravitated to the East end of London where wretchedness of all kinds was the rule.

In a disused burial ground on Mile End road he pitched an old tent and the first Salvationist meeting was held in that tent in 1861. The fiery eloquence of the earnest young preacher caught the attention of a crowd of poor Whitechapelers and before that first meeting was over he had made several conversions, a performance that he has been repeating throughout the world for 47 years.

How He Started the Army.

This first meeting resulted in the formation of the Christian mission, from which it was the evangelist's custom to send his converts to the existing churches of the locality, but finding that they were not welcomed and were in danger of slipping back from sheer want of comradeship and oversight, he set about forming societies of the converted. These he found to be a potent agency for bringing in more, as the heedless Easender could be impressed by the words of a former "pal" when he would not listen to a minister. So was created the central idea of the Salvation Army.

The need of organization became apparent, but several methods were tried with little success before Gen. Booth hit upon the military idea and named his organization the Salvation Army. From that time on the movement grew amazingly and it has continued to grow without ceasing to this day.

Spread Over the World.

The movement began spreading to other countries of the world in 1881 when it first reached the United States through the influence of a silkweaver who had emigrated from Coventry, England, bringing with him the Salvation Army idea and a strong desire to continue in the work. It reached Australia in the same year through a milk dealer from Stepney, and soon afterwards the first Canadian corps was organized in a similar fashion.

Five years later, in 1886, the general made the first of many visits to the American branches of the army and he has seen them grow from a few small corps into a veritable army of tremendous influence and unsurpassed efficiency. His first great world-tour was made in 1891, when he visited South Africa, Australia and India. Since then he has visited the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and India four times, South Africa twice and Japan and the Holy Land each once.

During all these travels the actual executive responsibility for the government of the army has never been lifted from his shoulders. Even on shipboard he is an indefatigable worker, planning and writing through the days.

Gen. Booth Honored.

One of the most remarkable of the many tributes paid to the general by the great of the world was that of the mikado of Japan during the visit to that country. The mikado personally received the general with great warmth and he was accorded remarkable ovations in Yokohama, Tokyo, Sendai and Kyoto, a circumstance of strange import when it is realized that Japan is not a Christian country.

Another interesting distinction given Gen. Booth was the conferring on him of the degree of doctor of civil law by Oxford university. The significance of this honor will be better understood when it is stated those who received university honors with him at the time were Prince Arthur of Connaught, the prime minister of England, the lord chancellor, the speaker, Sir E. Grey, the archbishop of Armagh, Sir Evelyn Wood, the American ambassador, Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling.

As a writer Gen. Booth is remarkable, both as a stylist, as a thinker and as a producer. He has written in all 21 volumes, besides innumerable articles for the army publications. His best-known book is "In Darkest England and the Way Out," in which he outlined his scheme for social reform by means of colonization. "The Training of Children," "Love, Marriage and the Home," and his books on reform are among the others of the general's best-known literary productions.

His Greatness in Time of Trial.

The greatness of this born leader of men shone with especial brilliancy during that most trying period in the history of the movement, when disagreements caused a split in the Army's American forces and they divided, one part becoming the Volunteers of America with the general's own son, Ballington Booth, at its head. Through this serious break, which threatened the progress of the work for a time, the patriarch maintained such a simple and dignified attitude of acceptance as to strengthen greatly his position before the world.

Of "those who have left him" the general wrote: "It was to be expected that in such work as ours, demanding as it does arduous toil and constant self-denial and often real hardships of one kind or another, some should prove unworthy, some should grow weary and others should faint by the way. It could not be otherwise for we are engaged in real warfare and who ever heard of war without wounds or losses? But even of those who do thus step aside from the position of officers a large proportion remain with us engaged in some voluntary effort in our ranks."

Writes of His Creed.

Of his creed the general has written very beautifully. He says:

"The simplicity of our creed has been, as I believe it will remain, one of the principal helps to our unity. We stand for the old truths. The faith which can be interpreted in terms of duty, of unselfishness, of purity, of love to God and man, is the only faith we really care about. Whatever may be the case with the select minority, the consciousness of sin, the force of evil habit and the influence of passion, are all vivid realities with the great masses of the population. To them we bring the promise of deliverance by Jesus Christ."

CONDENSED FOR BUSY PEOPLE.

Negro Lynched in Trigg County for Attempting to Assault Girl, Who Positively Identified Him—Is Said to Have Confessed His Guilt.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—Booker Brame, the negro who attempted to assault Miss Ruth Gee, near Peedee, in Trigg county, when she and her sister, Miss Sallie May Gee, were gathering bushes with which to sweep the yard, was lynched. The heroic action of Miss Sallie May in striking at the negro with an ax forced him to loose his hold and the girls made their escape. Brame was captured near Herndon this county. He was taken to the Gee homestead, where the girls positively identified him. Here Brame is said to have confessed his guilt. Some time later a traveler on the main highway about two miles from Lafayette, this county, found the negro's body hanging from the limb of a dogwood tree Brame was 18 years of age and had lived in that section for several years.

PARRISH FOUND GUILTY

By Jury of Having Received a Deposit When He Knew Bank Was Insolvent.

Hawesville, Ky.—After 30 minutes' deliberation the jury in the Parrish case found the defendant, James H. Parrish, guilty as charged in the indictment, of having received a deposit in the Owensboro Savings Bank and Trust Co., of which he was president, after he knew the bank was in an insolvent condition. The jury fixed his punishment at five years' confinement in the Kentucky penitentiary. A motion for a new trial was overruled by Special Judge John S. Kelley. The cases of J. Otis Parrish and Isaac N. Parrish were continued until the July term of court.

GREEN COUNTY MUST PAY

$240,000 Bonds of Cumberland & Ohio Railroad.

Louisville, Ky.—Following the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati that Green county must pay $240,000 of bonds of the old Cumberland & Ohio railroad, owned by the heirs of Thos. Quinlan and others, it is expected here that steps will be taken to collect the judgment by mandamus. However, the collection of these bonds in Green county has so far proved futile on account of the practice of the county officers in resigning rather than attempting to collect the debt. Taxpayers refuse to pay the judgment because the railroad was never built as planned. It now runs from Lebanon to Greensburg.

Ministers Form Organization.

Lexington, Ky.—At a meeting here the ministers of the Christian denomination in Central Kentucky formed an organization with the object of mutual benefit and promoting the work in the ministry. Rev. Hugh MacLellan, of Richmond, was elected president, and Rev. C. E. Powell, of Lexington, secretary.

Purchases Valuable Property.

Louisville, Ky.—Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice, who wrote "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and "Lovey Mary," purchased valuable property in St. James court, Louisville's most fashionable residence section. The property is only a short distance from the "Cabbage Patch" section of Louisville, made famous by Mrs. Rice's book.

Elected Treasurer of Jefferson County.

Louisville, Ky.—For the 23d successive year Lawrence Waters was elected treasurer of Jefferson county. The members of the fiscal court had forgotten that the treasurer had to be elected. Just before adjournment their attention was called to the oversight and Waters was re-elected.

Big Tobacco Payments.

Frankfort, Ky.—Taking into account the $15,000 received by the Equity Warehouse Company for distribution among the growers of this county, there has been received and paid the sum of $300,000. There remains to be distributed when the tobacco on hand is delivered the sum of $120,000.

Death of Judge Moren.

London, Ky.—Judge W. T. Moren, of this city, one of the oldest and best known men in Laurel county, died at his home at the age of 87 years, after a long battle with pneumonia fever. Three sons survive.

Louisville, Ky.—Police Corporal G. Henry Stoepler was placed under arrest by Chief of Police Hanger on the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. It is charged that Stoepler not only got drunk and violated the law, but while intoxicated attended a democratic political rally.

Lexington, Ky.—Circuit Judge Watts Parker granted the board of education an order temporarily restraining May or John Skain from signing the recently adopted ordinance apportioning the expenses of the city for the year 1909.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Objects To the Fee.

The Kentucky Title Savings Bank and Trust Company, of Louisville, paid to the Secretary of State, under protest, a fee of $250 for a change of its corporate name from the Kentucky Savings Bank, by which it was known for many years. The institution maintains that it should not pay such a fee and reserves the right to seek its recovery in the courts.

Will Hear Complaints.

The state railroad commission has been called to meet here on April 20 for the purpose of hearing complaints filed against railroad companies in the matter of freight charges made. The complainants are the Ashland Leather Co. and the Keystone Mining Co., of Henderson.

Closer Watch Demanded.

Because of the lax system of accounting funds due the state inspector and Examiner Thatcher, in a report to Gov. Willson, recommends that there be established a uniform accounting system coupled with a law providing for more frequent inspections of public offices.

Tax Assessments Increased.

The state board of equalization increased assessments in the following counties: Christian, farming lands, 1 per cent; Caldwell, farming lands and town lots, 8 per cent each; Livingston, farming lands and town lots, 2 per cent each; Cumberland, farming lands, 5 and town lots 10 per cent.

Assessment Reduced by State Board.

The state board of assessment and valuation assessed the Kentucky Valley railroad at $122,870, or $8,000 per mile, and the Ashland Coal and Iron Co. railroad at $699,530, or $10,000 a mile. This is a slight reduction from the tentative assessment.

We are authorized to announce J. W. Oammack, of Owen county, as a candidate for Circuit Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial District, subject to the action of the Democratic primary election, Thursday, April 29th, 1909

We are authorized to announce M. D. Gray, of Grant county, as a candidate for Circuit Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial District, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, Thursday, April 29th, 1909.

Notice of Election.

For the purpose of selecting Democratic candidates for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney for the Fifteenth Judicial District of Kentucky, to be voted for at the November election, 1909, be it resolved:

1. That a primary election be held in all the five counties composing said District on Thursday, the 29th day of April, 1909, said primary to be conducted in all particulars as provided by the laws of this State.

2. All Democrats who supported the Democratic National ticket at the November election, 1908, or who, if they had voted, would have supported said ticket, and all young Democrats who will be voters at the November election, 1909, shall be permitted to vote in said primary.

3. For the purpose of defraying the expenses of said primary, the candidates for Circuit Judge shall pay in the aggregate $700.00; and candidates for Commonwealth's Attorney shall pay in the aggregate $600.00, said sums to be paid on or before April 14, 1909. Said sums to be paid to J. F. Butts.

4. J. F. Butts and R. B. Brown are hereby appointed a special committee to have ballots printed, distributed and the primary conducted as herein directed.

5. After said election this committee shall meet at Sparta, Ky., on May 3, 1909, for the purpose of declaring the nominees of said primary.

6. Should but one person announce his candidacy for either of said offices on or before April 14, 1909, then such candidate shall be declared the nominee for such office, but before being so declared the nominee, he shall first pay his said assessment.

7. It is ordered by this committee that no candidate in said primary shall, directly or indirectly, either in person or by or through another, corruptly use money, liquor or property for the purpose of securing the nomination in said primary; and should it be established to the satisfaction of this committee that any candidate has been guilty of a violation of this order, such candidate shall not be declared the nominee of said primary, but that the candidate receiving the highest number of said votes in said primary, who can establish to the satisfaction of this committee that he has not violated the said order, shall be declared the nominee of said primary.

8. The officers to hold said election shall be appointed by the Democratic County Committees of the several counties from a list furnished by the several candidates, and they shall be divided as nearly equal between said candidates as possible.

9. The fees allowed the officers of election shall be $1.50.

10. The manner in which the names of the several candidates shall appear on the ballots shall be determined by lot—at a time and place to be fixed by the Sub-Committee hereinbefore provided for.

11. The above primary election will be held at the usual voting places in the several counties composing said district on Thursday, April 29, 1909, between the hours of six o'clock a. m. and four o'clock p. m., standard time.

L. T. DOTY, Chairman.

C. W. Riley.

Charles William Riley, a successful farmer of Boone County, Ky., died in his 61st year on the 21st of February 1909 in his home on the Petersburg pike. He had a very severe illness several years ago which threatened his life, again and again he fought with death, and several times the Fell Destroyer was warded off, at last he seemed to relax his hold, and to the great joy of his friends the sufferer appeared to regain his health, partially, but this was only an illusion, the disease was strengthening its forces to make an attack in another form, he felt himself that it would come, and in the midsummer of 1908 he was stricken with paralysis, through the long summer days, through the waning autumn, and even into the stormy midwinter, the struggle lasted, and then, in a few short hours of pain and unconsciousness, the spirit of one of our best citizens was released from his suffering body. Mr. C. W. Riley was very popular with all classes of people; he was widely known as a good man, and therefore, generally beloved. From early childhood he seemed to have the finest intuition of right and wrong, his strong sense of right predominated in his nature, he cultivated it, even in his boyhood and in his manhood, he took it with him in all his relations in life. He provided well for his family and for others, yet he never seemed at all absorbed in business, and rarely spoke of money. He had one remarkable characteristic in these days, his heart was imbued with an intense sympathy for others, it went out to people—"he could rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with those that weep." He has left a faithful wife, and a family of interesting children; one son is a successful preacher of the Gospel, also one devoted brother, the only remaining member of a large and popular family. Mrs. Ida S. Riley, (formerly of Boone county, now living in Ludlow, Ky.,) these with many others are mourning for him today and we sincerely sympathize with all the bereaved in their great loss. Be it good as this man was, (living out the spirit of Religion, well, in the sight of men, that they dared not criticise;) he had a strong fight with Satan, who held him back for a long time, even in his sufferings, from confessing the Saviour, at last the Lord prevailed for him, and he made a profession of faith in the Redeemer; and now—that he has passed into the Spirit Land, we say, with rejoicing hearts, he was a Christian. MARY A. THOMPSON,
Burlington, Ky.

The Great Imported German Coach Stallion,
Plutarch 3183

Will make the season of 1909 at T. E. Randall's stable, one mile west of Idlewild, Boone County, Ky., on the Burlington and Petersburg Turnpike at $12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,
money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co. is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm. 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—it will cost you nothing.

H. L. 2:08. For full pedigree and other particulars see bills or address B. B. Hume at Burlington, Ky.

A premium of $10 will be given the best colt, regardless of sex, of Grand Chief's 1909 get, to be shown at Burlington, the first Monday in Sept. 1910.

BURLINGTON & WATERLOO HORSE CO.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20 00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and feeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

THE FINE TROTTING STALLION
BARON WILSON,

Will make the season of 1909 at my stable one-half mile south of Hebron, Ky., at $10 to insure a colt to stand up and suck, money due when colt is foaled. Sould a mare be parted with after being bred to him the insurance money becomes due.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

BARON WILSON is a dark bay, fine style and form, and is the sire of Kentucky Star 2:04 and another in 20:9.

BARON WILSON was sired by Baron Wilkes 2:18; first dam, Pattie Beatty by Hero of Thorndale; 2d dam, Lucy McDonald by Belmont; 3d dam, Perl dam of Gen. Hancock by Edwin Forrest; 4th dam, Waterwitch by Pilot, jr., 5th dam by Kinsade's St. Lawrence.

Care will be taken to prevent accidents, but I will not be responsible should any occur. M. L. AYLOR.

In the Stud Season of 1909. The highly bred stallion,

Robert Willis, 47254.

Robert Willis is a Chestnut Sorrel of show horse conformation, fine style and action, stands 16¼ hands high, weighs 1200 pounds, foaled 1905, is absolutely sound and a sure foal getter. He will make the season of 1909 at Clover Leaf Stock Farm, at $10.00 to insure, money due when colt is foaled or mare parted with.

Due care taken to prevent accidents, but will not be responsible should any occur. For further particulars and tabulated pedigree call on or address

Local News.

Dirt roads are a little rough but solid.

Spring housecleaning is at hand again.

The raw wind made Easter Sunday an uncomfortable day.

Otto Crisler, veterinary, has been doing some work in his profession.

In some neighborhoods in the county peach trees began blooming last week.

The wind sent the dust whirling along the street in great clouds, last Monday.

Leonard Kite and wife, of Waterloo, were Sunday guests of Burlington relatives.

The grand jury commenced business yesterday morning. There is not much for it to do.

Charles Clore, who lives 3½ miles out on the East Bend road, will plant his corn this week.

Col. M. D. Gray, of Grant county, was pretty busy, politically, in this county last week.

Things begin to look green about here. This has no reference to politics, you understand.

Mrs. B. W. Adams is improving slowly after being very low of pneumonia for several days.

High grade sowing machines. New Home sold at very low prices at Knor's Furniture store, Lawrenceburg.

Elza Harper, of Hebron neighborhood, was in town, Monday, having come in to serve as a petit juror.

The freeze of last Thursday night has put those who keep posted in regard to fruit prospects, to guessing.

Dr. Peddicord has purchased a nice, new runabout. It made its first appearance on the streets last Sunday.

Lots of tobacco plants are up, and the only danger of a failure in plants can now result from a late, hard freeze.

It looks like Boone might send a pretty good sized delegation to the penitentiary at this term of the circuit court.

There has been considerable wind this month, in fact it has been blustering more than March did for the first two weeks.

A considerable portion of the March planting of Irish potatoes did not get into the ground this year until the first week in April.

Harmon Jones, driver of the Burlington and Erlanger bus, was sick several days last week, and Dudley Blyth subbed for him.

The base ball season will be opened by the National League this afternoon, and Cincinnati and Pittsburg will hook up at the Cincinnati park.

Some of the maple trees about town have put out leaves in the last few days, and shortly the streets will present their usual spring appearance.

There has been a great deal of sickness in this county during the past two weeks—gripp, colds and sore throat, and many severe cases of pneumonia.

Irvin Rue, who is farming out on Bert Berkshire's land, was in town, one day last week, and reported an abundance of nice tobacco plants of the three leaf size.

After a visit of a few days with his brothers, M. S and R. P. Rice in Covington, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Rice left for their home in Ottawa, Kansas, last Saturday morning.

To Rural Route Patrons: C L. Gaines can furnish either the Cincinnati or the Ky. Post and Louisville Courier Journal or the Cincinnati Enquirer (Weekly) for $2 35.

The fact that the peach trees in the hill country are blooming in the dark of the moon has revived the old say ing that "when peach trees bloom in the dark of the moon there will be no peaches."

As a rule the farmers will be ready for an early corn planting season, they having been able to do an unusual lot of work so far this season. The ground has broken nicely and teams stood the work nicely.

The gold watch that will be awarded the young lady who is voted the most popular lady school teacher in the RECORDER'S contest now in progress is on exhibition at R. W. Clark's, local jeweler.

The oldest inhabitant can not indicate a time when hogs were as scarce in this county as they are at this time. Where corn is not produced more abundantly than it is in this county, hogs are not profitable stock.

The local merchants are handling considerable feed for stock. It has not been many years since local stores did not handle any of that class of goods at all. Quigley & Beemon, of Limaburg, handle it by the car load lots.

Deputy Sheriff W. D Cropper is engaged on the preliminary work on his 1909 tax books, but not until after the State Board of Supervisors pass, finally, on the county's assessment, can he begin making out the amounts due from the individual taxpayers.

CARD OF THANKS—We desire to extend our heart felt thanks to the neighbors and friends for their many kindnesses during the fatal illness of our grandfather, Mr. Edwin M. Gaines; to Rev. O. M. Huey for his consoling funeral discourse, and to Mr. Scott Chambers for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.

THE FAMILY.

In the last few months Henry Clore and Charles Kelly have each erected a large barn roofed with metal, while their neighbor, Charles White, has put up several long strings of substantial wire fence.

The Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co. made an assessment on the 5th inst., of 4½ per cent of the premium notes for the payment of Peter Hager's loss of $170 on barn and John Ransler's loss of $1,900 on house and $300 on furniture. Notices of the assessment have been sent to the policy holders.

W. L. Kirkpatrick, the local butcher, is building a slaughter house on what is known as the brick-yard lot in the southeast part of town. It will have a concrete floor, and be arranged so as to expedite in many ways the work of killing and dressing animals, while cleanliness will be one of its big features.

The RECORDER published a few religious articles and it now has a flood of contributions on religious topics, which, to publish, would require space that would make a paper nearly as large as the Cincinnati Sunday Enquirer, consequently the only way out of the trouble is to decline to publish any of them.

James Stephens, of Buffalo, was in Burlington, last Thursday. Mr. Stephens is a very successful fruit grower, and never fails having a supply, even though the crop is a total failure in the orchards of his neighbors. He contemplates putting out a large orchard, believing he has one of the best fruit farms in the county.

Only a little over a month remains in which the young ladies who are engaged in the popularity contest have to hustle for votes, and no doubt but what they will be busy the remainder of the time. Wonderful changes in the standing of the contestants is possible in the next few weeks. No one is on safe ground yet.

Ben Crisler and wife, of McVille, had a very exciting experience in Florence, a few days ago, all because of the horse attached to their buggy not being accustomed to autos. When the episode had concluded, the buggy was minus a pair of shafts and one wheel was wrecked, but, fortunately, Mr. and Mrs. Crisler escaped without injury.

Ed Botts, proprietor of Sorrel Horse livestock farm, near Plattsburg, dropped in at this office a few days ago to have the public reminded that very few ten months old colts are sold for $150, the amount he realized for his Willstar colt of that age, but he says Col. John H. Aylor, of Gunpowder, the purchaser, knows a good colt when he sees it.

There is no doubt but what most of the wool crop in this county will be pooled this year, which will make the handling of it much easier for both the grower and the buyer. The manner in which the pool is to be conducted embraces no redtape, and will result in a better average price for Boone county wool than would otherwise be obtained.

As Mrs. W. L. Riddell and Miss Bessie Hall were starting to the city, last Friday morning, some part of the harness on the horse attached to the buggy they were driving, gave away as they started down the small hill at Dudley Rouse's, near the ball park, letting the vehicle run up on the horse which became badly frightened and began kicking. They managed to get out of the buggy without being hurt. Mr. Rouse came to the rescue, but when he arrived the horse had the harness about all off. The only damage amounting to anything was the breaking of the harness up badly.

CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress from Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes in Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach, it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22 grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, billiousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

A CORNER IN FRAUD

By Chas W. Ellwood

NINE MILLION DOLLARS squeezed from business men of unquestionable standing by means of fraud methods, the strings of which were pulled from every big city of the United States; probably several millions more taken from contributors whose timidity prevented them from coming forth to testify at the Council Bluffs, Ia., trial.

That, as far as is known, is the fruits of one of the most thoroughly equipped swindling organizations which the United States ever knew. The swindlers, captured recently west of the Mississippi river, were brought to book and the whole story came out at the jury investigation which returned indictments and in the developments which followed subsequently.

Established in as handsome a suite of offices as J. Pierpont Morgan himself might choose, these magnates in fraud lured their victims towards the glitter of "easy money" propositions and then plucked their feathers in such adept manner that often the "Mikes" themselves could not discern the swindle and as a consequence they became victims again.

CAPTURE OF THE SWINDLERS

The heads of the swindle called themselves "millionaires" with money to invest and thus in many instances coupled their money with that of the innocent "sheep" and the latter was fleeced in due time.

Every game known to the underworld was theirs and new ones were invented every month. They had a perfect bookkeeping system; they employed agents in every part of the country, these agents paying royalties for the use of certain swindles, they traveled in palace cars and established a clipping bureau for the purpose of manufacturing printed news items about themselves. Agents were numbered. "Mikes" were numbered and the games they used were also known and used in numerical order.

The head of the "fraud trust," when arrested, was residing in a palatial residence in the south with his wife and a cortege of servants about him.

The swindles and the manner in which they were pulled off showed ingenuity worthy of a better cause.

There was no haphazard work in the operations of the syndicate. It was a most carefully managed organization. Its ramifications covered the whole country. A code book with a red cover—a sort of "Who's Who in Grafting"—found in the leader's possession, contained the names and addresses of 306 of the syndicate's willing workers, agents or steerers in all the principal cities of the country. Every one of these agents had attached to his name a number. It was his duty to get up jobs or "plays," as the syndicate hooks call them. It didn't matter what the game, if the agent carried it through to success he got a percentage of the receipts. These agents were not thugs or pluguglies or saloon loafers. They were chosen with particular reference to their education, appearance, manner of dress, ability to associate with gentlemen. This fact is shown by most of the letters captured by the government.

For nearly two years the syndicate had headquarters in New Orleans, later moved to Seattle, then to Council Bluffs and finally went to Little Rock, Ark. During all this time the agents were busy. Wherever an agent was stationed the books show that the syndicate had a "store," a genteel word to take the place of plant or "con game." Men with money were interested in proposed land deals. Horse racing or wrestling were not mentioned. Nothing was hurried. Sometimes it took months to land a victim properly. In one case on record the agent worked for two years and at length "capped" the "Mike," as the victims are called, for $37,000. In some instances the fraud was so smoothly handled that the "Mike" went back a second time and gave up another $6,000 or $10,000 before he learned that it was loaded.

The syndicate insured itself against "squealing Mikes"—another name for victims who complain—by photographing every event. At some time in the contest a picture would be taken, and always these pictures contained faces of the syndicate leaders and the victim close together, usually shaking hands. These pictures could be shown to a family, if necessary, to prove what father had been doing when he lost his thousands. They were very valuable. Several of them were found.

PICTURE OF A FAKE WRESTLING MATCH. SWINDLER AND SWINDLED SHAKING HANDS

Land propositions were the favorite bait for men with wealth. The sporting event came in casually, as a side play such as—they declared—any party of millionaires might choose to arrange. The leader and his companion millionaires never by any chance induced the "Mikes" to bet on an event. That was left in the hands of the agents. The case of a wealthy farmer in Illinois, will, perhaps, serve as well as any of the 400 or more recorded, to show how the swindle was worked. The farmer wished to buy land as an investment. One of the syndicate's agents knew of 5,000 acres that could be bought for $1.50 an acre, and if bought at once, might be sold immediately for $7.50 an acre. That sounded good. The farmer and his wife accompanied the agent to Little Rock to see the land. On the road down south the agent showed supposed newspaper clippings describing the westward trip of his principals and other "millionaires" in a private car. The government found a hundle of these clippings in the leader's valise. They evidently were made in a job printing office, but they impressed the farmer and his wife and made them feel important in being allowed to meet such large men.

There was much delay in arranging a trip to see the land. The owners were away somewhere—they usually were hard to find—but everything would soon be all right. The farmer proved, with a draft for $10,000, his financial standing, a requirement never neglected by the millionaires, and were shown every courtesy by the receiving party. He was a daily visitor in the excellently equipped offices in the Southern Trust building and became well acquainted with the private secretary. His wife was taken out in the touring car to the beautiful mansion—rented—where she met the leader's wife, and had a lovely time.

The syndicate wasn't losing any time. While the farmer's wife was eating sherbets and lady's fingers, the man, his patriarchal white beard trimmed and brushed as it had not been for years on the home place, was being taken deeply into the innermost confidence of the secretary.

This man knew that the farmer would never have anything to do with a wrestling bout or a prize fight but he knew, also, that the farmer liked horses and had run them himself once upon a time. He touched him where he was weakest. He was willing to bet on a "fixed" race.

The agriculturist met the millionaires and later he said there was fully a bushel of money on the table when the millionaires quit betting. It included $10,000 of his money.

After this was finished the whole party went to a lonely road a mile outside the city near Fourche creek. There they found the horses and jockeys awaiting them. They were to race to the foot of a hill about one-half mile away. The farmer liked the appearance of the sorrel mare on which he and the millionaires had bet their money and he was justified, because the sorrel really was a magnificent animal.

They got away in good shape, the sorrel in the lead. The other man, the friend with the losing horse, was sad. The Illinois farmer threw his hat in the air and yelled.

But ah, as they say in novels, what's this? Something had happened to the jockey on the sorrel—he had fallen suddenly forward—he was off—down—on the ground and the millionaires and the "friend" were running down the road toward the spot.

When they reached him they found his face covered with blood, it was flowing from his mouth, he was injured internally, he was dying. Fright seized everyone.

Of course the Illinoisan didn't know, he learned only a few days ago, that the syndicate jockeys and wrestlers and boxers always bled much at the mouth. He didn't know they carried little thin rubber sacks filled with blood, or something resembling it, in their mouths; that sometimes they hit the sack and sometimes burst it against their ears to show how dangerously they have been injured.

The millionaires said it mustn't get into the papers. The farmer's wife said she wanted to go home. Then she thought of her husband's $10,000. When they turned to see the stakeholder, one George Wilson, he had disappeared. The millionaires were furious. So was the "friend" whose horse certainly had won because of the accident.

"I am a lumber dealer," said a Minnesota man. "I am not 30 years old. I used to go up to Minneapolis occasionally and there met an old acquaintance, Louis Stowe, whom I hadn't seen for years. My family had known him for 20 years. His father is an Episcopal rector. I took this fellow to my home often after I met him. One day he said he had a friend, Frank Myers, an instructor in physical culture, whose cousin, George Bennett, was private secretary for three or four millionaires in Pittsburg, Pa. These millionaires had developed a wrestler, Gorman by name, whom they would match against anyone. Stowe said the millionaires would bet any sum. After much persuasion I agreed to go to Omaha to see a match—I was due for a vacation anyway—and Stowe said I couldn't lose. A certain A. B. Shores was to wrestle the millionaires' man, who had agreed, Stowe said, to let himself be thrown. I took with me a check for $10,000 to make a showing. The millionaires I met were this Gordon and two others. I told Stowe, in Omaha, that I was 'next' and wouldn't bet my money, but would bet their money for them as I'd been asked to do. I deposited my check in a bank. During the betting the leader

A FAKED DEATH ON THE MAT.

Gordon, asked me to place a bet of $8,000 or $10,000 on the side. I deferred doing it, however. Shortly afterward George Bennett, the private secretary, told me that his money, which he had hoped to get in Omaha to bet on the match, had not come and that it might be declared off if I wouldn't help. Stowe and Myers and Shores, the wrestler, wept and pleaded with me to help them by putting up the stakes they needed. Finally I consented. The money was to be merely an advance. I got the $10,000 at the bank and gave it to Stowe to hold, as he was the only man I knew well—or thought I did. He gave me this receipt:

Received of.....$10,000 which is not to be bet or hazarded in any manner. (Signed) LOUIS STOWE.

"The wrestling began promptly. Our man, Shores, got the first fall. He was to get the second, too, because the millionaire's man, Gorman had agreed to give up. But in the second bout Shores fell, and apparently bursting a blood vessel, gave every evidence of dying in great agony.

"Everyone was greatly excited. Gordon wept because of the disgrace attaching to his family in having him present at such a death. In the midst of the excitement, Bennett, the private secretary, rushed up and whispered that he was ruined. He had bet his employers' money—the stakes he held for them—and must now escape to Canada. I was hustled out of the building on the plea that I was a guest and must be protected. One of the millionaires remained with the supposed corpse.

"Stowe professed to be ruined. I lent him enough money to get out of town. He said he was sick, so I gave him my overcoat. They all got away. I was glad to get out of town and into my own state. I never saw any of them again until now—in the Little Rock jail. Stowe never has been caught—nor has my $10,000."

It is interesting that the case which resulted ultimately in the arrest of the swindlers, arose out of another friendship of several years' standing. This was the Sutor case. Mr. Sutor is known to many persons in Kansas City who have spent the summers at his resort, Cass Lake, Minn. He had known one Barney Martin for years, he said, and liked him. He knew him so well and liked him so well that he never supposed he would defraud him. When Barney gave him a "tip" on a supposed good thing Mr. Sutor saw no valid reason for turning it down any more than he would at a track with every day races. Four or five horses were to run in a race at Council Bluffs—this was in August, last—and Mr. Sutor decided to go over with Barney and put down a bet. He did. He had to borrow $4,000 to make up the $5,000 needed. But it was a sure thing, Barney said, and Barney certainly knew. Of course Mr. Sutor's "sure thing thing" fell in the stretch or the jockey fell off and "bled" and scared everyone away as usual.

Mr. Sutor thought it over at home and decided to get busy. By the time he had so decided all the "millionaires" had fled from Council Bluffs, Barney with them. But the government was in it now. Barney had written a letter helping Sutor to borrow the $4,000 and so had used the mails to defraud. The federal officers got busy at once. Decoy letters were sent out by the postal inspector in Council Bluffs, J. S. Swenson, and the syndicate, so adroit in fooling others, swallowed the bait itself.

In the closing days there came Inspector Swenson. In a few hours he had enlisted Sheriff B. L. Roberts, Deputy J. J. Hawkins, Durand Whipple, the six-foot son and law partner of W. G. Whipple, United States district attorney. Warrants were issued. Revolvers were examined and tested. The trap was ready. What warning the syndicate had may never be known, but it is true that when the officers approached the mansion the syndicate was just getting ready to leave. The leaders were in the touring car with their valises. They knew instantly that they were in for it. They sprang from the car.

"Hands up—quick!" was Inspector Swenson's crisp demand and up went two pairs of hands. One man's were elevated only to his waist. Whipple didn't like that. He searched the leader, but finding no weapons was about to step back when a thought came to him, that may have saved his life. He seized his hands and pushed them up high. Then he lifted the man's vest, and there in the trousers band, was a revolver. It had been within a few inches of his fingers all the time.

The syndicate books were very carefully kept. A large envelope labeled and bearing the name of the victim, the numbers of the streets and the amount was kept for each case. There were 100 or more of these envelopes. Each contained the minutes of every meeting with the "Mike," showed who was present and how the money was handled and also the original agreements signed by the "Mike" and the syndicate members. This was necessary, notwithstanding its danger in case of arrest, because of the extensive operations conducted. In such affairs there could be no arguments or disputes.

Humorous Thought That Occurred to Jim When He First Occupied His New White "Baid."

The prize to-day goes to a Virginia woman, who sends me this darky story:

My colored girl not only keeps my house in exquisite order, but is proud of her own home and spends time and money on it. She purchased a white enamel bed and I asked her if her husband liked it.

"Yessum, Jim he like dat white bald I done git—he like it all right. Las' night I had done fix dat bald up wid a sprald an' I got new pillershams an' it look moughty clean an' white. Jim he ondress hese'f an' git inter bald, an' he lie dere and doan say nuttin' (well I hear him sayin':

"'Lizzie—'

"'Well,' I say, 'whatcher wan', Jim?'

"'Lizzie, does yo' know what I minds myse'f of in dis white bald?'

"'No, Jim, I doan know what yo' minds yo'se'f of.'

Cleanliness.

This church, like many another one, had had trouble about pumping the organ, and the plan of using water power was gladly adopted. Connection was made with the pipes of the rectory, which stood on the adjoining lot. All the preliminary tests were satisfactory. On the Sunday morning when the apparatus was to be used for the first time at a regular service the organist arrived early for a final trial. There was not a hitch.

The congregation generally knew of the innovation, and awaited the opening strains of the processional with uncommon interest. Not a sound came from the organ, however, and the choir had to march in singing the hymn as best it could, unaccompanied. Of course the disappointment was keen.

The rector's wife was resourceful. A clergyman's wife usually has to be. She slipped out by a side door and returned in five minutes with a note. This she forwarded to her husband. It read: "It's all right now. Cook was taking a bath."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Artificial Wants.

Many a one, for the sake of finery on the back, has gone with a hungry belly and half-starved their families. "Silk and satin, scarlet and velvets," as Poor Richard says, "put out the kitchen fire." These are not the necessaries of life; they can scarcely be called the conveniences; and yet only because they look pretty, how many want to have them! The artificial wants of mankind thus become more numerous than the natural; and as Poor Dick says: "For one poor person, there are a hundred indigent."—Benjamin Franklin.

The fiance of a Louisville girl has been spending the winter in Florida in connection with his father's business interests in that quarter.

"Marie," said the girl to a friend the other day, "Walter has just sent me the dearest little alligator from Florida!"

"Dear me!" rejoined Marie, with affected enthusiasm. "And how shall you keep him?"

"I'm not quite certain," was the reply, "but I've put him in Florida water till I can hear further from Walter."

NO NEED TO TAKE CHANCES

There Is a Sure Way of Knowing Good Paint Material.

There is really no need whatever for any property owner to take chances in the selection of his paint materials. It doesn't cost a cent to learn how to be on the safe side. Certainly every property owner has enough at stake to find this out.

A complete painting guide, known as Housewarmer's Painting Outfit No. 49, can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York. This company is the largest maker of pure white lead in the world. Its Dutch Boy Painter trademark is famous as a guarantee of purity and quality. The outfit includes a book of color schemes, for either interior or exterior painting, a book of specifications, and a simple little instrument, with directions for testing the purity of paint materials.

Her Answer.

An Atchison girl had a proposal of marriage Sunday night and asked a week to think it over. She went to all of her married sisters. One, who used to be a belle, had three children, did all her own work and hadn't been to the theater or out riding since she was married. Another, whose husband was a promising young man at the time she was married, was supporting him. A third didn't dare say her life was her own when her husband was around, and a fourth was divorced. After visiting them and hearing their woes, the heroine of this little tale went home, got pen, ink and paper and wrote an answer to the young man. You may think it was refusing him, but it wasn't. She said she could be ready in a month.—Atchison Globe.

Couldn't Convince the Judge.

"I have heard of the soul kiss and kisses of other kinds, but I never heard of a man biting his wife as an evidence of his affection for her," remarked Justice O'Neill of Baltimore, Md., when George Phoebus, aged 27, of East Baltimore street, endeavored to explain the biting of his wife, for which offense she had him arrested. Mrs. Phoebus said her husband deliberately bit her on the cheek, and, though the pain was excruciating, he said that it was a "love bite." The justice fined him five dollars and gave him ten days in jail.

Caught on the Rebound.

The old man was lecturing his more or less wayward son on the evils of getting up late in the morning.

"Remember," he said, "that it was the early bird that caught the worm."

"But how about the worm, dad?" queried the youth, who thought he had his sire up in the air. "Where did his reward for getting up early come in?"

"I am informed," replied the old man, gravely, "that the worm was on his way home—hadn't been in bed at all."

And there being nothing more to say, the young man said nothing.

SICK DOCTOR

Proper Food Put Him Right.

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way is valuable:

"An attack of grip, so severe it came near making an end of me, left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew of course that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four tablespoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was almost my only food; it tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts is of great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

"I am convinced that were Grape-Nuts more widely used by physicians, it would save many lives that are otherwise lost from lack of nourishment."

Absolutely the most perfect food in the world. Trial of Grape-Nuts 10 days proves. "There's a Reason."

THE COMING ONE

Malachi's Great Vision of the Messiah.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Bloss.)

Scripture Authority:—Malachi, Chapters Three and Four.

The Period of Malachi.—The time during which the prophecies of Malachi were delivered is not difficult to ascertain. Cyril makes him contemporary with Haggai and Zechariah, or a little later. Syncellus places these three prophets under Joshua the son of Josedec. That Malachi was contemporary with Nehemiah is rendered probable by a comparison of 2:8 with Neh. 13:15; 2:10-16 with Neh. 13:22, etc.; and 3:7-12 with Neh. 13:10; etc. That he prophesied after the times of Haggai and Zechariah is inferred from his omitting to mention the restoration of the temple, and from no allusion being made to him by Ezra. The captivity was already a thing of the long past, and is not referred to. The existence of the temple service is presupposed in 1:10, 3:1, 10. The Jewish nation had still a political chief (1:8), distinguished by the same title as that borne by Nehemiah (N-h. 12:26), to which Gesenius assigns a Persian origin. Hence Vitringa concludes that Malachi delivered his prophecies after the second return of Nehemiah from Persia (Neh. 13:6), and subsequently to the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes Longimanus (cir. B. C. 420), which is the date adopted by Kennicott, Hales and Davidson.

SERMONETTE.

Here is where John the Baptist caught his vision of the Christ and preached him as the one who should baptize with fire and burn up and destroy the dross.

The unbelief of the people could not keep God from fulfilling his covenant and sending the Christ. He should come suddenly to his temple.

It seems sometimes that the judgments of God pronounced against sin are a long time delayed until at last people become skeptical concerning fulfillment. But at last in an hour when they think not, the hour of God strikes.

To the ungodly the coming of the Christ meant the consuming fire of judgment, but to those repentant of heart and longing for his coming, John introduced him, you remember, as "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

This aspect of the Christ as an avenger, as a mighty one putting down evil and exalting the righteous in heart, rather belongs to his second coming than his first. And it was because he did not fulfill this picture which Malachi draws of him, perhaps, more than for any other reason, that the Jews rejected the Christ. They were looking for a temporal king who with mighty hand would put down the enemies whom they so much hated. And when he did not fulfill this conception of him they turned from him in unbelief.

The figure of the purifier before the crucible, fixing his eye on the metal, and taking care that the fire be not too hot, and keeping the metal in only until he knows the dross to be completely removed by seeing his own image reflected in the glowing mass, is really a beautiful picture of the relation of Christ to those who really belong to him. The Christ sits down to the work, not perfunctorily but with patient love and unflinching justice. The Angel of the Covenant, as in leading his people out of Egypt by the pillar of cloud and fire, has an aspect of terror to his foes, of love to his followers.

Remember, the purer the gold, the hotter the fire now; the whiter the garment, the harder the washing.

Remember God's Word reminds us that with God a thousand years are as one day and one day as a thousand years.

THE STORY.

WHEN the present conditions are dark and forbidding there is always comfort in the promises of God.

Darkness may be around one, but if only the heavenly vision can be caught brightness breaks in upon the soul and the song of joy sounds forth from the lips.

No harder place could be imagined than that of the prophets of old who, amidst the wickedness and waywardness of the times, preached righteousness to a people who would not hear; whose hearts were wholly given over to evil, and who were bringing upon the nation the ruin and disgrace long foretold.

They could cry out against the evil. They could warn the people of the coming judgment of God upon their sins. But they could not compel them to listen. They could not force them to turn their hearts to God. They could only cry out and see the darkness close in around the nation deeper and deeper. But if the mission of prophet to the people was discouraging from one point of view, certainly there was the brighter side as the eyes turned towards God and a vision of his glory and power and ultimate triumph was caught.

Here was the secret of the confidence and hope of all the prophets from those of the early days of Israel's history down to the days of Malachi, the latest of the prophets.

The mission of Malachi was a discouraging one indeed. The decline which had followed the revival under Nehemiah marked the last downward plunge of the remnant of the nation which had been restored to Jerusalem.

Priests and people were corrupted by the conditions which surrounded them, and as Malachi went about denouncing sin and pleading with the people to return to God, he was given scant hearing.

Day after day following such apparently fruitless efforts he would return to his humble abode and lose himself in reading the prophecies which the prophets before him had left. Particularly did he enjoy the visions which Isaiah gave of the Promised One who should be seen the snow-covered peaks of the mountains on one side and Thumh Butte and the city of Prescott on the other. The house contained more than 40,000 feet of lumber, and among other modern conveniences it had two bathtubs.

"While Gen. Crook was the occupant of the house he was engaged in a long and difficult campaign against the Indians. The old building is still well preserved. When the auctioneer announced the sale the bidding started at $50, and this figure was raised from time to time, until it reached $180, at which sum it was knocked down to the proprietor of a hotel. What the purchaser proposes to do with the house I don't know, but he was told that it must be removed shortly, as the government would no longer be responsible for its safety.

"The house cost probably more than $90,000. Every foot of lumber in it was freighted from Los Angeles at a cost of ten cents a pound. It was considerably enlarged after Gen. Crook left it. The latter's successor, Gen. Kautz, lived in it for a long time, but it has not been occupied for a number of years. At the time of its construction a guard of soldiers had to patrol the vicinity constantly to keep away the Indians. There was not a person at the sale who did not express regret that the government should not allow the old house to remain."

English and American Education.

Americans educate the mass, while we have always educated the leaders. In England—democracy assenting to the method—we make a point of specially encouraging the promising pupils; we build "ladders" for them, and we believe that our indifference to the question of what class of society they may come from is sufficient proof of our genuinely democratic habit of mind. It has been the fundamental practice of England to train leaders for the nation. This was done when most citizens were receiving no education at all. Americans rather concentrate their attention on the ruck. The exceptional boy or girl, it is thought, will rise in any case. The important thing to do is to advance the average of education.—London Spectator.

Specialization in Science.

The pitch to which specialization is carried nowadays even in such a field as scientific investigation is illustrated by the foundation in Vienna of an institution to be wholly devoted to the study of radium. The buildings, which are now under construction and will be ready next spring, stand on the Wahringstrasse, next to those of the new Institute of Physics. They are the property of the Vienna Academy of Sciences, which has contributed half a million kroner toward the installation.

Use of Salt.

Salt in moderate quantities is good for everybody. It aids digestion, and, better still, it makes one thirsty. If we eat plenty of salt and salty foods we will drink more water, and most people do not drink enough water. Try eating a raw apple sprinkled with salt. It is very good, particularly good for children. Pepper, on the other hand, and spices should not be given to children, unless in the most meager quantities. At many of the sanitariums the food is not seasoned at all, except with salt.

CROOK HOUSE SOLD CHEAP

United States Government Gets $180 for Building That Had Cost the People $90,000.

"A $90,000 house was sold at Fort Whipple, near Prescott, a few days ago for $180," said George H. Morgan, a lawyer of Prescott, Ariz. "It was known as the old Gen. Crook house, and was owned by the government. Gen. Crook occupied the house for several months, and it was on just such a windy day as that of the sale that Gen. Crook rode away from the house in March, 1886.

"The building was a nondescript style of architecture, constructed of stucco, adobe and frame. It was roomy and comfortable, with lofty ceilings and bay windows, through which could be seen the snow-covered peaks of the mountains on one side and Thumh Butte and the city of Prescott on the other. The house contained more than 40,000 feet of lumber, and among other modern conveniences it had two bathtubs.

"While Gen. Crook was the occupant of the house he was engaged in a long and difficult campaign against the Indians. The old building is still well preserved. PRESCRIPTION FOR NERVOUS MEN AND WOMEN—TRY IT

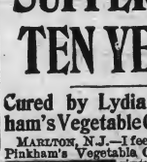
The impairment of the nervous force in men and women is first manifested by extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, dread, worry and anxiety without reason, trembling of the hands and limbs, with the slightest exertion, heart palpitation, constipation, kidney trouble, and a general inability to act rationally at all times as others with health in their bodies do.

In a half pint bottle get three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound and add to this one ounce compound fluid balmwort, and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence cardiol, and one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom); mix all together, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at retiring.

A Sure Way.

"I wonder," said the practical man, thoughtfully, "why detectives do not take automobiles."



"Why so?" asked his friend.

"Because then it would be easy to run a man down."

AFTER SUFFERING TEN YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JONDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Big Bargains in Paints.

Having bought at bankrupt sale a full assortment of the finest paints made, we are making the greatest offer ever presented to the public in this quarter. These paints have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and we have been handling them with the most gratifying results for fifteen years, selling the paints at $1.40 to $1.50 per gallon, and they would cost us nearly that if purchased from the wholesaler today. We want the public to have the benefit of our bargain and will offer the paints at $1.00 per gallon. We have a full assortment of colors, and have now the largest stock kept by a country paint store. Come in and see the stock if you are going to paint; it will pay you as you will get the best at less than cost. We keep everything in the paint line. Trusting to have your patronage, we are respectfully yours.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S. CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

CARD OF THANKS—We desire to thank all of our friends and neighbors for their untiring efforts in lightening our burdens and grief during the illness and death of our son, and brother, Ollie, and to Bro. Carter for the comforting words spoken by him at the funeral.

Roland McCarty and children.

Ollie, son of Rowland and Nannie McCarty, was born May 26th, 1891, united with Bellevlew Christian church in May 1907, and died April 8th, 1909, after suffering two weeks. He was a true and loyal disciple, genial and warm hearted, carrying sunshine in his face, and was respected by the entire community for his genuine worth. He leaves a father, mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn his death. He was a young man of high ideals, good habits, kind and generous, and bequeathed to his friends the rich legacy of an unsullied name, a beautiful example to imitate and a sweet memory to love, but verily we sorrow not as others who have no hope. Bro. Carter baptized him and preached his funeral. The love and esteem in which he was held was manifest upon the day of burial in the gathering of a host of relatives and friends and the many floral offerings.

A thief purloined 6 shirts belonging to Al Rogers, and a bushel of potatoes belonging to Mike Corbin, that were put off the packet here a few nights since.

Ollie McCarty, of Woolper, who died on the 8th, had a host of friends here who mourn because of his death. He was a young man of estimable qualities, and made friends of everyone with whom he came in contact.

HERE AND THERE.

Cabll Beemon was initiated into the mysteries of Woodcraft at Petersburg, Saturday night.

Notwithstanding the recent hard freezes since peach trees began to bloom, the buds seem to be practically unhurt.

Nearly everybody is done plowing and the indications are that the corn crop in the county will be planted early this spring.

Born—To Ed Maxwell and wife on the 17th last., a boy, and to Bernard Berkshire and wife on the same day, a girl. All doing well.

Lewis Jarrell had a wood-sawing, last Wednesday, and Courtney Jarrell had one on Thursday. Each got a nice lot of wood sawed.

Courtney Jarrell was dragging poles with his horses, one day last week, when a pole caught on a rock, throwing one horse over a 10 foot bank, but it escaped with slight injuries.

It last week's paper you said the peach crop would be a failure because the trees bloomed in the dark of the moon. According to H. E. Buckien's and Dr. Miles' almanacs, the full moon and the last quarter is the light of the moon, and the new moon and the first quarter is the dark of the moon. Where do you get your information to the contrary, Mr. Editor?—[From Joe Revill and Lewis Beemon.—ED.]

"I'd Rather Die, Doctor,

than have my feet cut off," said Mr. L. Bingham, of Princeville, Ill., but you'll die from gangrene (which had eaten away eight toes) if you don't, said all doctors. Instead he used Buckien's Arnica Salve till wholy cured. It cures of Eczema, Fever Sores, Boils, Burns and piles astound the world. 25c at Bentler's drug store Erlanger.

Potatoes are coming up in some patches.

We made a business trip to R. H. last Thursday morning and found that little burg full of business. The first place at which we stopped was the blacksmith shop there we found S. N. Biggs and son doing the shoeing act. We left our grist to be ground at the mill department. The next place we stopped at was the office of Y. F. Hopkins, M. D., and found him busy filling medicine cases with one hand and answering a call at the 'phone with the other. After paying him our respects and for some medicine, we stopped at the saw mill where Mr. Hodges and son were cutting out some nice lumber. Next we visited the store of C. G. Riddell, where his efficient counter junper, Beverly Nelson, was waiting on customers, while Gene Wingate was supplying the wagon with groceries and coal oil for the day out on the route.

WALTON.

The Farmers' Club of the Walton precinct will meet at the Walton opera house Saturday, May 1st, at 2 o'clock, when Prof. Geo. Roberts, of the Experiment Station, Lexington, will make an address of much interest to every farmer. The club is paying Prof. Roberts' expenses to come here and lecture, and every farmer should hear him as he has a fund of valuable information, and tells it in a very entertaining manner. We will also have a horse show beginning at 1 o'clock and lasting until 2 o'clock, when Prof. Roberts will begin to speak. Bring your horse to the show.

The dramatic entertainment given at the Walton opera house by the Walton Thespian Club last Saturday night for the benefit of George Fornash, was a great success from a financial and artistic standpoint. The house was filled to overflowing and the players outdid themselves in their excellent presentation of the respective parts. The music was a very entertaining feature, and the Thespian Club desires us to tender their sincere thanks to the following for the valuable assistance rendered both at this entertainment and in the past: Miss Sallie Jones, of Landing; George Glore, of Beaver Lick; Dr. H. C. Black, Russell Miller and Fred Miller, of Walton. The entire proceeds of the entertainment will be given Bro. Fornash, who is still very ill.

Wilbur Westbay, a Burlington scion, made his debut as a pitcher for the Lexington club in the Blue Grass League, last Sunday. The opposing club was the colt division of the Cincinnati Reds. He pitched five innings, allowing but one hit. The game was won by the Colts 8 to 5, and was lost before Westbay went into the box. His friends here hope to see him go to the top as a pitcher.

On Monday afternoon of this week was held the regular meeting of the Executive Committee of the Christian Churches of Boone county at the home of Rev. Edgar C. Riley. This committee is composed of one member from each Christian church. A series of church rallies will soon be commenced, and several revivals have been planned.

That was a fine rain that fell Monday night and Tuesday, and would have been worth hundreds of dollars more had it been followed by warm weather.

UNCLE SAM'S CONSULS

BY EDWARD B. CLARK

DRAWINGS BY HERBERT MELVILL

COPYRIGHT 1909 BY W.A. PATTERSON

WASHINGTON.—It is the desire of Secretary of State Knox as it was that of Secretary Root, to put the consular service of the United States as nearly as it is possible so to do, upon the plane of the civil service. All consular appointments to-day are made largely upon the recommendation of senators and representatives and other men of political influence, but the appointees are given places of the lowest rank in the service and must depend upon the excellence of their work to secure promotion. Moreover they must pass a satisfactory examination before the department will assign them to posts of duty.

The administration, it is known, would be glad if it were possible to apply civil service rules to these appointments of ministers and ambassadors, but as the holders of these high diplomatic offices are forced to great expense of living, and their salaries are comparatively small, no man can become a first place representative of his country abroad unless he belongs to the class of the millionaires. The result of this is that in many cases money rather than ability fixes the appointments of some of our ministers and ambassadors.

In the past there were many literary men of standing but whose books did not bring them in a large revenue, who sought places in the consular service in order that they might have a regular income, comparatively little office work, and an opportunity also to get the atmosphere of Europe or Asia or of some other continent to give life and color to the books which they intended to write. The literary man to-day has to stand on the same level in seeking an appointment as a consul as that occupied by the lawyer or the merchant. There are not as many writers of books and essays in the service to-day as there were in the past, and in one way the United States government is the loser thereby.

If some one would go far back through the files of the state department and read the consular reports contained therein, he doubtless would run across some clever bits of writing put on paper by men who knew the art and who gave interest and color and life to some seemingly dry as dust trade subject. It is very likely that the reports that Francis Bret Harte wrote when he was consul at Glasgow, Scotland, would make delightful reading even though they treated on the subject of wool or, it may be, of Scotch whisky or Scotch cattle. There have been other literary men in the service, some of them better known than Bret Harte. It is only necessary to give the names of Washington Irving and Nathaniel Hawthorne to prove the point. Not long ago in the service abroad the government had Albion W. Tourgee, Arthur Sherburne Hardy, James Jeffrey Roach, and George Horton. Two of these men died comparatively recently, but they lived long enough to see some of their writings appear in print as public documents and to know that the manner in which they treated their subjects was appreciated by thousands of their American countrymen.

SHEPHERDS WATCHING THEIR SHEEP ON THE SAND DUNES OF FRANCE

"ITS TRIUMPHAL MARCH THROUGH DAMASCUS STIRRED THE WHITE CITY OF THE EAST FROM CENTER TO CIRCUMFERENCE."

BOXERS ATTACKING AMERICAN LEGATION IN PEKIN, CHINA

Some of the other consuls abroad, men who made no pretense to literary ability, have turned in from time to time trade reports that were picturesque in their nature and written with extreme cleverness. Not long ago the government decided to issue in a form between a pamphlet and a magazine the Daily Consular Reports. As the editor of the publication a veteran newspaper man, Maj. John M. Carson, was appointed. With his training he saw to it that the best of the material received from the consuls was given a place of prominence, and he succeeded in making of the consular reports a publication of real interest.

In the records of the department there is one report which from the first paragraph holds the close attention of the reader. It was read the other day by one who did not know until the last line was reached whose hand had been at work in its writing. The thought was, here is something worth while.

The title of the article was simply "Reforestation in France," and the first few lines showed little of interest. Then the eye reached this: "One after another great waves of sand, moved by the restless winds that swept across the Atlantic, continued their unceasing march across the fair plains of southern France, burying all before them—fields, meadows, vineyards, houses, churches, even villages—leaving behind them only gray billows, to which clung patches of bracken, a few starved bushes of scrub oak, and thickets of white and purple gorse, fighting stubbornly for a hold upon the shifting sands, with here and there some straggling groups of pine, the protesting remains of a great forest which wind and sand, and fire, and water had spared."

This was a description of the irresistible march of the gray sand dunes from the shore of the Bay of Biscay toward the heart of the most productive land in Europe. The description was embodied in a consul's report, and it was so utterly different from the descriptions written by most consuls, or by their clerks, as is more often the case, that the reader's eye and mind went on wondering, with curiosity held in check until the signature should come at the very end. The thought was that here was a consul or a clerk who should be writing books instead of commercial pamphlets intended for the eye of the few. The story—this official communication is a story and nothing else—leads to the final planting of the pines under the direction of Napoleon—pines which saved the fields of France.

"Wherever the foot of the sand dune rested, there was hopeless blight. A little wiry grass grew in the shadow of the heather and gorse, on which the sheep browsed under the eyes of solemn-faced shepherds perched on stilts and knitting as they watched. On and on crept the phalanx of the terrible dunes, slowly but surely blighting all in their path, not only creating a desert but destroying hope. As long as the winds blew from the west the dunes marched to the east; the desert fires ravaged the intervening spaces; flocks grew fewer, the desolation more extreme. In the heart of sunny France a desert was established, ever increasing in extent and threatening to stretch across its fairest fields the aridness of the Sahara.

The official document then tells us in the words of its contributor how France was saved by the adoption of the idea of Bremontier, one of the sons of the seemingly doomed region. The seeds of the pine, the "pin maritime" of the French, were gathered and sprouted carefully and the young trees were planted in places "where the moving sands did not overwhelm them until their tough roots had taken a firm hold, their wiry leaves, which loved the briny spume, would offer no resistance to the wind, and, falling about their roots, would give shelter and nutriment until a forest grew which would hold the sands in check and save the threatened interior from desolation."

It was Napoleon who seized upon the idea of Bremontier. "His vision penetrated the centuries and he saw the march of the deadly dunes arrested and the desert they had created made to blossom like the rose."

The consul tells us that after a century has passed the statue of Bremontier looks down one of the great furrows which lie between the dunes he showed how to conquer. Today, as we are told, "the dark squadrons of the pin maritime are posted on thousands of sandy slopes, faithful guardians in the shelter of which the vineyards and wheat fields rest secure. The gray dunes which were sweeping over the land have become serried fortresses which shelter civilization and prosperity."

At least one real live item was contributed not long ago by G. Ble Ravndal, United States consul at Beirut, Syria, to the pages of the consular reports. When this was put into the publication it is probable that the editor-in-chief was on a vacation. Otherwise the Beirut consul's tale would have been put on the first page instead of being sandwiched in between "Rubber Cultivation" and "Commercial Failure in Germany."

According to the consular report Pasha Abdul Rahman at one time imported into Damascus a hoosier steam threshing machine through the agency of a gentleman named Michel Effendi Nasser of Beirut. It is the belief of Consul Ravndal that the Indiana thresher will rout the Bedouins of the desert, and he leads up to this climax with a picturesque recital of the facts attending the arrival of the machine and its subsequent career. His tale of the thresher follows:

"Its triumphal march through Damascus stirred the White City of the East from center to circumference. On its way into the country it broke down bridges innumerable, but pulled itself out of the creek beds beautifully, and it had the honor of being started on its pioneer career in the presence of the governor-general of the province, the field marshal in command of the Fifth army corps and many other gentlemen of high station in Ottoman civil and military life. With its self-feeder, automatic bagger, straw bruiser, etc., it is a marvel of ingenuity, and its service to this country in blazing the way for labor-saving machinery, with its accompanying amelioration of industrial and social conditions in a region east of Mount Hermon, where people live and work as did their forefathers when Abraham crossed their pastures with his Chaldean flocks, is beyond estimation. In the Hauran to-day thousands of acres are lying idle; they are likely now to be reclaimed, and the predatory Bedouin tribes who infest the country will have to retire before the new order of things."

Consular positions do not pay large sums of money, but the life is in many respects an attractive one and there are always many applicants for any vacancies which may exist. It is virtually a necessity that the person who desires a place in the consular service shall be able to speak at least two modern languages; that is, one in addition to English. While the examinations are not supposed to be hard some men who have been through college with credit in their studies have failed to answer properly enough of the questions put to them to give them a hold on the service.

At times the United States consuls have dangers to encounter. It was exceedingly unpleasant in Spain for some of Uncle Sam's representatives during the months just prior to the beginning of actual hostilities at Manila bay, in Chili and in Turkey within a comparatively short time the consuls have had occasion to put up a brave front against the populace and to show the stuff that they were made of. Fresh in the memory of everybody is the awful time which the beleaguered legations had within the walls of "the forbidden city" in China.

GOING THE PACE.

Tortoise—What, have you started a motor car?

Snail—Yes, one must move with the times, you know.

BABY'S WATERY ECZEMA

Itched and Scratched Until Blood Ran —$50 Spent on Useless Treatments —Disease Seemed Incurable.

Cured by Cuticura for $1.50.

"When my little boy was two and a half months old he broke out on both cheeks with eczema. It was the itchy, watery kind and we had to keep his little hands wrapped up all the time, and if he would happen to get them uncovered he would claw his face till the blood streamed down on his clothing. We called in a physician at once, but he gave an ointment which was so severe that my babe would scream when it was put on. We changed doctors and medicine until we had spent fifty dollars or more and baby was getting worse. I was so worn out watching and caring for him night and day that I almost felt sure the disease was incurable. But finally reading of the good results of the Cuticura Remedies, I determined to try them. I can truthfully say I was more than surprised, for I bought only a dollar and a half's worth of the Cuticura Remedies (Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills), and they did more good than all my doctors' medicines I had tried, and in fact entirely cured him. His face is perfectly clear of the least spot or scar of anything. Mrs. W. M. spot or scar. Mrs. W. M. Comerer, Burnt Cabins, Pa., Sept. 15, 1908."

Too Literal.

"Well, yes," said Old Uncle Lazzenberry, who was intimately acquainted with most of the happenstances of the village. "Almira Stang has broken off her engagement with Charles Henry Tootwiler. They'd be goin' together for about eight years, durin' which time she had been inculcatin' into him, as you might call it, the beauties of economy; but when she discovered, just lately, that he had learnt his lesson so well that he had saved up 217 pairs of socks for her to darn immediately after the wedding, she 'peared to conclude that he had taken her advice a little too literally, and broke off the match."—Puck.

The Missionary Mule.

"That mule," said the old farmer, "is what I call a 'missionary mule,' an' I'll tell you why: It throwed one man on his head, an' when the man was able to be up an' about ag'in, he went to preachin'; an' the last time the sheriff come to levy on that mule the critter kicked him 'cross the county line, whar they wuz holdin' a campmeetin' an' I'm blest of the sheriff didn't git religion an' quit runnin' fer office—w'ich wuz oncommon hard to do, seein' that the office habit run in his blood. I tell you, nuthin' in this here worl' is to be despised, w'en as humble a critter as a mule kin be a missionary!"

Perfectly Reckless.

The members of the church voted that their dearly-beloved and devoted pastor should have a vacation, and so he decided that he would visit a brother-worker in the neighboring village. This good brother recognizing his fellow-worker in the Lord way back among the congregation, on Sunday morning, and wishing to show every courtesy, asked him to lead in prayer. But the visitor calmly replied: "You'll have to excuse me, dear brother, I'm on my vacation."—Ladies' Home Journal.

"COFFEE DOESN'T HURT ME"

Tales That Are Told.

"I was one of the kind who wouldn't believe that coffee was hurting me," says a N. Y. woman. "You just couldn't convince me its use was connected with the heart and stomach trouble I suffered from most of the time.

"My trouble finally got so bad I had to live on milk and toast almost entirely for three or four years. Still I loved the coffee and wouldn't believe it could do such damage.

"What I needed was to quit coffee and take nourishment in such form as my stomach could digest.

"I had read much about Postum, but never thought it would fit my case until one day I decided to quit coffee and give it a trial and make sure about it. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions.

"Soon I began to get better and was able to eat carefully selected foods without the aid of pepsin or other digestants and it was not long before I was really a new woman physically.

"Now I am healthy and sound, can eat anything and everything that comes along and I know this wonderful change is all due to my having quit coffee and got the nourishment I needed through this delicious Postum.

"My wonder is why everyone don't give up the old coffee and the troubles that go with it and build themselves up as I have done, with Postum."

Easy to prove by 10 days' trial of Postum in place of coffee. The reward is big.

"There's a Reason."

THE DIVINE CHALLENGE

Malachi Calls Upon the People to Prove God.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1909, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Scripture Authority:—Malachi 3:8-12.

The Book of Malachi.—It is contained in four chapters in our version, as in the LXX, Vulgate, and Peshito-Syriac. In the Hebrew, the third and fourth chapters form but one chapter. The prophecy of Malachi is alluded to in the New Testament, and its canonical authority thereby established (comp. Mark 1:2; 9:11, 12; Luke, 1:17; Rom. 9:13). The style is prosaic and rhetorical, rather than poetic and more closely resembles a written philosophical discourse than the oracles of the Hebrew prophets. The prophecy naturally divides itself into three sections: I. (1:2-2:9).—Jehovah is represented as the loving father and ruler of his people. It may be subdivided thus: (1) 1:1-5.—Jehovah asserts and proves his love to his people by reference to the punishment of Edom. (2) 1:6-2:9.—Rebuke of the priests, as the leaders of spiritual defection. II. (2:10-16.)—The prophet's reproof of mixed marriages and divorces, portrayed by the deserted wives weeping at the altar. III. The sudden appearance in the temple of the Lord as the judge, preceded by his forerunner. This section may be thus subdivided: (1) 2:17-3:5.—A threat of punishment. (2) 3:16-12.—A call to repentance. (3) 3:13-14:6.—Reproof of distrust in God; forewarning of the final separation of good and bad; of the final judgment; the advent of the Messiah, heralded by Elijah. Thus prophecy closes with the announcement of the Messiah's coming, and prepares the people for the appearance of his precursor, John the Baptist, in the spirit and the power of Elias (Matt. 11:14; 17:10-13.).

SERMONETTE.

Open up the treasures of your heart if you would be possessed of the treasures of God.

One reason for the barrenness of the church to-day is the parsimony of its members.

The old simile of the eagle who robbed the altar and set fire to her nest with the burning coal that adhered to the stolen flesh, illustrates forcibly the condition of men who retain God's money in their treasuries and in the end find that what they have is a losing possession, for it robs them of eternity.

We must give to God if we would receive from God.

Notice how God's promises are always conditional upon some act of the soul to whom God would send the blessing.

God's treasures all have their price. If we are not willing to pay the price, to fulfill the condition, then they are not for us to possess.

And yet God's price is always within the reach of the one to whom he makes the offer.

It is a wonderful figure we have in this tenth verse. The heavens with all their rich store of blessing shut up because the people were robbing God.

Windows there, but not open earthward to permit God's blessing to pour forth because the people had forgotten God.

It is a storehouse which cannot be carried by assault. A place of eternal riches which cannot be entered by stealth, by violence, or by deception. Why? Because God is the Lord of the place, and nothing but the price which he demands can operate to move the levers and throw open the windows.

Have the windows of heaven ever yet been opened wide to permit all the blessing of God to descend upon the earth? Not yet. The tithes of God's people have not all been brought in to his storehouse. They are still robbing him, and because the conditions which God has laid down have not been fulfilled he is withholding the full blessing.

And yet God wants to be proved. He wants the fullest test made of his promises. Has there ever been one who found those promises to fail?

THE STORY.

"WHAT!" exclaimed Malachi. "Do you complain of God's dealings with you? Of course there is suffering in the land! Of course we are under the power of the nations that surround us! Of course the glory of Jerusalem and of the Temple service has departed, for ye have forgotten God. Sin has brought its punishment."

The voice of the prophet rang out sharp and full, expressing the bitter scorn he felt within, and the delegation of men before him turned as though they would depart, disappointment and anger written upon their faces.

They had come in bitterness of spirit to complain of the oppression which they were suffering at the hands of the rulers of the land. They were vine dressers living in the vicinity of Jerusalem, and the exactions to which they had been subjected by their task masters had at last reached a point where they felt they could stand them no longer.

"Malachi will surely help us against these godless heathen who have come and gained control of the land," exclaimed one, as they had journeyed into Jerusalem and sought out the dwelling of Malachi.

"Yes, the prophet has always sought the good of our nation, and he will not fail us," spoke up another, confidently.

"If we get no help, what is to become of us?" asked another, bitterly. "Where is the evidence that we are God's chosen people and that he has given us the land?"

"Bah! Surely, God has forgotten his people. He cares not that we suffer," responded another.

"True," broke in another, "it's the godless nations about us who are prospering, and we who have Abraham for our father and whose God has been our God are left to suffer oppression and sorrow."

Thus as they walked they discussed the hardness of their lot, and in the hardness of their hearts they charged God with forgetting them and of blessing their enemies. It was in this spirit that they came into the presence of Malachi and poured into his ear their bitter complaint. And the prophet had turned upon them and spoken sharply and forcibly the words at the opening of our story.

Did they dare complain against God, demanded Malachi, when they had forgotten God and had gone in the ways of the heathen nations about them? Did they dare to say that their suffering was God's fault and not their own?

After his words and they turned as though to go, the prophet arose, and, throwing his mantle around him, made as though he would go with them.

The delegation waited half expectantly, but Malachi, who had now finished adjusting his robes, and had taken up a scroll from the table where he had been writing when the company had entered, stood silently and intently beholding them. His gaze seemed to search to the very depths of their hearts, and they began to feel nervous and uncomfortable.

They knew his charges against them were true. They knew that even while they tried to justify themselves that they were guilty as he had charged.

"Think you that God has changed?" demanded the prophet, breaking the silence at last. "Nay, rather it is you who have changed. Listen," and taking the scroll which he had in his hand and unrolling it, he read: "'Thus saith the Lord, I change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.' This is the one proof that God is still in the heavens, and that his promises to Abraham are not forgotten."

"But where is the blessing upon Israel that was promised?" ventured one, more bold than the rest.

"Blessing! Where can there be blessing when ye depart from God? Listen!" and again turning to his scroll Malachi read therefrom: "'Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts.'"

As the reading ceased Malachi indicated that the interview was at an end, and as his guests passed out he followed them, and turning walked rapidly away in the opposite direction from that which the company of vine dressers took.

"Where can he be going?" they questioned among themselves as they walked along.

"And what care we?" ventured one of the group, angrily, "seeing that he spoke so harshly to us."

"Say not so," spoke up another, quickly; "the prophet speaks the words of truth."

"But they bring no hope or encouragement to us," rejoined the other.

"But did he not read from the scroll that if we would return to God he would return to us?"

"Yes," admitted the other.

"Then—" The sentence was interrupted by a commotion in the market place, through which they were passing at that moment, and they turned aside to see what it was all about.

It proved to be nothing more than a dispute between one of the merchants of the place and a customer over the purchase price of an article, the latter claiming that an extra price had been demanded after he had made the purchase. The matter was soon settled, however, but the crowds which had gathered from every side lingered, the group of vine dressers among the rest. The latter fell into conversation with some of those standing near them, and after numerous questions had been asked they stated that they had been to see the prophet Malachi.

"The prophet Malachi!" exclaimed one. "Why, he has summoned the people to meet him here this evening. That explains why there were so many near when the commotion arose over there."

"But when we left he departed in the other direction," exclaimed the vine dressers.

"Well, he will be here, you may be sure. There he comes now," added the speaker, pointing towards an approaching figure. The people fell back on either side as the somber figure drew into the market place. He passed straight to a great stone, and without pausing he mounted it and taking the scroll from which he had read to the vine dressers just a short time before, he turned to the people and said:

"Hear ye the word of the Lord which he speaks unto his wayward and disobedient people: 'Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say: Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it.'"

"Can it be that the Lord will do even so?" exclaimed the vine dressers, as they departed for their homes.

MUSTN'T MISS VISITING TOM.

Cheerful Prospect Ahead for Traveler, No Matter Which Course He Elected to Follow.

A New Englander, traveling on foot through the southern mountains, studying the people, asked a man whom he met to direct him to a certain cabin at which he had been advised to stay overnight. "Going that?" said the man. "Well, Tom's a first-rater, take him just right, but he's mighty queer."

"What do you mean?" asked the traveler.

"Well, it's like this," and the man looked at the stranger in a calm, impersonal way. "He'll be setting outside, most probably, and he'll see you coming; he'll take a good look at you, and ef you don't suit him, he may set the dog on you.

"Ef he don't, and you get to talking with him, and say anything he don't just like, he throw you down and tromp on you. But ef you're too careful in your talk, on the other hand, he's liable to take you for a spy and use his gun first and listen to explanations afterward.

"But it's no use trying to get by without stopping," concluded the man, with evident relish of the prospect he was opening up to the stranger. "Ef you was to undertake that, 'twould be all up with you, for he'd think you was proud and biggetty.

"Ef you want to come out of the mountain whole, don't go past Tom's cabin without stopping, whatever you do!"—Youth's Companion.

Stamping Out Opium Smoking.

From Honan, China, a correspondent write: "Most of the opium planted in the autumn was destroyed and the land was put under wheat. The officials say that when the plant has bloomed out they will make another search and if any poppy is found the land that grows it will become official land. The shops for selling the drug are now limited. No one is allowed to smoke except at home. While I was staying at an inn the official of the place, in making his round of the inns to see if any lawless fellows were lodged there, saw a man smoking in the room where I was and at once forced him to blow out his lamp. But almost as soon as the official was gone the smoker began again. At one of these towns the official is an opium smoker. He has signed the pledge that he has given up the practice, but at the same time the report is abroad that he has man kerosene oil cans full of the stuff stored away for his own use. While this is true, he is pressing the work of making others stop and not many days ago he put the wooden collar on six men for ten days because they had been found smoking."

Wonderful Longevity.

One of the most curious instances of longevity is found in Miss Louisa Courtenay's "Notes on an Octogenarian." A witness in a will case in which Bendish-Ker, the great English conveyancer, was engaged, was asked if he had any brothers or sisters. He replied that he had had one brother who died 150 years ago. The court expressed incredulity, and documentary evidence was produced in support of the statement. This showed that the witness' father, who married first at the age of 19, had a son who died in infancy. The father married again at the age of 76, and had a son who lived to appear in the witness box at the age of 94, and made the above startling statement.

Awful Confession.

"Mother," said the repentant, "I've a dreadful thing to confess to you. Last night, when you told me to lie down in bed, I lied down, but after you turned out the gas I grounded my teeth at you in the dark!"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, obtained by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially, and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy, and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

The Democratic voters in this judicial district will, on Thursday of next week, choose their nominees for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney. These are two very important offices and the voters should take enough interest in the election to turn out to give expression of their choice for these offices—say whom they desire to hold them for four years commencing the first of next January. Don't forget the day of the primary, Thursday, April 29.

Now it's the pastry department is causing the housewife her troubles and it all depends on one Mr. Patten, the "wheat king," just when these worries will come to an end. During the past fortnight there has been a decided jump in all flour prices, and if the "wheat king" feels so disposed additional advances will be brought about through his keen and careful speculation. Meats are another commodity that cause some consternation, but the advances scored are a mere bagatelle in comparison with large increases scored in the item that furnishes the staff of life.

A few days ago Mr. Elijah Howard, of Bullittsville, dropped into this office to have his subscription moved up a notch, when he threw down on the table a $3 bill on the Farmers' & Mechanics Bank of Cincinnati. Its serics number was 538, the number being written with pen. The bill bore the date 1814. Sam W. Davies was cashier, and William Irwin, President of the bank. The bill is 2½x6½ inches, printed on but one side, and the paper is very light. This one time piece of money is well preserved, and is somewhat a curiosity. It was not accepted in payment of subscription as Mr. Howard had with him a healthy roll of modern bank notes that were much more tempting, out of which he liquidated his little bill.

The Great Imported German Coach Stallion,

Plutarch 3183

Will make the season of 1909 at T. E. Randall's stable, one mile west of Idlewild, Boone Coudty, Ky., on the Burlington and Petersburg Turnpike at money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

$12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without imparing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm. 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—it will cost you nothing.

BURLINGTON & WATERLOO HORSE CO.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20 00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

HIGH VINE, 2733, foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667; grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730; Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2882, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1365; second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60; third dam, Maxey by Granger; fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,400 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and feeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

Address all communications to
W. LEE GAINES, President,
Walton, Ky.

THE FINE TROTTING STALLION

TRACTION ROADS

Are Being Projected in Every Direction in Northern Kentucky.

Burlington and Other Boone County Towns In the Traction Zone--Let's All Push and Pull.

It seems that Burlington has got into the traction road zone, and there is great probability of the road being built if the land owners between Burlington and Florence encourages the enterprise by giving the right-of-way, which would be a narrow strip of their land. Mr. W. T. S. Blackburn, of Dry Ridge, was in communication by telephone with A. B. Renaker, last Monday, in regard to the matter. Mr. Blackburn is a member of a company that has projected a large system of traction roads in this part of Kentucky, one of the proposed roads to come from the city via Erlanger, Florence, Burlington, to Belleview, then to Rabbit Hash, then to Big Bone, then back to the city via Union, Gunpowder and Florence. This is the best route that has ever been proposed in this part of the State, and it is hoped that the land owners along the proposed route will recognize the very great advantage to be derived from a traction road in this part of the country, and respond to the requirements of the time to keep up with the procession by giving the right of way. There is no way in which they can make so small an investment that will yield them anything like the profits a traction road will bring to them. Mr. Blackburn will be in Burlington next County Court day to discuss the matter with the people.

Dr. M. J. Crouch, of Union, was in Burlington, Monday morning, and was talking traction road in a most pleasing manner, being one of the promotors of a traction road which it is propose to build from Covington via Erlanger, Florence, Gunpowder and Union to Big Bone. He reports several very enthusiastic meetings have been held in the interest of the proposed road, and that the company will be organized and incorporated in the next few days, when the work of securing the right of way through the counties of Boone and Kenton will be taken up and put through as soon as possible. The preliminary survey of the route will be begun and completed at the earliest possible date. The doctor says the company will be composed of public spirited men of capital, who are determined to build the road, or put it in a position that will make someone else glad to construct it. The people of Big Bone and Union neighborhoods are elated over the prospects of having a traction road at their service in the no great distant future. The project has already attracted the attention of outside capital which has indicated a desire to have a hand in the construction of the road. Dr. Crouch is very sanguine that the present move will result in the building of the road, and that that result will soon be obtained.

The Cloverport News gives the tobacco growers in its part of the State the following timely advice: "From the number of plant beds looming up on the hills and in the valleys of this county there will be an immense crop of tobacco raised this year. If planters will keep in mind quality instead of quantity, the price will be all right. Immense acreage of tobacco means mean tobacco, and mean tobacco means next to nothing in price. Tobacco growers have things practically their own way now if they did not but know it. But a big crop will bust them sure. Don't do it, farmers. Keep down the quantity and the quality up. 10,000 plants to the hand should be the watchword."

Deputy Sheriff Cropper accompanied by R. C. Gaines, of Idlewild, left Friday morning for Frankfort with the following prisoners: Martin Farrell, housebreaking, 3 years; Albert Farrell, housebreaking, one year; Thomas Adams, housebreaking, 1 year; Earl Minor, colored, detaining a woman against her will, 2 years. Four prisoners in a string is an unusually large number to be sent to the pen from this county at one term of the court, there seldom being more than one.

The last grand jury returned only three indictments, the parties to two of them being in jail when court convened.

The probability is that circuit court will dispose of more business this week than it did last week.

The remains of poor Frank Russell were consigned to mother earth last Thursday afternoon in the presence of a very large concourse of sorrowing friends, the interment being in the Hood cemetery at the top of the hill overlooking Constance. After brief religious exercises at the residence by Rev. Carter, of Petersburg, Venus Lodge of Odd-Fellows, of Florence, of which the deceased was a beloved member for probably a quarter of a century, took charge of the funeral and escorted the body to its last earthly resting place. The body was in the river forty-two days, and when found had on it all the clothing, the watch, some money and a small pocket memorandum book, the hat alone being lost. The finding and proper interment of the remains were a great relief to the family and also to the entire community in which no man was more esteemed as was attested by the very large crowd that attended his funeral.

In Loving Remembrance.

Mr. James Snyder, one of our old and highly esteemed citizens, died at his home here, Tuesday afternoon, March 30th, 1909, after a prolonged feebleness and a short illness. For years he had suffered from partial paralysis and at the time of his death was past 80 years of age. His funeral took place from his late home on Thursday, April 1st, being conducted by Rev. Robert Carter, after which the remains were interred in the Petersburg cemetery. Mr. Snyder was a faithful member of the Christian church and possessed that kind and loving disposition which so few possess. In all his years of suffering he was never known to murmer.

As a citizen, "Uncle Jimmy," as he was familiarly known, has ever been highly esteemed, holding positions of honor, and trust in his home town where he has always worked for the upbuilding and good of those around him, though by ill health deprived of active work in the latter years of life. He leaves to mourn his death an affectionate wife, one daughter, Mrs Glenn Dodd, of Terra Hante, Indiana, and two sons, David, of Cincinnati, and William, of this place, who have been such a comfort to him in his declining days.

May we not indulge the hope that the flitting of his spirit to elysian fields may be an inspiration to all who knew and loved him, to a life of nobler deeds and a more fixed determination to meet him where the bloom of youth shall never fade, the sparkling eyes never grow dim and happiness reigns supreme forever.

We tender to the bereaved ones our deepest sympathy and conclude our feeble testimonial to the loved one with a tear and a flower upon the mound of earth above him.

A TRUE FRIEND.

CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress from Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes in Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach, it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22 grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery:

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring: the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice: your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Words To Freeze the Soul.

"Your son has Consumption. His case is hopeless" These appalling words were spoken to Geo. E. Blevens, a leading merchant of Springfield, N. C. by two expert doctors—one a lung specialist. Then was shown the wonderful power of Dr. King's New Discovery "After three weeks use," writes Mr. Blevens, "he was as well as ever. I would not take all the money in the world for what it did for my boy" Infallible for Coughs and Colds its the safest, surest cure of desperate Lung diseases on earth. 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Beutler's drug store, Erlanger.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions of sympathy and respect adopted by East Bend Lodge, No. 114, Knights of Pythias, March 27, 1909.

Whereas, Our Supreme Ruler, Almighty God, in his infinite wisdom and mercy, has removed from this earth, Mrs. Jane K. Wilson, the venerable mother and grandmother of our brothers Benj., Geo. H., R. M., Samuel C. and H. J. Wilson, therefore be it resolved, 1st, That in her death we recognize that we have lost a neighbor and friend and one of our oldest residents, and that our brothers have lost a kind and devoted mother and grandmother, and to them we extend our deepest sympathy and commend them to the care and guidance of Him who doeth all things for the best.

2nd, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this lodge and a copy sent to the bereaved ones and a copy sent to the Boone County RECORDER for publication.

Committee—Joe H. Walton, J. Colin Kelly, R. T. Stephens.

Messrs. Ed Farrell and Arthur Stevenson, of Verona, were here last Wednesday in the interest of the wool pool, consequently those in the south end of the county desiring to pool their wool should see those gentlemen, who have the necessary papers, which are being signed by numerous growers in their part of the county.

NOTICE OF ELECTION—There will be a meeting of stockholders of the Bullittsville & Dry Creek Turnpike Road Company at the residence of Mrs. Belle Clore, near Hebron, on Monday, May 3, 1909, for the purpose of electing a President and five Directors to serve said company the ensuing year.

There May Be

as good flour made as

Capitol

and no doubt there is; but we do not believe there is any better made.

Capitol

is as white as any unbleached flour can be made and has all the good baking qualities not always found in other flour.

June 1st will see the end of the unhealthy, chemical bleaching of flour by injecting Nitrogen Peroxide into it for Uncle Sam has decided that is injurious.

Optimist Day.

Folly will give place to a better kind of joyousness if the optimist can induce the American people to steal from the calendar the day that has its roots in English tradition as All Fools' Day, says the Baltimore American. There is really no reason for the perpetuation of this purely English institution in this country. It has degenerated into a day for questionable witticisms and has no signification that endears it to the minds of the intelligent people. The proposition to convert it into a day for sunshine, for cheery salutation, for the sweeping of life's way with the beams of gladness comes from the Optimist club. This is one of the finest organizations in the country, whose tenets are tonic, whose prescriptions are invigorating, whose pass words are brotherly greetings. Its ends are admirable. It points up to the blue.

Such men as Andrew Carnegie and Rev. Dr. Silcer are leaders in the undertaking to give a realistic turn to the whimsicality of the English essayist to extract sunshine from cucumbers. All Fools' Day should be taken from clownish pranks and be made to bear tribute to the spirit of the season. The beginning of April, even when in tears, is radiated with sunshine and well pictures forth life itself. So that the first day of April would be a fine day to dedicate to the spirit of optimism that is so strong in the breasts of Americans. It would be a purely American holiday and should serve a fine purpose and give national emphasis to the brighter views of life. Optimist Day would spread the gospel of a smile.

The San Francisco graft prosecutions differ from all other similar efforts for civic purity. They have become almost an institution, proving that such endeavors for honesty and the square deal are not necessarily sporadic, leading only to reaction. They serve also as a continual warning to corrupt officials and corrupting special interests in other American cities, says the Kansas City Star. The dramatic incident, where Heney's and Burn's men made wholesale arrests among the attorneys and special retainers of "the men higher up," was likewise a refreshing demonstration that the state, when represented by aggressive, resourceful servants, can exert as much ingenuity and pertinacity for promoting a fair trial as rich and powerful defendants can and do for defeating justice. Interest in the fight for municipal square dealing in San Francisco has not languished, as the cynics and lawbreakers usually count upon its doing. On the contrary, it has grown, and to-day there is no public action of more dramatic intensity transpiring on the American political stage than the splendid effort for right things in the Pacific coast city.

A trapper has come in from a remote part of northwestern Canada and reported that during the winter there was a period of 50 days when the thermometer never indicated less than 38 degrees below zero. This is "going some" even for that latitude. And the trapper will not find himself fondly loved by those Canadians who dislike Kipling's characterization and who wish to attract immigrants, including well-to-do American farmers, to the northwest, under the impression that the sub-arctic section is not a bad second to the sub-tropic one on this side of the line.

Eighteen hundred and nine has been called "the year of genius" because so many famous men were born in that year. Abraham Lincoln undoubtedly leads the list of statesmen, Charles Darwin heads the list in science, Tennyson and Holmes in literature and Mendelssohn in music. Of these Darwin and Lincoln were born on the same day. In many respects the century just closed has seen more done for humanity than any other in our era.

In spite of revolutions, mosquitoes and freight rates, Central America manages to trade its banana crop for prosperity. The banana plant is as industrious as it is picturesque, working all the year round, nights, Sundays and legal holidays and while the owner sleeps. When a self-picking banana plant is developed and the flying machine allows the owner to flit north with his crop under his own wings life in that locality will be indeed endurable.

In order to prevent elder children being kept at home "to look after baby," the London county council is trying the experiment of appointing "baby-minders," who will take care of the babies in the school buildings during school hours.

Assurances that walking is as hard to learn as aeroplaning may content the mind of the aviating enthusiast. But the loss of equilibrium in walking does not invite such serious consequences.

MURDER ARMENIANS

SLAYING OF TWO MOSLEMS AVENGED BY 6,000 ENRAGED TURKS.

AMERICANS ARE IN DANGER

Massacre Occurs at Mersina Where the Christians Have Missions—Mutinous Marines Lynch Vice-Admiral in Constantinople.

Constantinople.—Reports from Mersina, a seaport of Asia Minor on the Mediterranean, Thursday, told of a massacre of Armenians by Turks, in which it is feared many were killed.

Enraged at the murder of two Moslems by an Armenian and the fact that the assassin was not apprehended, the Mohammedan population of Mersina, which counts a total of 10,000 inhabitants, took the law into its own hands and attacked the Armenian quarters.

The Christian communities of Mersina are appealing to the consuls here for help.

Two American missions are represented at Mersina.

The trouble at Mersina is in no way connected with the political upheaval at Constantinople of the last two days. It involves a recrudescence of the Armenian question, which is religious and racial, and has nothing to do with the internal policies of Turkey.

Mersina is 36 miles by rail southeast of the city of Adana. It counts 6,000 Mohammedans and some 3,500 Christians. It has a station of the synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church in North America and an outstation of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. The record of 1907 shows that Rev. C. A. Dodds, Rev. R. J. Dodds and Miss Evadna M. Sterrett were stationed at Mersina.

The third day of the revolutionary movement in this city was marked by some disorders, the most serious of which was a demonstration by marines, who objected to the new minister of marine, Vice-Admiral Adjiemin Pasha. The marines gathered in force Thursday and seized and conveyed to the palace Arif Bey, commander of the battleship Assari-Tewfik, a member of the Committee on Union and Progress, who ordered the guns of his ship trained on the Yildiz Kiosk when the rising was at its height, with the intention of supporting the committee.

Arrived at the Yildiz Kiosk the men lynched Arif Bey, notwithstanding the efforts of the palace guard to save him. Although public confidence is by no means restored by the formation of the new cabinet, an excellent impression has been produced by the appointment of Nazim Pasha as commander of the First Army corps, and this has been strengthened by the nomination of Memduh Pasha, another able Adrianople officer, to command the First division at Constantinople. Edhem Pasha, the new minister of war, and Nazim Pasha made the round of the barracks in the city and exhorted the soldiers to obey their officers. They were well received and cheered.

Constantinople. — Information received here Friday from Adana, in Asiatic Turkey, declares that two American missionaries have been killed in the anti-Armenian outbreak at that place.

Ambassador Leishman instructed the American vice-consul at Mersina, John Debbas, to proceed immediately for Adana and report on the situation.

France has sent two warships to the scene.

TWO BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Explosion of a Nitroglycerin Factory at Gordon, Ill., Is Felt Twenty-Five Miles Away.

Sullivan, Ind.—With a detonation which was heard for 25 miles, the shock of which was felt in an area of 50 miles, the nitroglycerin factory at Gordon, Ill., across the Wabash river from this place, was destroyed by a terrific explosion late Thursday afternoon.

Charles Dewels and Moses Lantz were blown to atoms. Owing to the fact that Gordon has no long distance telephone communication and that its connection with the farm lines was destroyed by the explosion, the first rumors of the loss of life were exaggerated, one report putting the number of killed at 30. The fact, however, is that only two men were allowed to work in the factory at one time.

Old Battleship Made Over.

New York. — After being out of commission for more than two years, the old battleship Massachusetts sailed out of the Brooklyn navy yard Thursday with a full complement of officers and men. The vessel was built by the Cramps in 1893 and has been largely made over so that she is almost as good as the battleships of much later types.

Church War Reaches Court.

Nashville, Tenn.—The federal courts have again been called upon to say who is entitled to possession, the use, and the enjoyment of property claimed respectively by Cumberland Presbyterians and Presbyterians of the U. S. A., who went into the latter church from the Cumberland.

Milling Company Bankrupt.

Chillicothe, O.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed by the Marfield Milling Company of this city Friday.

GOING UP.

15 DIE IN A HOTEL FIRE

FRISCO HOSTELRY ABLAZE AS PATRONS SLEEP.

Nearly 200 in Bed When Flames Start—Bodies Taken from Ruins.

San Francisco.—Six bodies recovered and eight or ten others buried in the ruins; six injured, one fatally, and property loss of $125,000, are the results of a fire Friday that destroyed the St. George hotel, a lodging house for laborers at Howard and Eighth streets, and eight other small buildings. The bodies taken to the morgue were so charred that identification was impossible.

The hotel was a three-story frame building and burned so rapidly that none of the 180 guests had time to dress, and many escaped by jumping to the roof of an adjoining workshop. Scores clambered down the ladders of the firemen and the fire escapes, and at least four jumped to safety into the net held by the fire fighters.

When the fire was discovered shortly after three o'clock, Night Clerk Arthur Gronhk, three or four other employes, and Policeman W. F. Kruger ran through the house arousing the sleeping tenants.

In the smoke-filled halls they directed the half-crazed men to the exits. Great confusion and panic prevailed, so that it was with great difficulty that men were able to find their way through the labyrinth of halls which threaded the 400 small rooms.

Firemen and police worked heroically, and but for their efforts the loss of life would have been much greater.

Two hundred people were in the hotel when the fire broke out. One hundred and thirty of these were regular boarders, and the rest transients. Of the regular boarders 30 were unaccounted for, but many of them escaped in the confusion, and neglected to report their safety.

Rochester, N. Y.—The act of a fire bug which Tuesday rendered 1,000 persons homeless, when flames swept the city, has caused terror here. The militia is parading the streets guarding the few articles of furniture saved by the victims.

Swept along in the face of a 25-mile gale, the fire destroyed several sections of the city and did damage estimated at $1,000,000. It is believed the fire is of incendiary origin and the police are investigating.

Prison for Soul Mater.

Chicago.—Marion Grey of the Searchlight club of Elgin, Ill., must serve one year in a prison cell for her work in mating souls of rich but lonesome men and handsome but lovesick widows.

Judge Landis' sentence in the case was Tuesday affirmed by the United States circuit court of appeals. No error was found in the records and the attorney for the girl matrimonial agent, Elijah N. Zoline, who took her case after a reported squabble between Miss Grey and her trial counsel, was informed in the decision that "if any error was committed it was invited error."

Emporia, Kan.—Griffith Hughes, aged 18 years, died Friday as the result of having been shot by his younger brother, Owen, who mistook him for a burglar and fired upon him in the dark.

SOUNDS ROOSEVELT PRAISE.

Senator Cummins Places Ex-President Ahead of Washington and Lauds Aldrich and Cannon.

Washington.—Senator Albert B. Cummins, the strenuous former governor of Iowa, who succeeded Senator Allison in the upper house of congress, jarred the Men's club of Mount Pleasant Congregational church with the statement that Roosevelt was greater than Washington.

While his hearers were trying to adjust themselves to that point of view, Senator Cummins ran in the statement that Daniel Webster was a dub compared with Senator Aldrich, and that Henry Clay was not in Speaker Cannon's class.

"Theodore Roosevelt," said the senator in his talk to the church club, "I consider a stronger man than George Washington, the 'Father of His Country.' Perhaps this sounds like treason, but it is not meant for that. Theodore Roosevelt, it is well known, faced problems day after day which Gen. Washington could never have met with success, but from which he would have had to recoil helpless.

GOTCH AN EASY WINNER.

World's Wrestling Champion Defeats Turk in Two Straight Falls Without Trouble.

Chicago. — Frank Gotch of Iowa, the world's heavyweight wrestling champion, Wednesday night in Dexter Park pavilion easily defeated Yusiff Mahmout, the latest importation of "terrible Turks." Gotch won the match in straight falls.

It took the champion only eight minutes to pin the shoulders of Mahmout to the mat in the first fall. The Turk stayed one minute longer when they faced each other the next time and went down after nine minutes of struggling. Gotch showed his superiority at every angle of the game and the great crowd was surprised as well as disappointed at the poor showing of Yusslf.

Gotch won both falls with a crotch and half nelson and made no effort to get his famous toe hold on the Turk.

Celebrated Defaulter Free.

Ossining, N. Y. — A celebrated defalcation case was recalled by the release from Sing Sing prison of Cornelius J. Alvord, formerly note teller of the First National bank of New York city. Alvord was sentenced to a total of 13 years' imprisonment on January 16, 1901, for making false entries in the books of the first National bank to cover up defalcations said to have aggregated $620,000, extending over a period of several years.

Nelson to Fight McFarland.

Chicago.—Battling Nelson and Packey McFarland Friday signed an agreement to fight for the lightweight championship of the world before James Coffroth's club at Colma, Cal., July 5. The winner gets 75 and the loser 25 per cent. of the receipts. They are to weigh 133 pounds at eight o'clock in the morning and the battle is to take place at 2:30 in the afternoon.

Women Clean Capital Streets.

Washington.—Carrying out their pledge for a cleaner Washington, "white wings" in the persons of society matrons and others were out in full force bright and early Thursday supervising the clearing the streets of the city of all floating paper and debris not gathered up by the rubbish carts. The scheme which was inaugurated by the women of the Twentieth Century club, was that the city should be free of all floating debris. The appearance of the streets Friday indicates the movement was a success.

CHARGE CUDAHYS WITH FRAUD

PACKING COMPANY INDICTED ON 659 COUNTS AT TOPEKA.

Federal Grand Jury Charges Use of Coloring and Evasion of Law—Denied by Company Official.

Topeka, Kan.—The Cudahy Packing Company of Kansas City, Kan., is charged in indictments returned by the federal grand jury Friday with defrauding the government out of $135,000 by violating the law relating to oleomargarine. There are 695 counts, for each of which the penalty is $1,000.

The revenue law provides that each pound of uncolored oleomargarine must bear a revenue stamp of a quarter of a cent, but that on each pound to which coloring matter has been added to give it the appearance of butter, a ten-cent revenue stamp must be attached.

It is charged in the indictments that the Cudahy Company has sold the colored product under the quarter of a cent tax and consequently has defrauded the government out of large sums.

Inspectors have been working on the case several months and have secured samples sold in towns and cities from New York to Seattle and from Duluth to Jacksonville.

Every sample now in the hands of the government experts bears the identification mark of the inspector who purchased it, as well as the analysis which shows that it contains coloring matter.

It is claimed by the government officials that the Cudahy Company has succeeded in monopolizing the oleomargarine market by selling the colored product and paying the tax on the basis of uncolored, there being a difference of 9¾ cents a pound. By this means, it is claimed, they were enabled to undersell other manufacturers and control the market.

While this criminal action, which provides for a minimum fine of $695,000, will be prosecuted, District Attorney Bene says it does not end the matter. He will bring a civil action against the company to have the plant and machinery used in the manufacture of oleomargarine confiscated.

Washington.—Internal revenue officials said government agents have examined a very large number of samples of oleomargarine in many parts of the country sold by the Cudahy company, and that while it would not be expedient to estimate the amount of taxes involved in the alleged frauds, it is known that the officials believe it will be in excess of $125,000, and possibly a much larger sum.

OHIO RIVER STEAMER SINKS.

Fifty Panic-Stricken Passengers Saved by Crew When the Virginia Goes Down.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Following a remarkable series of accidents and a tempestuous voyage, the steamer Virginia, from Cincinnati, O., to Pittsburg, was finally wrecked in the Ohio river at Wellsville, O., Tuesday night.

The boat, the largest plying the upper Ohio, went down close to shore after striking a rock and tearing a hole three feet long in the hull. The passengers, numbering 50, in a highly nervous condition as a result of minor accidents earlier in the evening, became panic-stricken when the vessel met with the last accident, and it was with difficulty a crew of 75 men restrained them.

Although handicapped by darkness a high wind and drenching rain, the crew managed to place the passengers safely in boats and put them ashore. From here they were taken, scantily clad, to a fire engine house in Wellsville, O., and later reached the warmth of a hotel in a patrol wagon.

When some distance from shore the steamer struck an obstruction with terrific force. The boat jarred mightily and the passengers were thrown from their berths.

ROB ILLINOIS BANK OF $1,900

Woodlawn Institution, However, Is Insured Against Desperadoes—Bandits at Wellsville, Mo.

Mount Vernon, Ill.—The bank at Woodlawn, a small town seven miles west of here on the Louisville & Nashville railroad, was robbed Thursday. Five masked men dynamited the safe, wrecking it and the interior of the building, and escaped with $1,900 in currency. The bank was insured against robbery.

Wellsville, Mo.—Four masked robbers blew open the safe of the post office here and escaped with a small quantity of stamps and one registered letter. The explosion aroused the town, but citizens were held back at the points of revolvers.

Secretary Wilson Is Upheld.

Washington. — Attorney General Wickersham has rendered an opinion that the referee board appointed by Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture to investigate foods and food products, was a legally constituted body.

Adlai Stevenson Better.

Chicago.—Former Vice-President Adlai E. Stevenson, who has been a patient for the last week at the Presbyterian hospital, has so far recovered that he expects to return to his home in Bloomington, Ill., the first part of next week. Gen. Stevenson came to Chicago last week and had a minor operation performed.

Fatally Burned by Blast.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Michael McGarvey was fatally burned in a fire in a rooming house on Huron street Friday.

SAVING PAINT MONEY

It Cannot Be Done by Using Cheap Material and Cheap Painters.

In arranging for painting, a good many property-owners try to save money by employing the painter who offers to do the job cheapest—or try to save money by insisting on a low-priced paint. But no property-owner would run such risks if he realized what must be taken into consideration in order to get a job that will wear and give thorough satisfaction.

No housewomer will go wrong on the painting question if he writes National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, for their Housewner's Painting Outfit No. 49, which is sent free. It is a complete guide to painting. It includes a book of color schemes for either exterior or interior painting, a book of specifications, and an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint materials.

Nearly every dealer has National Lead Company's pure white lead, (Dutch Boy Painter trademark.) If yours has not notify National Lead Co., and arrangements will be made for you to get it.

The total number of sailing vessels in the world is double that of steamers.

Fifteen cities of the United States have 300,000 population or over.

JUST DOUBLE

320 ACRES INSTEAD OF 160 ACRES

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

"It would take time to assimilate the revelations that a visit to the great empire lying to the North of us unfolded at every turn."—Correspondence of a National Editor, who visited Western Canada in August, 1908.

CONDENSED FOR BUSY PEOPLE.

Hotel Keepers' Association Meets in Louisville and Elects Officers—Parcels Post Condemned as Detrimental to the Hotel Business.

Louisville, Ky.—The following officers were elected by the Kentucky Hotel Keepers' association, in convention here: Nic Bosler, Louisville, president; H. G. Dougherty, Maysville, vice president; R. L. Parks, Pineville, treasurer, and W. D. Claybrooke, Springfield, secretary. The president was instructed to appoint an executive committee to consist of five members, whose duty it will be to look out for the interests of the association and keep in touch generally with the situation concerning the hotel men of the state, and to consider and advise in regard to legislation desired. Resolutions condemning as detrimental to the hotel business the parcels post were adopted before adjournment. The committee on laws was instructed to draw up a draft to be introduced at the next legislature which will permit the hotel keepers to hold and sell the baggage of the guests who leave without paying their bills.

CHARGES RENEWED

By Secretary of State Bruner of Mismanagement of Citizens' Life Insurance Co.

Louisville, Ky.—At the regular quarterly meeting of the directors of the Citizens' Life Insurance Co., held here, Secretary of State Ben. L. Bruner, one of the directors of the company, renewed his charges that the officers of the concern were mismanaging its affairs. One of Dr. Bruner's allegations is that the company is advertising its business extensively, and is not giving to the public a true statement of its condition. It was announced that the Citizens' Life Insurance Co. would not take over the Southern Life Insurance Co. of North Carolina, as another company had purchased the business of the Carolina concern. However, B. W. Lacey, Jr., a former vice president of the North Carolina company, has come to the Citizens' Life as director of agencies. President Gregory said that the directors had decided not to declare any dividends on the capital stock of the Citizens' Life for 1909. One director of the company made the assertion that Commissioner Bell intended to ask the removal of R. E. Gregory as vice president of the Citizens' Life, and the reduction of all salaries of officers to the 1908 basis, salaries having been raised the first of the present year.

DEATH OF CHAS. J. BRONSTON.

One of the Best Known Lawyers and Politicians in Kentucky Dies at Lexington.

Lexington, Ky.—This city was shocked by the announcement of the death of ex-State Senator Charles J. Bronston, 60, one of the best-known lawyers and politicians in Kentucky. He was a sufferer from heart disease, which caused his death. Senator Bronston figured largely in the affairs of the state and had a large acquaintance. He was state senator from 1895 to 1899, being elected from the Lexington district. He came originally from Richmond, Madison county. He was at one time commonwealth's attorney, and figured in numerous brilliant legal battles. The late Gov. William Goebel always regarded Bronston as one of his warmest friends and supporters. He was a graduate of the Transylvania university and former law partner of Senator McCreary.

Arrested for Stealing Tobacco.

Mayfield, Ky.—Walter Cosby and Walter Martin were arrested on charges of stealing tobacco from barns of neighbors. It is alleged that they took more than 1,000 pounds of tobacco and sold it at Paducah, having the checks for payment made in fictitious names.

Mayor Begins Investigation.

Louisville, Ky.—Mayor Grinstead has begun an investigation of Charles Hoefin, superintendent of the Jefferson county workhouse, who is charged with having permitted table furnishings and supplies of the workhouse to be sent to his brother's restaurant.

Found Guilty of Manslaughter.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—In the circuit court John Hawkins, an aged white man, was found guilty of manslaughter. He killed Horace Reynolds, in this county, 14 years ago. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. He was caught over a year ago.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—Miss Mary Vance Prewitt and John Turley, both of this city, eloped to Ironton, O., and were married. Miss Prewitt is the 16-year-old daughter of Hon. Henry R. Prewitt, democratic state chairman, who objected because of her age.

Lexington, Ky.—Some 5,000 members of the Benevolent Order of Odd Fellows attended the laying of the corner stone of the new $75,000 administration building at the Odd Fellows' Widows' and Orphans' home, in this city.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Dedication of New Capitol.

The special committee from the Business Men's club to arrange the program for the dedication of the capitol has completed its work. The city will entertain all former governors, senators and members of the legislature who attend, and the affair, which will be held about July 1, will be the biggest of the kind ever given in Central Kentucky. Preparations will be made to entertain 20,000 people.

Must Surrender Deposit.

After hearing the arguments of the attorneys for the state and the Sun Life Insurance Co. Judge R. L. Stout decided that the State of Kentucky must turn over to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York, which reinsured the Sun Life, the $100,000 on deposit in securities in the state treasury to protect the policy holders.

Ex-County Clerk Cleared.

Charles N. Provence, of London, Laurel county, will not have to stand trial on the charge of forgery in connection with his former services as county clerk of Laurel county. Provence returned to his desk in the office of Auditor James, bringing with him a copy of the order dismissing the indictment that had been found against him. The indictment was dismissed by Judge William Lewis.

Appellate Court Decision.

By affirming the judgment of the Mason circuit court, in the case of W. A. Rist's assignee, of Aberdeen, O., against the Mitchell, Finch & Co. bank of Maysville, the appellate court decided that it was not necessary to incorporate in the charter of a bank in Kentucky the provision that it may do business in other states, for all banks have that privilege.

State Will Collect Money Overpaid.

Auditor James is going to enforce the collection of money overpaid to the assessors and sheriffs of counties that are assessed at less than $34,000,000. He has discovered that both the assessors and sheriffs of Kenton and Fayette counties have been overpaid and he will notify them that the money must be returned to the state.

Work of Equalization Board.

The state board of equalization increased the assessment of Adair county 4 per cent on all property. In Anderson county the preliminary raise of 8 per cent on town lots was made final. For Logan county there is a raise of 2 per cent on all property.

Columbia's New Field.

State Insurance Commissioner Bell admitted the Columbia Life Insurance Co., of Cincinnati, to business in the Kentucky field. The company has $175,000 capital stock. Major S. R. Crumbaugh, formerly of Hopkinsville is state agent of the company.

Old Taxes Can Not Be Collected.

In the state fiscal court here Judge R. L. Stout decided that taxes, older than five years, could not be collected and granted a restraining order against Auditor James trying to collect such taxes in this county.

A Day's Doings in Kentucky

Lexington, Ky.—All of the 530 stalls at the Kentucky association course are occupied or pre-empted, and many of the outside of the grounds have been reserved.

Lexington, Ky.—Local millers advanced the price of flour another 20 cents per hundred. It is now retailing here at $8 per barrel, the highest price in 35 years.

Lexington, Ky.—Miami, J. N. Camden's Kentucky Derby candidate worked a mile in 1:49 1-5 over a muddy track and around the dogs at the Kentucky association course in a trial heat.

Louisville, Ky.—Unusual conduct on the part of an invited guest attended the hanging of William Carter, colored, in the jail yard here. Lee Davis, 20, attempted to rob another guest of a diamond scarf pin just as Carter was swung into eternity.

Louisville, Ky.—Col. Biscoe Hind man, of Louisville, one of the best known insurance men in the south, has been tendered the management of the United States offices of the Norwich Union Life Insurance Co., of England which was granted the first license ever issued to an English society in the United States.

Louisville, Ky.—Democratic State Chairman Henry R. Prewitt, Will A. Young, of Morehead, and Col. John H. Whallen, of Louisville, with Eugene Gardner, nephew of Appellate Judge O'Rear, who was acquitted in the federal court at San Francisco for the murder of a deckhand on a whaleboat in the Pacific ocean, arrived in this city.

Lexington, Ky.—Secretary J. D. Clark, of the Fayette county board of control of the Burley Tobacco Society, says he believes that if as large a crop is raised this year, as is now indicated the society will control more than 90 per cent of the crop.

Maysville, Ky.—W. B. Cropper's store at Burtonville, Lewis county, was blown up by a bomb thrown by an enemy. Bloodhounds have been sent from Maysville. No one was hurt in the explosion. The postoffice is in the store.

WILL LEAD INSURGENT FIGHT FOR LOW TARIFF

Senator Root Opposed To Aldrich Schedule and Will Demand Duty Reductions on All Necessities.

Washington, April 19.—At the proper time a motion will be made to recommit the Aldrich tariff bill to the senate finance committee with instructions to reduce the duties on certain necessaries of life. This motion will come from Republican insurgent senators.

Senator Elihu Root of New York is expected to make the motion, or at least to aid materially in the effort to have the bill recommitted. He does not like the bill and is making his objections to be known in forcible terms.

The tariff debate in the senate will begin Monday immediately after close of routine business. Senator Aldrich will open the proceedings with a general statement in support of the bill, and will be followed by Senator Daniel, senior, Democratic member, who will outline the Democratic position.

Senator Aldrich will go into detailed explanation of the various changes made by the committee, and, it is understood, will undertake to show that the bill as reported will be a strong revenue producer. Senator Daniel and other Democrats will take the opposite view. They declare the weakness of the Payne-Aldrich bill is found in the fact that it will not insure sufficient income to permit governmental business to proceed without addition of other features which will put money into the national treasury. Some Republican senators are in sympathy with this view.

Democratic senators will urge an income tax as the most rational and most prolific means of increasing the receipts. All of them will support an income tax provision and several strenuously will urge a tax on all dealings in futures. They will have the support of some Republican senators, but will not receive any assistance from members of the committee on finance, as they take the position that with greater economy and improved business conditions, which all are predicting, the bill will insure sufficient revenue to meet the demands of the government.

There will not be any sharp dividing lines between general debate and the discussion of amendments, but it is expected that immediately after the close of the Aldrich and Daniel speeches the reading of the bill will proceed with a view to considering amendments. If senators desire to make set speeches, even on the general subject of the tariff, they will be permitted in connection with consideration of different schedules.

The house will be in session on Monday and Thursday only, and no business will be done on either day, beyond making provision for the next census.

STRICKEN BY POISON

Are the Fourteen College Students Who Partook of a Club Dinner at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia., April 19.—Seven Des Moines college co-eds and seven male students Sunday night are in convulsions and one of them may die, following an attack of mysterious poisoning after dinner at the Kamaraderie and Altruria clubs.

Milk was the one article taken in common by all the sufferers, but an examination of the fluid by State Chemist W. F. Frisbie and State Dairy Commissioner H. R. Wright failed to disclose ptomaines or other injurious bacteria.

Those stricken suddenly are: Miss Margaret Estel, Minnie Baker, Edith Anderson, Ruth Calvert, Dorothy Tinland, Edith Johnson, Emery Pease, Edward Hawkins, B. J. Powers, E. E. Clayton, Elmer Carter, Fred and Clarence Workman, the latter captain of Des Moines baseball and track teams.

Powers fell in convulsions at the door of his room and was stricken blind. It was feared at first he would die, but his condition is improved Sunday night.

Seven of the victims are in a precarious condition. Commissioner Wright said he believed tyrotoxicon poison in the milk is responsible for the attack.

Killed By Playmate.

Meridian, Miss., April 19.—Lucien Clayton is dead as the result of playing "William Tell" with his playmate, Andrew Davis. The lads were hunting and a small-caliber rifle was the weapon used. Young Clayton held the target for Davis and received a bullet in the body, which caused death a few hours afterward.

Quite a Blaze.

Helena, Ark., April 19.—Fire of unknown origin in the business section of Helena, Sunday, caused a loss of $100,000, with insurance estimated at $50,000.

Holland's Gift.

Amsterdam, April 19.—The ship Halve Maan, which The Netherlands will present to the United States on the occasion of the Hudson-Fulton fetes, was launched Saturday. She will be completed and sent to New York in the early part of July.

First Boat Through.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 19.—The City of Erie, the first passenger boat to arrive here this spring, docked Sunday afternoon. She brought 100 passengers from Cleveland. The steamer had no difficulty getting through the ice.

GENEROUS.

Clarence Dubb—May I have this dance, Miss Sharply?

Miss Sharply—Certainly! I don't want it!

A Hot Time All Around.

Lawyer—What did the prisoner say when you accused him of arson?

Witness—He answered with heat that such a charge was a burning shame.

PERUNA

For Catarrh of the Throat of Two Years' Standing.

"I was afflicted for two years with catarrh of the throat. At first it was very slight, but every cold I took made it worse.

"I followed your directions and in a very short time I began to improve. I took one bottle and am now taking my second. I can safely say that my throat and head are cleared from catarrh at the present time, but I still continue to take my usual dose for a spring tonic, and I find there is nothing better."—Mrs. W. Pray, 280 Twelfth St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Let Me Tell You Something

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is to blame for her own wretched condition.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what these women say:

Camden, N. J.—"It is with pleasure that I send my testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, hoping it may induce other suffering women to avail themselves of the benefit of this valuable remedy.

"I suffered from pains in my back and side, sick headaches, no appetite, was tired and nervous all the time, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman—and this valuable medicine shall always have my praise."—Mrs. W. P. Valentine, 902 Lincoln Ave., Camden, N. J.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles, and at last was almost helpless. I tried three doctors but they did me no good. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me well and strong. I hope all suffering women will just give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it is worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. 7, Erie, Pa.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for her advice—it is free and always helpful.

Your Last Chance to Get Good Land Cheap

lies in Idaho. Good land at such prices will soon be gone forever. Fine farm tracts can be had now at low prices, on easy terms. By the time your last payment is made the land will have doubled in value, at least.

New towns—needing trades—are growing up fast in the wonderful Snake River country. Men who went there poor a few years ago are now well to do.

Own An Idaho Farm

Idaho's variety of resources is unsurpassed anywhere in the world—money is made easily and quickly in farming, in fruit, stock and dairying. Alfalfa alone is making hundreds rich.

C. PRESLEY ADAMS.

The first game of base ball for this season was played here last Saturday, the Walton club crossing bats with the Williamstown nine, the score being eleven to two in favor of the Walton club. There was a good sized attendance and the playing was very good. Robert Coffman pitched and Stanley Rich of Big Bone Springs, caught for the Walton club.

Walton Odd-Fellows Lodge conferred the Degree of Friendship on N. T. Welsh at the meeting last week and conferred the Degree of Brotherly Love on Bro. Welsh last night. The lodge is in a prosperous condition and is doing a good work here. Bro. Welsh is the lineman for the Western Union Telegraph Company at this point, and being so used to climbing high poles he had no difficulty in riding the goat.

Chas. W. Renaker, of Dry Ridge, is spending a couple of weeks here going over the details of the banking system in the Equitable Bank and Trust Co., preparatory to going to Enterprise, Kansas, to open a bank. Mr. Renaker was formerly cashier of the Peoples Bank at Glencoe, but he found the system in the Equitable Bank so much better than any other he had knowledge of in other banks that he concluded to adopt it, as it is less complicated and more clearly understood, and less chance for errors.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Bailey and two daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Davis, all of Cincinnati, were here Monday in their automobile, coming to visit the stock farm of S. C. Hicks and inspect the stable of Benj. B. Allphin. Mr. Davis bought a fine span of carriage horses from Mr. Hicks for $400, and Mr. Bailey purchased two fine saddle horses from Mr. Allphin for his daughters, paying $550 for them. Mr. Bailey is the owner of the Cincinnati Transfer Co., and Mr. Davis is the superintendent of the Cincinnati Omnibus Company.

HORSE SHOW—There will be a horse show at Walton, Saturday, May 1st, beginning at one o'clock. As the breeding season has just opened and much inquiry is being made about horses, and prices are encouraging to raise a few good horses, this show ought to be well attended as it stimulates the business and gives the public better ideas as to how to breed with the kind of mares they possess. Kentucky has almost lost out in the horse business chiefly because no one has been giving it any particular attention, but now since prices are looking up it will pay to give the horse interest more attention. Come to the show, and bring your horse. Remember Saturday, May 1st, is the day.

Joe E. Green, of Big Bone, was a visitor here last Thursday.

J. T. Roberts, of Verona, spent the day here Saturday on business.

Miss Gemla Graham spent part of the past week in Cincinnati shopping.

Ralph Edwards and Fred Holden spent Thursday at Latonia on business.

G. Wesley Murphy, private secretary to P. A. Alexander, Chief Clerk of the Freight Department of the L. & N. R. R. Co., at Cincinnati, was here a few days last week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Murphy.

J. Kirtley Roberts has had remarkable success in hatching of a new breed of chickens, which are known as the "Speckle Jay." Mr. Roberts set 78 eggs, and the hens hatched 71, all of which are living and are strong and healthy.

Owen S. Watts spent the past week in Ohio and Indiana making purchases of wool for a Louisville firm. He states that he never failed to make a purchase everywhere he visited, as he is paying the highest market price.

John C. Miller and Chas. A. Slater spent last Thursday in Cincinnati on business. Mr. Slater is a partner in the Walton Mercantile Company, and Mr. Miller owns a store at Landing, but resides at Walton where he is the assistant cashier of the Equitable Bank.

Joe Stapleton and sister Loretta, the little children of Mr. and Mrs. James Stapleton, of near Beaver Lick, returned home last Wednesday from Bellevue, Campbell county, where they have been visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Madden for some time.

W. L. H. Baker, of Louisville, was a visitor here last Thursday. Mr. Baker and his son, Stewart, spent most of last week at their old home at Big Bone Springs, looking after his property interests there. Mr. Baker is employed in the postoffice at Louisville and is well pleased with his position and location.

Rev. Father Jos. Broerman, of Warsaw, pastor of the Catholic church at Warsaw, Verona and Walton, was a visitor here last Wednesday, being called to attend the bedside of Miss Mary Stapleton of near Beaver Lick, who has been very ill with heart trouble, but we are pleased to say is now improving. Father Broerman has many friends here who are always glad to meet him.

Horatio F. Wood, the merchant and postmaster at Sugar Creek, Gallatin county, and Wm. F. Moore, a prominent farmer of Beaver Lick, spent last Wednesday here with friends. Mr. Wood is prospering in his adopted home and is building up a fine trade. He was born and reared near Big Bone Springs and moved to Gallatin county about 20 years ago, where he is as popular as he was at his old home.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S. CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

The opening game of ball was played here last Saturday afternoon and was the best game of ball the old town has known in years. The Blues won over the picked nine 30 to 7. The principal feature of the game was the pitching of Callahan for the Blues, who had a fairly good assortment of curves and allowed but few hits.

The other day your correspondent over heard a conversation between two farmers, which proved to be very amusing. One good farmer had stored away in the middle of his cellar a barrel of potatoes which he was no doubt saving for extra company, owing to their scarcity and high price. But the company evidently tarried and the warm days came, and aroused the potatoes and they opened their sleepy eyes to find themselves in Egyptian Darkness, and then they began to stretch forth their arms and feel for the casements of the window thru which they knew would steal the coveted light, and which they found after having traveled a distance of 10 feet on either side. When the belated company arrived this was the condition in which the farmer found his treasured barrel of potatoes.

FATTALY SHOT.

Bud Minor, Colored, Shoots and Kills His Cousin, Bud Coleman, Colored.

Last Saturday Bud Coleman and Lee Utz, each aged about 13 years, and colored, went to Gunpowder creek to fish. They were followed by Homer Minor and Bud Minor, colored and age 14 and 11 respectively, taking with them the former's 22 rifle and a supply of shells—22 long. They had not been at the creek long before Bud Minor shot and mortally wounded Bud Coleman, the ball entering the body just below the last rib on the right side. The boy survived the shooting about 30 hours, suffering intensely all the time. How the shooting came about will probably never be known to a certainty, but the boy who was shot made the same statement in regard to the shooting to several persons, telling it the same each time. He says his father had forbidden him having anything to do with the two boys who followed him and his companion to the creek, and that when the boy who did the shooting hallooed, "how are you," from the opposite side of the creek, he paid no attention to him, when he drew the gun and shot him. The boy who did the shooting has told several different stories as to how the shooting happened. The dead boy and the one now in jail are cousins, while the boy with whose gun the shooting was done, is the uncle of each, and would not come home when requested to to inform the unfortunate boys parents what had happened. This action on the part of the larger boy inclines many to the belief that the killing is the result of a family feud which is known to have existed for some time between the two families. At the last term of Boone circuit court an uncle of the dead boy and his slayer was sent to the penitentiary, a sister of the dead boy being the principal prosecuting witness. In that trial considerable feeling was manifested against the dead boy's mother by her father's family. Lee Utz, colored, was some distance from where the shooting was done, and can tell nothing about it. Lloyd Weaver was fishing near, but does not know anything about how the trouble began, and left the scene before he knew knew the extent of the boy's wound. It was about three o'clock when the shooting was done, and it was after six when the wounded boy reached home, Richard Weaver, colored, bringing him in on a sled, a distance of nearly three miles.

County Judge Cason gave the matter an official investigation yesterday, and committed the boy to the State School of Reform until he is 21 years of age, but he will not leave here until the 20th of next month.

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY.

Restoring Confederate Battle Flags.

A Cincinnati dispatch says the news from Columbus that Gov. Harmon has given orders to return to the Confederate veterans in Alabama certain flags captured by the Fourth Ohio Volunteer infantry during the civil war has led to protests and that the department commander of the G. A. R. will be asked to take action enjoining the governor. Among old union soldiers there will be differences of opinion as to the merits of the controversy. A great many will side with Gov. Harmon and hope that the flags will be returned. The sentiment on this subject among the great body of veterans has softened very much since the first administration of President Cleveland, when huge uproar was raised in many parts of the north over the report that the federal government was preparing to send back captured southern battle flags to their original owners. Another Memorial day is aproaching. The sections that were severed during the civil strife have grown together. Eleven years have passed since sons of the north and sons of the south marched side by side under the starry banner of their reunited country, to confront a foreign foe. It is high time to bury all the lingering hatreds of the past—and a very large proportion of the men who did the actual fighting in the civil war have done so.—Exchange.

French and British capital is said to be behind a $50,000,000 scheme for the development of the iron and steel business in Mexico, where there is an abundance of raw materials. Mexico will need an increasing amount of iron and steel, as she is developing rapidly both in population and business, and moreover, trade in these products with South America is developing very rapidly through settlement and business enterprise. The reported Mexican scheme should dictate renewed energy on the part of the business men of the United States for the capture of the increasing trade of South America and the upbuilding of a merchant marine that will stimulate commerce between the main divisions of the western hemisphere.

The Zeppelin airship, which was to have descended at Munich, but was carried off by a gale, came down at Dingolfing. No harm resulted, because these are piping times of peace. But suppose that sort of thing were to happen in war, and suppose the place where an aerial ship put into port was in the enemy's country! However, the enthusiastic aeronaut may not worry so much about the possibility of becoming a prisoner of war. That is likely to be a minor consideration, weighed against the tremendous chances of coming down to earth with a thump so hard that it will make little difference whether the landing place is in the enemy's country or not.

Evidently there is need for a school of instruction for voters, says the Springfield Republican. Many ballots were spoiled in the recent primary here. In the Fourth ward one man did not pay any attention to the names of the candidates on the ballot, but wrote: "I vote for Allaman for mayor, for Vogt for councilman, for R. Fred White, for school hoard, and I don't give a damn for the rest." He even dated the ballot.

There is not so much likelihood of a "holy war" in Morocco as there was. The priest who went about inciting such a conflict has been captured and locked up, and for a while at least there will be a cessation of attempts by pretenders to get possession of the throne. A holy war which leads to jail is neither inspiring nor promising of success.

"Gypsy" Smith, the evangelist, tells New Yorkers that if Christ came to their city he would not go to fashionable Fifth avenue churches, but would go into the tenderloin and red light districts, seek the unfortunates and try to make their burdens lighter. But if all the stories about New York are true, there is need of some scourging of sinners in Fifth avenue temples.

Great Britain is discovering that the new wire-wound 13-inch guns designed to throw shells 18 miles cannot withstand the strain of discharge. Cracks develop in the tubes and the guns become dangerous. Is the gunner reaching the limit of his ability to drive heavy missiles over long distances or through armor plating?

WHAT COLORS SHALL I USE?

This Question Is Important in Painting a House or Other Building.

A proper color scheme is extremely important in painting a house. It makes all the difference between a really attractive home and one at which you wouldn't take a second glance. And it makes a big difference in the price the property will bring on the market.

As to the exterior, a good deal depends upon the size and architecture of the house, and upon its surroundings. For a good interior effect you must consider the size of the rooms, the light, etc.

You can avoid disappointment by studying the books of color schemes for both exterior and interior painting, which can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit also includes specifications, and a simple instrument for testing the purity of paint materials. Pure White Lead which will stand the test in this outfit will stand the weather test. National Lead Company's famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark on the keg is a guarantee of that kind of white lead.

COUNTRY IN MOVEMENT.

Meeting of National Association for Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis Will Be Largely Attended.

The fifth annual meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis will be held in Washington, D. C., at the New Willard hotel, on May 13, 14 and 15. Owing to the present interest in the campaign against tuberculosis, the meeting will be of unusual interest and importance. The membership of the national association now numbers nearly 2,000, and is distributed in almost every state in the United States. The national association has also a considerable membership in Canada, Cuba, Porto Rico, Philippine islands, and in several of the European countries. Ex-President Roosevelt and Dr. William Osler are honorary vice-presidents of the national association. Dr. Vincent Y. Bowditch of Boston is the president; Mr. Homer Folks of New York city, and Dr. Charles L. Minor of Asheville, N. C., are the vice-presidents; Gen. George M. Sternberg of Washington, D. C., is treasurer; Dr. Henry Barton Jacobs of Baltimore, is secretary, and Dr. Livingston Farrand of New York is the executive secretary of the association.

ANOTHER BORING QUESTION.

"I say, pa, is a man from Poland called a Pole?"

"Yes, my son."

"Then, pa, why isn't a man from Holland called a Hole?"

A Natural Mistake.

A teacher in a Pennsylvania primary school instructed her pupils one "composition day" that they might each write her a letter making excuse for not inviting her to an imaginary birthday party.

The following effort of one little girl was decided to be the best:

"My Dear Miss Alice: It becomes my duty to apologize for not inviting you to my birthday party last week. I had fully intended to do so, but—as I always do in everything—I postponed it till the last minute. When I at last started and reached your gate, I saw the doctor's carriage standing there, and thinking some one was ill, I did not think it best to go in. What was my mortification and consternation to learn the next day that the doctor was courting your sister!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

FOOD FACTS

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent Georgia physician went through a food experience which he makes public:

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful builder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weight very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely, and went to the mountains of this state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must change. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public."

Trial 10 days on Grape-Nuts, when the regular food does not seem to sustain the body, will work miracles.

"There's a Reason."

Zorobabel's Riddle

He Wins the King's Favor, and Pleads for Zion.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1909, by the Author, W. B. Edson.)

Apocryphal Books:—1 Esdras, chapters 3 and 4.

The Apocryphal Books.—The collection of books to which the term Apocrypha is popularly applied includes the following, the order in which they are given being that in which they stand in the English version: I. 1 Esdras; II. 2 Esdras; III. Tobit; IV. Judith; V. The rest of the chapters of the Book of Esther, which are found neither in the Hebrew nor in the Chaldee; VI. The Wisdom of Solomon; VII. The Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Lirach, or Ecclesiasticus; VIII. Baruch; IX. The Song of the Three Holy Children; X. The History of Susanna; XI. The History of the Destruction of Bel and the Dragon; XII. The Prayer of Manasses, King of Judah; XIII. 1 Maccabees; XIV. 2 Maccabees. The Apocryphal books, which are supposed to occupy an intermediate position, were called "books read," or "ecclesiastical," though the latter title was also applied to the canonical Scriptures. The primary meaning of Apocrypha, "hidden, secret," seems, toward the close of the second century, to have been associated with the signification "spurious," and ultimately to have settled down into the latter.

SERMONETTE.

"Above all things truth beareth away the victory."

Truth is still winning its victories in the world to-day.

Truth is the expression of God in the world. It is the one abiding thing before which all that is false and unreal must ultimately give way.

God is spoken of as a God of truth, and the visible expression of God to the world, "the Word which was made flesh and dwelt among men," is declared to have been "full of grace and truth."

Moses is said to have delivered the law, but Jesus la declared to have given the real expression of that law because grace and truth came by him.

Jesus made the open declaration that he was the "way, the truth and the life," and as he was taking leave of his disciples before the crucifixion he promised them that the Spirit of Truth should come unto them and guide them into all truth.

All this clearly emphasizes the fact that truth is a part and expression of the eternal God.

Men should seek to know the truth. They should never be afraid of it because it shatters perhaps the conceptions and ideas of previous years.

Truth is revolutionary. It tears down that which stands on false foundations in order that that which is enduring may remain.

With the Psalmist David, we should all "desire truth in the inward parts," and should earnestly and honestly choose the way of truth, but we should remember two dangers which threaten the seeker after truth.

First, that the cold, intellectual search after truth, without that warmth of love and faith from God which can make of that truth a real live factor in the lives of men is to really hold the truth in error.

Truth cannot find its real and full expression apart from love. God is first love, and then truth, or rather he is truth because he is love. He could not be truth apart from love and love could not manifest itself except as it was grounded in truth.

Therefore, cold intellectualism can never measure the full meaning of truth. They can make an idol of truth itself, and can develop a consuming passion for the search for truth as they measure and weigh everything in life, and in the very doing of it they can miss God himself. For truth is not the sum total of God, but truth is found in God; is a part of God.

And the second danger is the half truths which seize hold upon the heart and sway the life as though all the truth were known and understood. Half truths are always full of peril.

THE STORY.

THREE young men stood outside the entry way to the private apartments of the king in earnest conversation. A great feast had been held in the palace for all the princes of Media and Persia, and now King Darius, wearied with the gay and festive scene, and filled with the dainty viands which had been spread upon the banqueting tables, had withdrawn to his apartments and was seeking refreshment in sleep upon the royal couch. And while he slept these three young men, who were of the royal guard, stood without, keeping watch that nothing should disturb or harm the sacred person of the king.

"The heart of the king was merry," said one whose name was Zorobabel, "and great was his delight in his princes and the thought of the power of his nation. But what of our people who are in distress in Jerusalem?"

"Ah," sighed another of the group, "that he might have a thought for them."

"I have a plan which will stir the heart of the king to earnest thought, perchance, and give us the opportunity we seek of pleading for our people," again spoke up Zorobabel.

"Tell us," eagerly cried his two companions.

"It is this: Let every one of us speak a sentence. He that shall overcome, and whose sentence shall seem wiser than the others, unto him shall the king, Darius, give great gifts, and great things in token of victory. And when it shall be so, the one who thus wins the favor of the king shall choose for our people the help they need."

"Agreed," the other two cried.

Then every one wrote his sentence, sealed it and won the consent of the king's private chamberlain to place the writings near his couch where he would see them upon first rising.

So it came to pass that when the king had risen and had opened the writings, he read what the first had written, namely: "Wine is the strongest."

And the second read: "The king is the strongest."

And the third read: "Women are the strongest, but above all things truth beareth away the victory."

And when he had summoned all his princes and governors and captains, and had sat down in his judgment hall, he commanded that the young men who had propounded the riddles should be brought before them, that they might declare their writings, "For," said the king, "by all the power of my kingdom he who proves the declaration of his writing shall receive favor from the king."

Then began the first, who has spoken of the strength of wine, and said:

"O ye men, how exceeding strong is wine! It causeth all men to err that drink it. It maketh the mind of the king and of the fatherless child to be all one; of the bondman and of the freeman; of the poor man and of the rich. It turneth also every thought into jollity and mirth, so that a man remembereth neither sorrow nor debt. And it maketh every heart rich, so that a man remembereth neither king nor governor; and it maketh to speak all things by talents. And when they are in their cups, they forget their love both to friends and brethren, and a little after draw out swords. And when they are out from the power of the wine, they remember not what they have done. O ye men, is not wine the strongest, that enforceth to do thus?"

Thus spake the first young man, and the king beckoned to the second to rise and address the assemblage, which he did, as follows:

"O ye men, do not men excel in strength, that bear rule over sea and land, and all things in them? But yet the king is more mighty; for he is lord of all these things, and hath dominion over them; and whatsoever he commandeth them, they do. If he bid them make war the one against the other, they do it. If he send them out against the enemies, they go, and break down mountains, walls and towers. They slay and are slain, and transgress not the king's commandment. If they get the victory, they bring all to the king, as well the spoil, as all things else. Likewise for those that are no soldiers, and have not to do with wars, but use husbandry, when they have reaped again that which they had sown, they bring it to the king, and compel one another to pay tribute unto the king. So all his people and his armies obey him. O ye men, how should not the king be mightiest, when in such sort he is obeyed?"

Thus spake the second, and ceased.

Then Zorobabel stood forth and lifting his eyes to the king declared his riddle, as follows:

"O ye men, it is not the great king, nor the multitude of men, neither is it wine that exceedeth. Who is it then that ruleth them, or that hath lordship over them? Are they not women? Women have borne the king and all people that bear rule by sea and land. A man leaveth his own father who brought him up, and his own country, and cleaveth unto his wife. Many also have perished, have erred, and sinned for women. And now do ye not believe me? Is not the king great in his power? Do not all regions fear to touch him? Yet did I see him and Apame the king's wife, sitting at the right hand of the king, and taking the crown from the king's head, and setting it on her own head. She also struck the king with her left hand in her mirth, and he spake no harsh word unto her. O ye men, are not women strong? Great is the earth, high is the heaven, swift is the sun in his course, for he compasseth the heavens round about, and fetcheth his course again to his own place in one day. Is he not great who made these things? Therefore great is Truth, and stronger than all things. Wine is wicked, the king is wicked, women are wicked, all the children of men are wicked, and such are all their wicked works. But as for truth, it endureth and is always strong. It liveth an conquereth for evermore. Blessed be the God of Truth."

And a great shout arose as he ceased and the people cried:

"Great is truth, and mighty above all things."

Then said the king unto him:

"Ask what thou wilt."

Then spake Zorobabel unto the king:

"Remember thy vow, which thou hast vowed, to build Jerusalem, in that day when thou camest to thy kingdom, and to send away all the vessels that were taken out of Jerusalem."

Then Darius the king stood up and kissed Zorobabel, and calling for his scribe he wrote letters for him unto all his treasurers, and lieutenants, and captains, commanding them to do all that he, Zorobabel, should desire.

ILLINOIS WOMAN THE VICTOR

MRS. MATTHEW T. SCOTT TO HEAD D. A. R.

Administration Candidate Defeats Mrs. Story of New York by Eight Votes.

Washington. — Men and women of Illinois here in Washington are happy over the victory of Mrs. Matthew T. Scott of Bloomington in her race for the presidency of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Backed by the administration Mrs. Scott defeated her rival, Mrs. William Cummings Story of New York, 436 to 428.

Mrs. Scott's election was a victory for the administration faction. A number of delegates refused to make the election unanimous on Mrs. Story's motion.

The second office in point of honor, that of vice-president general in charge of organizations, however, went to the anti-administration followers by the election of Mrs. Miranda B. Tulloch of this city.

The congress approved the election of the various state regents. They included the following: Alabama, Mrs. Robert A. McClellan; Arizona, Mrs.

Mrs. Matthew D. Scott.

Walter Talbot; Arkansas, Mrs. John Barrow; California, Mrs. Frederick J. Laird; Colorado, Mrs. Frank Wheaton; Florida, Mrs. J. M. Mahoney; Georgia, Mrs. P. W. Godfrey; Idaho, Mrs. David H. Tarr; Illinois, Mrs. John C. Ames; Indiana, Mrs. John J. Dinwiddie; Iowa, Miss Harriet Lake; Kansas, Mrs. George T. Guernsey; Kentucky, Mrs. Sarah H. Chenault; Michigan, Mrs. J. P. LAKE SHIP SINKS; FIVE DEAD

Steamer Eber Ward Strikes Ice Floe In Lake Michigan and Goes to Bottom.

Mackinaw, Mich.—Five men were drowned Tuesday when the steamer Eber Ward collided with a heavy ice floe and sank five miles west of here.

The dead are John Hern, James Perry, John Meberoth, Kinney McKay and an unidentified deckhand.

The survivors are Capt. T. Le May, First Mate A. P. Galino, Chief Engineer Frank Baldwin, Second Engineer S. R. Shipman, Wheelsmen Charles Lester and Frank Gutch, Deckhand August Palmer, Steward John Winterhaler and Mrs. Winterhaler and Al Quin.

The boat went to the bottom in one of the deepest spots of the Straits of Mackinaw and will be a total loss together with her cargo of corn. She was bound from Milwaukee to Port Huron, Mich.

So completely was the bow of the steamer shattered by the collision with the ice floe that she was flooded from stem to stern almost instantly. Five of her crew were caught without warning asleep in their bunks and went to the bottom with the sinking steamer.

No Parole for Stensland Now.

Joliet, Ill. — Paul O. Stensland will not be pardoned nor paroled at present, in spite of a most eloquent appeal made in his behalf by Attorney Clarence Darrow of Chicago Tuesday afternoon. While the decision of the board had not been made public and will not be until the official report of the board is made to Gov. Deneen at Springfield, the attitude of the board is known.

Commits Suicide on Husband's Grave.

Detroit, Mich.—Mrs. Amy Wilkie, 30 years old, whose husband died last November, was found dead Friday lying on her husband's grave in the German Lutheran cemetery. A carbolic acid bottle and a small glass lay near the body.

Ex-Senator Stewart Dead.

Washington.—The body of former United States Senator William M. Stewart of Nevada who died at Georgetown hospital Friday will be taken to Nevada for burial Saturday.

MAY OMIT INCOME TAX FROM TARIFF MEASURE

Many Congressmen Agree With Taft It Should Not Be Adopted Unless Needed for Revenue.

Washington, April 26.—Frequent utterances by President Taft expressive of the hope that congress will hasten the passage of the tariff bill in order that business may be restored to its normal condition at the earliest possible day may postpone the real test of strength over the income tax proposition. At the present time sentiment of the senate is pretty evenly divided for and against an income tax amendment to the pending bill, and there are many differences of opinion among those favoring the idea as to details of the legislation. Some senators believe it is impractical to tax incomes of less than $50,000, while others believe it will be necessary to go low as $2,000.

There are others who argue that the fixing of a minimum of any figure will result in unfair discrimination, and, furthermore, many of the champions of the proposition to tax incomes take the position that it will require time to work out a satisfactory plan to reach corporations.

Added to all these complications is the fact that estimates of possible revenues from a tax on incomes differ to such an extent that the whole idea is placed by many in the realm of experiment.

Many members of congress believe with President Taft that the income tax amendment should not be added unless it can be shown that it is needed to produce revenue.

Members of the finance committee declare that the Payne bill as amended by the committee will yield sufficient revenues for the operating expenses of the government.

If the truth of this statement is established it will turn a number of votes away from the income tax amendment unless the bill is materially amended so as to reduce the rates on necessaries and likewise the revenues from imports on all such articles as to offset the collections that would be made upon incomes.

HURLED FROM MOTOR CYCLE,

Earhard Went Over Fence Into Audience, Where He Fatally Injured Two Spectators.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 26.—Two spectators were probably fatally injured, and a third suffered a sprained right wrist, Sunday afternoon, when Al Earhardt, riding a five-horse-powed motor cycle struck the fence at the Coliseum park. The force of the impact was such as to hurl Earhardt over the four-foot board fence into the audience in the grandstand on the north side. He struck two men, Howard H. Piper, of Los Angeles, and Charles H. Henry, of Hiawatha, Kan., on the head knocking both men unconscious. Piper suffered a basal fracture of the skull and Henry a dislocated vertebrae, and both will probably die. R. Boyd was the third man in Earhardt's path, and he sustained a badly sprained right arm and wrist.

After hitting the three men Earhardt struck the fence at the end of the stand, broke out a board and went on through feet first, to the ground, 20 feet below, escaping with no more serious injury than a bruise under the right arm. The cause of the accident was a bump between Earhardt and Freddy Huyck, the Chicago rider, as the two men ran onto the north curve at more than a mile a minute.

Bomb Exploded in a Church.

New Orleans, La., April 26.—Wild excitement was caused in Charles street Sunday afternoon by an explosion of a supposed bomb in the tower of the famous old St. Louis cathedral. The shock was felt for a number of blocks. A riot call was sent in and a number of arrests were made. The explosion occurred at a time when there were few worshipers in the church and no one was injured. The damage amounts to about $2,000. The police express the belief that dissension among some of a party of Italian workmen, engaged in making repairs in the south tower of the church, was responsible for the explosion.

Fire Raging in Kansas City, Mo.

Kansas City, Mo., April 26.—Fire started at 2 o'clock Monday morning in the Ridge building, a seven-story structure in the heart of the downtown business district. The building was apparently doomed at 2:15, the entire interior being a mass of flames. The National Bank of Commerce and other large office buildings immediately adjoining the Ridge building, were threatened, the fire being fanned by a stiff wind. At 2:25 a. m. the fire had spread to Main street. The sparks at this time were being driven three blocks away and the burning of more buildings was regarded as certain.

Jealousy Cause of Killing.

Winston-Salem, N. C., April 26.—George Busbee, aged 35 years, and married, was shot and killed in his home in East Winston by Earnest Horn, a young man who boarded at the Busbee home. Jealousy was the cause. Horn was arrested.

Fooled the Officers.

Bentonville, Ark., April 26.—After he had fired on E. Miller, the bullet passing through the man's coat, but inflicting no injury, C. Graham, 78, shot and killed himself at his home near here while in the custody of the officers.

PRESCRIPTION FOR NERVOUS MEN AND WOMEN—TRY IT

The impairment of the nervous force in men and women is first manifested by extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, dread, worry and anxiety without reason, trembling of the hands and limbs, with the slightest exertion, heart palpitation, constipation, kidney trouble, and a general inability to act rationally at all times as others with health in their bodies do.

In a half pint bottle get three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound and add to this one ounce compound fluid balmwort, and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence cardiol, and one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom); mix all together, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at retiring.

CURED ITCHING HUMOR.

Big, Painful Swellings Broke and Did Not Heal—Suffered 3 Years. Tortures Yield to Cuticura.

"Little black swellings were scattered over my face and neck and they would leave little black scars that would itch so I couldn't keep from scratching them. Larger swellings would appear and my clothes would stick to the sores. I went to a doctor, but the trouble only got worse. By this time it was all over my arms and the upper part of my body in swellings as large as a dollar. It was so painful that I could not bear to lie on my back. The second doctor stopped the swellings, but when they broke the places would not heal. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies and in less than a week some of the places were nearly well. I continued until I had used three sets, and now I am sound and well. The disease lasted three years. O. L. Wilson, Puryear, Tenn., Feb. 8, 1908."

Uncle Jim's Treachery.

"Pa, is it true that the good always die young?"

"Oh, no, not always. I was a very good little boy."

"Didn't you ever disobey your parents?"

"No."

"Nor fight with your little brother?"

"No, I always was very kind to him."

"And didn't you ever tell lies or play hookey?"

"Certainly not."

"Nor steal jam nor cookies out of your mother's pantry?"

"Of course I never did such wicked things."

"Gee, what an imagination Uncle Jim must have. He was tellin' me, this morning, about when you and him were boys."

Dressed as Scholars.

At the wedding lately of the head master of Eastbourne college, England, the three pages in the bridal procession were garbed as scholars in black satin knee breeches, buckled shoes, scarlet silk gowns, with white shirt fronts. Each carried a mortarboard hat and a scarlet-bound prayer book.

Lost—On road between my home and Burlington, last Monday, new umbrella. Finder will please return to O. P. Phipps, Bullittsville.

John H. Ryle, of Florence, was tried on a writ de lunatico inquirendo, last Monday, in the county court, and adjudged of unsound mind and ordered taken to Lakeland.

Picked up near the printing office Sunday morning, good glove. If the other glove is as good, the owner will please send it to this office or come in and get the one that was found.

Everybody at Erlanger, Florence and Union are talking traction road, and emphasizing their talk by subscribing liberally to assist in putting through the preliminary work. The three towns above named are in dead earnest, realizing the immense advantage a traction road will be to their communities. An enthusiastic meeting was held at Florence, last Monday night, at which numerous good speeches were made, and great and growing interest was manifested. Mr. Blackburn, the chief promotor, will be in Burlington next Monday to make a speech in which he will explain the plans and desires of the company which is proposing to construct the road. Come out and hear him.

Last Saturday, Clarence Webb, 16 colored, was handling a revolver at his home in Burlington, when he accidentally exploded one of the chambers, the ball a 22, passing through the flesh on the inside of one leg above the knee, and then into the calf of the leg, where it lodged and remains. The wound has caused him very little pain.

As Elmer Fowler was going to Walton, last Thursday, riding one horse and leading another, the horse he was riding fell, striking him in the back, rendering him unconscious for a while. When he regained his consciousness two strangers were at his side, rendering what assistance they could. The blow received in the back was not a serious one, and Mr. Fowler soon came around all right and proceeded on his way.

Four fine cows belonging to Mrs. F. M. Howlett died inside of four weeks, from some unknown cause. The last one to die ate heartily in the morning. She was seen at noon and found a few hours afterwards dead. Some think it was the water they drank, but as other cattle drank of the same flow of water without any evil effects, it could not have been that. There does not seem to be any disease among Mrs. Howlett's cattle. Just before the death of the cattle someone poisoned Mrs. Howlett's dog.

The Boone Literary Society had a very interesting meeting, last Friday evening. The following program was followed: Roll Call—Responses from Whittier; Life of Whittier—Garnett Huey; Piano Solo—Miss Mary Castleman; Select Reading from Uncle Remus—Mrs. C. M. Baldon; Recitation—Miss Alice Carver; Piano Solo—Mrs Edgar Riley; Current Events—Mr. J. D. Rouse; Original Poem—Mrs. Kirb Tanner. The next meeting will be held May 14th at Library Hall. The public is invited to attend.

The proposed traction roads of which mention was made in these columns last week, are causing considerable talk in this county, and so far as heard from the farmers are friendly to the enterprise, and the indications are they will not place any obstructions in its way. They recognize that an era of progress has broken over this part of Kentucky, and that it is incumbent upon every section to keep in the procession, and to do this they will have to assist in obtaining such public improvements as are disposed to come their way. A system of traction roads embracing Boone county would make it one of the most desirable and prosperous sections of Kentucky, and when an opportunity is offered to make such an advance her citizens will be found ready to respond to any reasonable demand upon them to assist in that direction.

Obituary.

W. R. Kirtley was born in Livingston county, Missouri, May 31, 1850; was the oldest living son of Geo. R. and Harriet E. Kirtley. His father was lost in the war of '61, leaving him the staff of his widowed mother, and sister and brother. The family moved to Boone county, Ky., in 1865, where he grew to manhood and resided the greater part of his life. He was as much the father as the brother and was indulgent, helpful and cheerful in all the relations of life. He united with the Bullittsburg Baptist church, of which he died a member. In August, 1896, he married Miss Elizabeth Gray in Virginia, to whom were born two daughters. His widow and one daughter, Ruth, survive, Elizabeth having died in infancy. He moved with his family to Lawrenceburg, Indiana, in 1891, where he remained until his death. He had been ill for several years, and though he knew that death was inevitable and often spoke of it to his family, he bore all with christian fortitude and cheery and bright until the end, which came April 2nd, 1909, at his home. His faith was in God, in whose hand he leaves the loved ones while they await there. The funeral services were held at Bullittsburg church by his friend, Rev. W. D. [illegible]. THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wood en tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consumes all of it in preference to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—it will cost you nothing.

What does that mean? Did you ever see it before? It is found on the fourth ridge of every genuine CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLE.

And what are CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES? They're a handsome roofing that lasts as long as the building itself and never needs repairs. Think of it—they were put on the market 22 years ago and the roofs put on then are as good as new today. What's more—they're comparatively cheap. Sold by

The Great Imported German Coach Stallion,

Plutarch 3183

Will make the season of 1909 at T. E. Randall's stable, one mile west of Idlewild, Boone County, Ky., on the Burlington and Petersburg Turnpike at

$12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,

money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20.00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

High Vine, 2733, foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1867; grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 736; Dam, Bessie Belle, No. 2582, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1365; second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60; third dam, Maxey by Granger; fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

High Vine, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and feeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1900 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

Address all communications to
W. LEE GAINES, President.

Chester opens May 8th.

CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress from Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes in Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach, it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22 grain Triangle and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery:

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Circuit Court.

Circuit court was in session a day and a half, last week, when it adjourned until court in course. There was but one trial of importance, that of Charles Robinson, indicted for stealing a horse belonging to Joseph Graham, of Francesville. The jury was obtained shortly afternoon on Wednesday, when the accused entered the plea of not guilty, and the hearing of testimony was begun. Mr. Graham, owner of the stolen horse, and Harry Benjamin, of Clermont county, Ohio, to whom Robinson traded the horse for a mule, had testified when the plea of not guilty was withdrawn and the plea of guilty entered, and in a few minutes thereafter the case was in the hands of the jury, which, in a short time, returned a verdict fixing Robinson's punishment at three years' confinement in the penitentiary, the penalty for his offense being not less than 2 nor more than 7 years confinement in the penitentiary. Robinson was anxious to be hustled off to Frankfort at once, but he was not taken until Friday morning. Deputy Sheriff Cropper and County Attorney N. E. Riddell taking him. Two of Robinson's sisters were present at the trial and took his conviction hard.

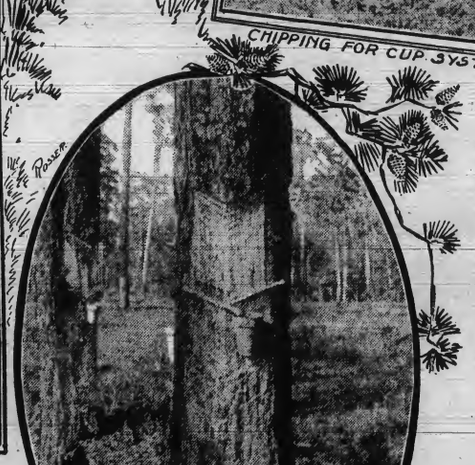
TURPENTINING the PINE FORESTS

BY HERBERT P. JACKSON.

THROUGH the improvement in the systems of turpentining the south has taken a long step forward in the movement for the protection and development of one of the country's most important natural resources, the rich yellow pine forests which make the Unite States lead in those products.

Improved methods of turpentining were first established to an appreciable extent during the producing season of 1904, when tbe cup and gutter system was installed by a number of the most enterprising manufacturers of naval stores in Georgia and Florida. Since that time there has been a steady and satisfactory increase in the percentage of turpentine and rosin produced by these conservative methods. The work in conserving these vast turpentine orchards of the south has perhaps come in time to stay the early destruction of yellow pine forests threatened by years of careless management.

FALLEN TREE—TOO MUCH BOXING



CLEANING THE GUTTERS PREPARATORY TO DIPPING

CHIPPING FOR CUP SYSTEM

BOXING A TREE

THIRD YEAR—BOXED FACE OPERATED BY CUP SYSTEM

Experiments conducted by the United States forest service at Ocilla, Ga., and Green Cove Springs, Fla., as well as definite and reliable data received from operators throughout the naval stores belt, have effectively determined the great advantages of the new methods over the old. Not only has it been shown forcibly that the conservative methods are of great protection to the forests, but sufficient data has been collected to show that the increase in yield of both turpentine and rosin by the new and improved systems furnishes a strong argument in favor of tbeir use.

Reports from the states where naval stores are produced show that where there is a greater percentage of turpentine produced by improved metbods there is also a greater yield. The following table gives the average yield of turpentine per crop of 10,500 boxes or cups, reported and compiled by states, together witb the percentage of turpentine produced in each state by eltber the cup and gutter or cup and apron systems:

State.	Yield per Crop.	Percentage produced by improved methods.
Alabama	35.6 casks	8
Florida	29.8 casks	16
Georgia	26.5 casks	9
Louisiana	44.7 casks	44
Mississippi	34.5 casks	11
Texas	43.5 casks	49

Note. In North and South Carolina improverd methods are not in use.

Accepting the information contained in this table as a basis for comparing the results of the new methods witb the results of tbe old system of cutting the destructive boxes in the trees, some allowance should be made for tbe difference in quality of timber as well as tbe age of tbe industry in tbe states given. The timber in Texas and Louisiana is considered superior to that in Georgia and Florida and the industry is not so old in the two western states. But the improved conditions under which turpentine and rosin are manufactured in Texas and Louisiana will not account for more than one-fourth of the increase in yield.

To demonstrate more fully that the use of improved methods is largely responsible for the remarkable increase sbown, the reports from two of the large establishments in Texas, one using the cup and apron system and the other cutting boxes into the tree, are compared. Tbe establishment using the cup and apron system reported a yield of 1,372 barrels of turpentine for 26 crops, as against a yield of 1,500 barrels of turpentine for 35 crops where the old methods were employed, 68.2 casks per crop for tbe cup and apron system as against 42.8 for boxes.

Both companies were operating for the first year and timber and weather conditions were practically the same. The two establishments reporting these figures employ a high standard of business methods and tbe figures given are reliable. Forty-two barrels is considered a fair average yield for the first year the trees are bled and where boxes are used.

In Texas and Louisiana a greater percentage of operators own their own timber. Some of tbe most extensive places in these states are operated by large lumbering companies or corporations who are bleeding their trees for turpentine and rosin previous to converting them into lumber. These companies have carefully and systematically studied botb metbods of turpentining and the fact that the new metbods are more generally in use in those states indicates their advantage over the old.

Work for More Kindergartens.

Mrs. Kate Douglass Wiggin Riggs addressed the meeting of kindergarten enthusiasts who met the other day in the New York home of Mrs. J. Greenough for the purpose of establishing kindergartens in small towns and villages. Tbe scope of this new kindergarten society will be national, though its members declare that nowhere in the country is there such a demand for the schools as within a radius of 100 miles of New York city. Richard Watson Gilder, Mme. Maria Kraus-Boelte and Rev. Dr. David G. Wylie also made speeches in favor of the movement.

WRIGHT AEROPLANE "BLUFF" MAKES GOOD

By HOWARD S. COLTER.

WILBUR WRIGHT has proved to the satisfaction of hundreds of persons in France that the pretensions of the Wright brothers that tbey bad an aeroplane capable of flying were founded on fact, but for a long time they were under suspicion. They merely kept on saying that their aeroplane had solved the flying problem, but they never showed the machine and they never discussed its makeup or plans. This reticence had the effect naturally of making the French say: "That's just a bluff."

The Wrights, Wilbur and Orville, always have been very secretive about their invention. As is most generally known they took up the flying industry about eight years ago. As is the case with many folks all sorts of explanations, foolish and otherwise, were made of tbe way in which they happened to become interested. From the start, however, these Dayton bicycle manufacturers were keen for aeroplanes. They believed tbat tbe soaring and flying of birds could best be imitated by aeroplanes.

The manner in which birds kept on mile after mile after vessels at sea, merely moving their wings now and again, interested these brotbers, as it has interested thousands of persons who are not wrapped up in aeroplanes. Tbe brotbers knew or learned that tbe birds occasionally flapped their wings in the midst of soaring because they had to mount another or different air current.

Air resistance is a harder thing to tackle than water resistance. There are more quirks and twists to the stream of air than there are in the Mississippi water. All these things made dirigible balloon flying hard, and it bad killed absolutely aeroplane endeavor up to the time tbe Wrigbt brotbers began. The earlier aeroplanists had not been able to work out a scheme whereby tbe air resistance could be accommodated so tbat it would help the flying machine instead of dashing it to the ground.

The Wrights, too, believed that a man could make a much better wing than Nature had done. Tbe resistance of feathers would not be present in a wing made of silk. Furthermore, because a bird sometimes bas to aligbt, Nature has fixed the wings so tbat they may be folded. With an aeroplane that bas nothing to do but fly there need be no device for collapsing the wings. They may stay extended all the time.

The earlier attempts at aeroplanes, Lilienthal's, Pilcher's, Langley's and Chanute's, all lent something to the ideas of the Wrights. They studied aeroplanes for years before they evolved the idea. It was in 1903 that after framing the machine of parallel box kites they got the idea of putting in a gasoline engine to run the machine and to force those changes of plane tbat would be inevitable in unfavorable windage.

They had a machine then that was merely a glider. It was picked up at either extremity by two men who ran with it for a distance until finally it caugbt the air and started off on its gliding. It was about this time tbat reports came east that there were two men in Ohio who had a flying machine that would fly. The Wright aeroplane bad glided for a distance over ground, how great no one knew but the brothers and certain chosen friends.

That started the controversy over them, a controversy that never was even partly settled until when the recent public flights began in France. The brothers made it a point that no unfriendly persons should see the aeroplanes, and many successful models were destroyed because the brothers didn't want to risk having any one steal their ideas.

They started off to France, which has been and is the foremost in aviation, and tried there to enlist funds for their enterprise. They apparently wanted the French government to take their aeroplane mostly on trust. As a Frenchman remarked long afterward: "If it were a fraudulent gold mine every one would have been willing to subscribe, But this turns out to be an honest enterprise, so of course there was no eagerness to possess it for France."

It was their manner of conversation that aroused the antagonism of the Frenchmen who came in contact. Not all, but some, of the aviators frankly did not believe the Wrights and thought it all a bunco scheme to get money for nothing. The Wrights kept close mouthed and let the discussion run on. They started experiments down in a spot in North Carolina, near a town called Kittyhawk. From this place day after day came reports of flights, accidents, successes.

WESTERN CANADA'S HAPPY PROSPECTS.

In no year since the development of Western Canada began has spring brought a brighter outlook than it brings this year. In no preceding spring has there been greater assurance of advancing development and prosperity. The movement of immigration has already assumed large proportions, and is as desirable in character as it is satisfactory in volume; from across the Atlantic sturdy, industrious and thrifty newcomers are arriving in large numbers, homeseekers from Ontario and the other older Provinces are coming in a steady stream, and from across the international boundary a movement is already in full flow, which, it is confidently predicted, will beat the records of all previous years; special settlers' trains are crossing the line, loaded with effects, actual material wealth being thus brought into the country at the rate of millions of dollars' worth mo[illegible]

The movement is so unprecedentedly large that extra Dominion Immigration officials have had to be provided at both North Portal and at Emerson, and it is estimated that the total number of new settlers from the United States tbis year will be 70,000, at least, and may run well up toward 100,000. Last year's total of new settlers from the South was 53,723; thus the area that will be placed in wheat and other grains this year will greatly exceed that of last year. Settlers are making extraordinary efforts to get on their lands and begin seeding operations. The price of wheat now, away above tbe dollar mark, is incentive enough, and when one has in view the splendid results that the past few years have shown, it is not to be wondered at tbat the present will be the banner year for immigration to Canada. Ask your nearest Canadian Government Agent for rates of transportation, and he will also send you illustrated pamphlets.

Making Himself Solid.

"How did he get tbat way?" came a voice from the awe-stricken throng.

"Love," replied the lecturer, lowering his voice, confidentially; "love did it. He fell in love with a beautiful maiden, tried to make himself solid, and overdid it. We will now pass on to the—"

DUTY BEFORE TAFT

IS HE FOR THE PEOPLE OR THE TARIFF BARONS?

President Must Soon Make Choice That Will Show the Country Where He Stands—People Demand He Keep Faith.

All signs point to a parting of the ways between the administrative and legislative branches of the federal government on the tariff issue.

The house of representatives will consider no amendments to the Payne bill except from the ways and means committee, and on no schedules except those affecting lumber, hides, barley and malt.

This leaves the tariff in the hands of the senate, and control of the senate in the interests of eastern tariff barons is notorious.

The position of President Taft is unequivocal. He pledged himself during the late presidential campaign to genuine downward tariff revision in the interests of American consumers. Congress, on the other hand, has been whipped to the task of revision like a reluctant schoolboy.

Will the tariff overlords, who have long controlled congress, be able again to make tariff revision a farce, so far as consumers are concerned?

President Taft will probably have to answer this question. There is little prospect that the New England senators will experience a change of heart before the Payne bill is mangled to suit the wishes of their trust owners. The people of America, on the basis of past experience, expect no voluntary concessions on the senate's part in the way of lower tariff taxes.

But the Taft veto is a reserve sheet anchor. President Taft may have to take a decided stand between the New England tariff idea and the hopes and demands of the great body of American consumers. It may be a turning point in the early days of his administration.

And even before the Payne bill comes to him for signature President Taft can declare his position with such emphasis that its framers will be less bold and arrogant. It is only a few days since the president's uncompromising stand forced the lower branch of congress to readopt rules that would expedite the tariff measure. Administration influence is all-powerful, when exercised with tact and discretion.

President Taft should make it as clear as can be that he will not sign any tariff bill that puts new burdens on American consumers. His election is partly due to the American people's confidence in his sincere purpose to reduce these tariff burdens.

Keep faith with the people, President Taft.

A Free Breakfast Table.

Tariff for revenue is one thing; tariff for plunder is another. Protection is the most dishonest system ever enacted by which poor people are made to pay the burden of taxation. Why in the name of reason is any protection needed on coffee, tea, cocoa and sugar? Are there any coffee, tea or cocoa plantations which will be forced into bankruptcy if coffee, tea and cocoa are let in free? These articles of food are used by nearly every individual in the United States. They ought to be within the reach of every one.

Why not run the government on a business basis and "make ends meet?" A reduction in expenditures and an increase in receipts, a low "tariff for revenue only," would correct all the troubles of deficiency, and an economical administration would not do business on "bond money."

If there are any reasons why the prosperous and affluent should not pay the expenses of the government, then there are reasons why no government at all would be better than the one under the present conditions, where poverty carries the load and wealth reaps the harvest.

Let Us Have It Right.

We suggest the following inscription for our coins, gold and otherwise; "In God we trust, by special permission of Nelson W. Aldrich."

POLITICAL FUTURE AT STAKE

President Taft Has Real Cause for Anxiety Over Result of Tariff Revision.

The McKinley tariff cost the Republicans the Fifty-second congress and the subsequent presidential election in 1892.

The Wilson tariff plus the repeal of the Sherman act cost the Democrats the Fifty-fourth congress and helped bring about the conditions which left the party split in 1896 and have kept it divided ever since.

The Dingley tariff would have cost the Republicans the Fifty-sixth congress but for the war with Spain. As it was, the Republican majority in the house was only 13.

Mr. Taft may be pardoned if he displays more than a little anxiety as to the political consequences of the Payne revision.

Ask the average member of congress what he thinks of the political prospects of the Taft administration and he will answer about in this fashion: "The Roosevelt hero-worshipers are generally distrustful of Taft and think he is a reactionary. They confidently expect that the Republicans will lose the next house as a result of tariff revision. Roosevelt will return from Africa when Taft's political fortunes are at low ebb, and all his faithful followers will hail him as the true leader of the party. If the house goes Democratic they will denounce Taft as a failure, and shriek for Roosevelt in 1912 as the only presidential candidate who can save the party from defeat. Taft's political future hinges upon two things—a revision of the tariff that will satisfy the country as fairly honest and just, and an immediate return of prosperity."

Political gossip may be entirely mistaken as to the plans and hopes of the Roosevelt element, but there can be no doubt that Mr. Taft's friends are worrying over the situation and that the president himself keenly appreciates the necessity of a revision of the tariff that will meet the expectations of that elusive person who figures in the house debate as "the ultimate consumer."

Mr. Taft has probably had as few real troubles as any president ever had in the first days of his administration, but he is slowly approaching the critical period which will determine whether he is to have a united party back of him, or whether the history of the Harrison administration, in a way, is to repeat itself.

The Way Toward Tariff Reform.

The Philadelphia Inquirer—stiff protectionist—is in favor of hurrying through the present tariff to almost any conclusion, and then letting it be the last tariff that is ever enacted by way of general revision. It thinks that as the house committee has had its say the senate will have its, and then will come the conference committee, and therefore there is no need for a long debate, but that the best thing for business and all else is to adopt the law as soon as possible. Then it goes on to say:

"And let this be the last general revision of the tariff for all time. House committees and senate committees cannot satisfy the public. That is proved beyond all question. There is but one sensible way to deal with the tariff. Let us have a commission of experts who will devote their entire attention to the study of conditions throughout the world and the relation of these conditions with business in the United States.

"Could the ways and means committee, through such a commission, be put in possession of all facts concerning any specified tariff schedule it could treat that particular schedule as occasion should warrant and that one alone. Under such a policy there could never be a general business upheaval. That is the only scientific way to deal with the tariff."

It is the old story of robbing Peter to pay Paul. First the tin-plate makers are solaced with a protective tariff. Then the export canners are comforted by remitting the tariff, to the injury of the tin-plate men. And now the long-suffering taxpayer is asked to go into his pocket for ready cash with which to make good the injury. Will he do it?

HONOR BRAVE DEAD

COMMEMORATION OF BATTLE AT CHEMULPO.

Striking Contrast in Ceremonies Participated in by Japanese and Russians in Dismal and Unsightly Town of Korea.

The dismal city of Chemulpo, on the west coast of Korea, recently witnessed two strangely contrasting ceremonies, each conducted by aliens in the land and each commemorating the historic event which served to make the name of the town known around the world. The occasion of the demonstrations was the anniversary of the battle between the Russian and Japanese naval detachments outside the harbor.

Hundreds of Japanese came down from Seoul, the capital city, 60 miles away, to join with the large Japanese colony at Chemulpo in making the day a typical holiday of their home land. All of the Japanese quarter in the town blossomed with bunting, flags and lanterns, day fireworks banged off the new stone quay at the water front and every sendo and rickshaw man in town was out behind a brass band, trailing his enthusiasm through the narrow streets of the mongrel town.

There were long speeches in the high sounding formal oratory of the Japanese, a parade drill of some of the Japanese soldiers still retained in Korea for the good of the Koreans and a long night afterward of saki drinking and dancing by the geisha.

The Russians who came down from Seoul had no part in the Japanese festivities. With M. de Somow, the Russian consul general, there were M. Birukoff, the archimandrite of the Orthodox church in Korea; a few attaches from the consulate and half a dozen Russian merchants and travelers.

They went out to the little foreign burying ground on a bleak, treeless hill back of the town and there, where all of the dead that had been recovered from the Variag and Korietz after the battle were buried, the archimandrite conducted the orthodox service for the repose of the dead. The responses were sung by Korean converts.

Among some of the foreigners who stood in the cemetery with uncovered heads while the priest offered up prayers for the brave dead were those who remembered the day when the Variag and Korietz came limping back into harbor after having stood off for more than an hour the overwhelming squadron under Admiral Uriu. The Variag, her unprotected sides punctured like a sieve, was listing to such an extent that the blackened snouts of some of her starboard guns were dipping in the waves. The Korietz, a little gunboat hardly bigger than an American revenue cutter, had been under the protection of her bigger sister and was practically inhurt.

Then it was that, as the foreigners who ranged the hillsides back of the town and the knobs of the harbor islands saw the conquering Japanese squadron coming in to take its prizes, the roar of fired magazines smote the ugly little town and the two Russian ships dropped to the mud of the harbor. Even as the smoke of the explosions mushroomed out in the higher air strata and the bay's waters were peppered with the falling fragments of the fighting ships, the band on the Italian cruiser lying at anchor in the inner harbor struck up the heavy cadences of the Russian national hymn in a requiem.

Danger in Eye Poultices.

Do not poultice an eye in any circumstances whatever. Binding a wet application over an eye for several hours must damage that eye, the assertions of those professing to have personal experience in this to the contrary notwithstanding. The failure to aggravate an existing trouble by binding a moist application over an inflamed eye, which application is supposed to remain for an entire night, can only be explained by the supposition that a guardian angel has watched over that misguided case and has displaced the poultice before it had got in its fine work.

All oculists condemn the poultice absolutely, in every shape and in every form. Tea leaves, bread and milk, raw turnip or raw potato, and the medley of other similar remedies popularly recommended are, one and all, capable of producing irremediable damage to the integrity of the tissues of the visual organ.—Family Doctor.

Startling Motto.

A traveling salesman died very suddenly in Pittsburg. His relatives telegraphed to the undertaker to make a wreath; the ribbons should be extra wide, with the inscription "Rest in Peace" on both sides, and if there is room, "We Shall Meet in Heaven."

The undertaker was out of town, and his new assistant handled the job. It was a startling floral piece which turned up at the funeral.

The ribbon was extra wide and bore the inscription, "Rest in Peace on Both Sides, and if There is Room We Shall Meet in Heaven."—Inland Printer.

A Courteous Boy.

"Would you rather for your mother or me to whip you?"

"I dislike to show favoritism, father," said little Clarence. "You and mother had better settle the matter by flipping a coin."

REALLY EXCLUSIVE CLUB.

Indiscriminate Acquaintanceship Evidently Was Not Forced on Athenaeum Members.

Recently at a dinner party the conversation turned upon the subject of clubs. The special features of the Athenaeum were referred to with great respect, and then J. M. Barrie, who was the only member of that august club who happened to be present, intervened.

"After having been elected by the Athenaeum club," he said, "I went there for the first time and looked about for the smoking room. An old man with long, white hair was wandering in a lonely way about the hall. I asked him if he would be so kind as to tell me the way to the smoking room. He agreed with alacrity. When we returned to the hall I thanked him heartily, when he begged me to do him the honor of dining with him. 'But, my dear sir,' I said, 'you have been far too kind to me already. I cannot think of imposing myself upon you in this fashion.'

"'Imposing yourself!' exclaimed the old man in an eager voice. 'On the contrary, you will be doing me the greatest favor in the world; the fact is, I have belonged to this club for 30 years, and you are the first member who has ever spoken to me!'"—Bellman.

CATS ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Experts Differ as to the Species That the Egyptian Knew as Household Pets.

Experts have held that the so-called "cat" of the ancient Romans and Greeks ("ailurus," the wavy-tailed one) was not a cat at all, but a kind of weasel. The mummified Egyptian animal, however, was a genuine cat, even if certain peculiarities about its teeth make it difficult to regard it as a near relative of the modern domestic puss.

The exact origin of the latter remains a puzzle. It appears first, mysteriously, in the middle ages, when it was decidedly rare and highly prized throughout Europe, though the wild cat still abounded everywhere. And experts have not been able to satisfy themselves that the domestic cat and the wild one are really the same.

As a result of the recommendations of Dr. Koch of Germany that cats are the best preventives of the plague the Japanese authorities have been taking a cat census. At Osaka it was found there were 54,389 cats kept by 48,222 families. In addition there were 5,696 homeless cats. In the plague spots of the city no cats were found.

Origin of America's Name.

It is a curious chance that America received its name from a German geographer. Old Prof. Waldseemueller made a mistake, indeed, when he named the new countries at Brazil after the Florentine Amerigo Vespucci. It would have been far more just to name the new world after Columbus, but though Waldseemueller recognized his mistake and withdrew the name, it remained in use. And curiously enough, that Amerigo Vespucci whose name gave origin to the name of America, had himself, though an Italian, still a German family name, Emmerich, Emery in English. Thus America is a continent with a German name, the meaning of which might, perhaps, be interpreted as "rich in corn;" if this is correct, Prof. Waldseemueller chose an incorrect but appropriate name.—Prof. Albrecht Penck, in Science.

A Millinery Escape.

The woman was rushing so wildly out of a hat store that she dashed against her friend without seeing her.

"What's the matter?" asked her friend. "A fire?"

"No," the woman panted. "It's a hat. That girl in there! She's so magnetic. If I hadn't jabbed on my own hat and run as hard as I could she'd have made me buy a hat as big as all our doors, with a whole cherry tree on it that made me look like the very old Nick."

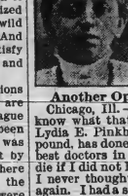
PROOF FOR TWO CENTS.

If You Suffer with Your Kidneys and Back, Write to This Man.

G. W. Winney, Medina, N. Y., invites kidney sufferers to write to him. To all who enclose postage he will reply, telling how Doan's Kidney Pills cured him after he had doctored and had been in two different hospitals for eighteen months, suffering intense pain in the back, lameness, twinges when stooping or lifting, languor, dizzy spells and rheumatism. "Before I used Doan's Kidney Pills," says Mr. Winney, "I weighed 142. After taking 10 or 12 boxes I weighed 162 and was completely cured."



Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Paw Paw, Mich.—"I suffered terribly from female ills, including inflammation and congestion, for several years. My doctor said there was no hope for me but an operation. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can now say I am a well woman."—Emma Draper.

Another Operation Avoided.

Chicago, Ill.—"I want women to know what that wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has done for me. Two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation, and I never thought of seeing a well day again. I had a small tumor and female troubles so that I suffered day and night. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it made me a well woman."—Mrs. Alvena Sperling, 11 Langdon St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

320 Acres of Wheat Land IN WESTERN CANADA

WILL MAKE YOU RICH

FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Fifty bushels per acre have been grown. General average greater than in any other part of the continent. Under new regulations it is possible to secure a homestead of 160 acres free, and additional 160 acres at $3 per acre.

"The development of the country has made marvelous strides. It is a revelation, a record of conquest by settlement that is remarkable."—Extract from correspondence of a National Editor, who visited Canada in August last.

The grain crop of 1908 will net many farmers $20.00 to $25.00 per acre. Grain-raising, mixed farming and dairying are the principal industries. Climate is excellent; social conditions the best; railway advantages unequalled; schools, churches and markets close at hand. Land may also be purchased from railway and land companies.

For "Last Best West" pamphlets, maps and information as to how to secure lowest railway rates, apply to Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or the authorized Canadian ..... Agent:

Paxtine TOILET ANTISEPTIC

—NOTHING LIKE IT FOR—

THE TEETH Paxtine excels any dentifrice in cleansing, whitening and removing tartar from the teeth, besides destroying all germs of decay and disease which ordinary tooth preparations cannot do.

THE MOUTH Paxtine used as a mouth-wash disinfects the mouth and throat, purifies the breath, and kills the germs which collect in the mouth, causing sore throat, bad teeth, bad breath, grippe, and much sickness.

THE EYES when inflamed, tired, ache and burn, may be instantly relieved and strengthened by Paxtine.

CATARRH Paxtine will destroy the germs that cause catarrh, heal the inflammation and stop the discharge. It is a sure remedy for uterine catarrh.

Paxtine is a harmless yet powerful germicide, disinfectant and deodorizer. Used in bathing it destroys odors and leaves the body antiseptically clean.

WALTON DEPARTMENT.

D. B. WALLACE, Manager.

Hand your news items to Mr. D. B. Wallace at the Walton Equitable Bank and Trust Co.'s building. He is also authorized to receive subscriptions and collect other accounts.

Don't forget the horse show in Walton at 1 p. m. next Saturday.

Mrs. G. Mosby Allen, who was quite ill the past week, is better.

J. T. Menefee, of Danville, spent last Wednesday here on business.

Mrs. Lora Wills, of Lima, Ohio, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Diers.

Mrs. W. W. Evans, the estimable wife of Rev. Evans, has been very sick the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Adams, of Key West, spent Saturday here with relatives and friends.

Geo. L. Miller, a prominent and popular citizen of Big Bone Springs, spent Saturday here on business.

E. P. Northcutt, one of our enterprising merchants, spent part of last week in Cincinnati on business.

Dr. R. E. Ryle, of Big Bone Springs spent last Wednesday here on business and with his many friends.

Miss Stella Faulstich, of Sherman, spent the past week here the guest of her cousin Miss Myrtle Murphy.

Hon. and Mrs. J. G. Tomlin spent last Wednesday in Cincinnati and Thursday at Warsaw, with friends.

Samuel C. Hicks sold a fancy driving horse to Cloyd Powers, of Verona, last Thursday, at a good figure.

Cloyd Powers, a popular young gentleman of the Verona neighborhood, was a visitor to friends here last Thursday.

E. K. Stephens and Mrs. Sallie Percival spent a day last week in Covington and Cincinnati with relatives and friends.

C. Pressly Adams spent part of the past week in Covington, being called there by the illness of his mother, Mrs. S. M. Adams.

Rivolette F. DeMoisey, who has been very ill for several weeks, is much improved with every prospect of a speedy recovery.

Be sure and attend the meeting of the Farmers Club at the Opera House next Saturday afternoon. Prof. Geo. Roberts of the Experiment Station, Lexington, will deliver a special lecture.

Geo. W. Maines, a prominent lumber dealer, of Aurora, Ind., was here part of the past week in regard to his lumber business, and contemplates establishing a large saw mill near here.

Mrs. Henry Coates, of near Richwood, spent the past couple of weeks at Latonia visiting her relatives and friends. Mrs. Coates has been ill for some time but her health is getting better. Mr. Coates spent part of last week here with friends.

W. E. Vest, the hustling real estate agent, sold last week the farm of B. C. H. Simpson, of Knoxville, Pendleton county, to H. P. Dixon. The farm is situated near Devon Station and contains 46½ acres and the price was so high that the parties were "skeered" to tell it.

A. B. Tompkins, the energetic traveling salesman for the Graf-Morsbach Saddlery Company, Cincinnati, spent Saturday and Sunday here with home folks after several weeks' absence traveling over the southern part of Kentucky. Mr. Tompkins states that he finds business very much improved in every quarter that he has been in and his firm writes him that their orders by mail indicates a general revival of business everywhere.

W. T. S. Blackburn, Simon M. Billiter and Perry Simpson, of Dry Ridge; Dr. Riffe, of Erlanger, and Geo. W. Sleet, of near Crittenden, were here last Friday in Mr. Blackburn's new automobile, interviewing the citizens relative to contributions toward the building of the new traction line to be built from Lexington to Cincinnati and pass through this territory. The company has been incorporated for $10,000,000 capital stock, and $1,000,000 has been subscribed. A bonding company has agreed to bond the road at $30,000 per mile and it is estimated that it will cost $45,000 per mile to build and equip, and Mr. Blackburn is asking donations to the extent of $15,000 per mile to insure the building of the road. The proposition is being received with considerable favor, but as this section has passed through a very trying time on account of drouth and crop failure it is going to be a difficult matter to raise the prescribed amount.

A. M. Edwards, our enterprising and public spirited citizen, spent last Friday in Cincinnati relative to his many business interests here.

M. H. Bourne, of Owenton, made an address to the voters here last Thursday night in the interest of his candidacy for circuit judge of this district.

D. E. Castleman, of Burlington, was here last Friday in the interest of his race for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney in this district.

New Wagons and Buggies—I have a nice line of new buggies and new wagons that I am offering the public at very reasonable prices. Scott Chambers, Walton, Ky. a14—8

Mrs. Wm. Stephens, who has been very ill with hemorrhages of the lungs and general debility the past month, is slowly improving and there is every hope of her recovery.

Mrs. George W. Sleet fell and broke her arm, one day last week, while attempting to get out of a hen house on her premises near town, and she is slowly recovering from the injury.

Hon. E. E. Winn, of Warsaw, spent part of the past week here in the interest of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney in this district, the primary being Thursday, April 29th.

John W. Sleet, who has been at Phoenix, Arizona, for several months on account of being afflicted with asthma, returned home last week, much improved, but he has had several attacks of the disease since his return, and may return to Arizona.

A. H. C. Miller, the mail carrier on the route between Walton and Hamilton, requests the patrons along the route who have boxes and place mail therein to please supply themselves with stamps to place on their matter to be mailed, as it is sometimes an inconvenience to make the change.

Claude Ford, the popular paying teller at the Fifth-Third National Bank, Cincinnati, has resumed his residence at Walton for the summer months, coming out every evening after his day's employment to enjoy the pleasure of the society of his mother, Mrs. Mollie Ford. His many friends here are pleased to have him with them again.

Miss Irene Hudson, teacher in elocution, assisted by Miss Freda Lotze, of Cincinnati, will give an entertainment in the chapel at the Walton High School building, Saturday, May 1st, for the benefit of the school, and an excellent program will be rendered. The music will be under the supervision of Miss Rose Whitson, of Verona, who is a charming player and will add greatly to the entertaining features of the program.

Jacob Showers, of Verona, spent last Wednesday here with his many friends. This was Mr. Showers' first visit to Walton though he has resided at Verona for twenty years and he was warmly welcomed. Mr. Showers has been the treasurer of the Grand Hotel and Gibson House in Cincinnati for the past thirty years, and spent most of his time in Cincinnati where he is very popular with the general public because of his very polite and courteous manner and all round gentlemanly qualifications. Feeling that he was entitled to a rest, and being in fine financial circumstances, he resigned his responsible position recently to enable him to enjoy the pleasures of his home and the companionship of his family, though he has been urged to resume his position after a needed rest.

CARD OF THANKS—I desire to thank the friends and neighbors for their kindness during the illness and death of my mother, Mrs. J. H. Eddins. THOS. CLORE.

Lightning struck a telephone pole out on the Petersburg pike near the residence of G. T. Gaines, yesterday morning, tearing up jack. The wires were melted for nearly half a mile.

The wedding of Mr. Charles W. Guerney and Miss Sarah Elizabeth Parish, last Wednesday evening at Erlanger Baptist church, was the most brilliant matrimonial event in the history of that little city. Mr. and Mrs. Guerney have the best wishes of the RECORDER and a host of Burlington friends.

To Teachers of Boone:—The records at State Normal at Richmond show that Boone county is entitled to 200 weeks free tuition, thereby enabling me as Supt. to make supplementary appointments to the number of 30 or more for the summer term of six weeks. Term begins June 9th and continues until July 17th. Special railroad rates for all those who attend. I hope many will take advantage of this opportunity.

Boys Not In It.

Positions of great responsibility, positions of trust and positions requiring reliability and promptness are now being occupied by young women. Business is all the time putting up bars against the gay young man. Young women are more loyal and faithful to their employers. They do not smoke, chew, drink nor gamble; nor do they loaf about the streets. Society puts up arbitrary rules for the girls and they must abide by them or lose caste. Business is becoming more and more on the point of individual character. The truth is, the girls are getting the best of the boys in many lines of genteel employment.

The State Board of Equalization after being apprised of the facts and conditions as to the assessment of Boone county property, decided to let the valuation returned by assessor B. L. Cleek stand. Each of the adjoing counties was given a boost. The fact is Boone county is, and has been for many years, one of the best assessed counties in the State—that is the value placed on her property for taxation is about that contemplated by the law, and were all the counties in the State toting as fairly as she is the State revenue would be adequate without jacking up, annually, so many of the counties.

This is as the Centralia, Missouri, Courier sees it:

Who weeps with you when you are sad, and laughs when you are glad, and smiles at you when you are mad? The editor.

Who has to be both kind and wise, and never—hardly ever—lies, and when he does creates surprise? The editor.

Who owns a heart as well as a cheek, possessed of spirit, proud yet meek, and lives on 40 cents a week? The editor.

Mrs. J. H. Eddins, of Taylorsport, died last Friday, in her 80th year. The remains were interred at Hebron. Her maiden name was Hester Ann Carder. She was married four times, her first husband being Dunnis Rouse; her second, John Pope; her third, Adam Clore; her fourth, J. H. Eddins, who survies.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S. CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

ERLANGER.

Gardens look well considering the cold weather.

Cale Burkhart entertained the G. T. U. Club, Thursday night.

Mrs. Sentour is quite ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Corbin.

The Home Department of the Christian Sunday school met with Mrs. Warren, Tuesday.

Miss Georgia Hoard, who has been very low with pneumonia, we are glad to say, is a little better.

Chas. Mohr and family leave this week for a visit to the old country, where they will spend the summer.

Mrs. Jos. Martin and family have returned home after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Hoard.

HEBRON.

May 1.—Very disagreeable weather, this.

Miss Lizzie Clore was visiting relatives in the city, last week.

Colonel Wm. Batterson visited his son, Add, at Cheviot, Ohio, last week.

Miss Permelia Corbin has been the guest of Mrs. Ada Rouse for several weeks.

Harry and Carl Hicks, of Covington, spent last Sunday with Chas. Clore and family.

Kenneth Clayton and wife were Sunday guests of his parents, Wm. Clayton and wife.

Miss Elsie Johnson, of Nashville, Tenn., was visiting her aunt, Mrs. M. G. Sayre, last week.

Frank Aylor and wife had as their guests, last Sunday, Mrs. Emma Kilgour, of Francesville, and Emmet and Minnie Baxter, of Florence.

Mr. Holland Goodridge, of Francesville, died of pneumonia, last week. Dr. F. L. Sayre was attending him. Our neighborhood is fortunate in having the service of such a physician, for since locating at Hebron he has treated 29 cases of pneumonia and all except five recovered. A wonderful record, truly.

IDLEWILD.

May 1.—Like time, opportunity must be grasped by the forelock.

Courtney Walton was transacting business in Lawrenceburg, Monday.

Sylvester Peno, of Constance, passed through the gate today moving to Petersburg.

The Bullittsburg school children, some of whom have been sick, were all able for school Monday.

Mrs. Geo. Gaines, who has been quite sick, has so far recovered as to be able to sit up a part of the time.

William Hall, wife and daughter, of Gaines Heights, were Sunday guests of Corcoran Bros., of Bullittsville.

The custom and fashions of today will be the awkwardness and outrage of tomorrow; so changeable is society.

Mrs. Harrison Clore, of Hebron, was Saturday night and Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Gaines, of Idlewild.

Miss Anna Cook Owen, of Hamilton, Montana, and Geo. Wencke and family, of Lawrenceburg, were guests of Fred Pfalzgraf, a few days since.

N. S. Walton and wife and Mrs. Geo. Kreylich were shopping in Cincinnati, Wednesday. Mrs. Walton remained over night with some of her relatives.

Benjamin Eggleston, wife, two son-in-laws, Swaney and Estes and wives, of Francesville, spent Sunday with John Eggleston and wife, of Petersburg.

The woman who would be beautiful should avoid worry and anger, for it is a well known fact that worry and anger make wrinkles that all the toilet creams ever invented wont efface.

Willliam Graves, of Bullittsville, did some papering for Fletcher Clore, Tuesday and Wednesday. He has done considerable in this line here this spring. We judge him to be an expert.

Uncle Tommy Grant and a few others met at the Bullittsburg church Wednesday and with shovel and rake put the church yard in apple pie order for the meeting Saturday and Sunday.

Some say they don't believe Mc-Guire can do the hoop act. It is 4 feet and 9 inches from the ground to the top of the toll pole when down. He comes down the grade from the school house like a whirl wind, jumps from his bike over the pole, lights astride on the opposite side and goes on without a bobble, and he can do the hoop act airight, don't you forget.

Won't Slight A Good Friend.

"If ever I need a cough medicine again I know what to get," declares Mrs. A. L. Alley, of Beals, Me., "for, after using ten bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, and seeing its excellent results in my own family and others, I am convinced it is the best medicine made for Coughs, Colds and lung trouble." Every one who tries it feels just that way. Relief is felt at once and its quick cure surprises you. For Bronchitis, Asthma, Hemorrhage, Croup, LaGrippe, Sore Throat, pain in chest or lungs its supreme 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store Erlanger.

The base ball fever was not abated here by the cold snap, and it looks now as though Belleview will have the best team she has had for years. There is plenty of ball talent in this vicinity.

All the large land owners here are very much in favor of the proposed traction line. From what talk we have heard, a company would have no trouble in securing the right of way through this place.

Those who had their tobacco in the pool here received part of their money last Tuesday. It was a busy day at the bank. Cashier Brown had to call in Miss Alma Corbin to assist him in the clerical work.

The writer and family spent last Sunday with J. H. Walton and wife, of Rabbit Hash. While there Solon Ryle had us to go look at his tobacco plants, which we found up, some having leaves on them. He will have enough plants to set 25 acres of ground, if nothing happens to them.

Ira Popes horse, which was attached to a buggy driven by Dr. Hopkins, ran off, one day last week, and in its mad career fell off the bridge at Rabbit Hash and had its back broken in two places and had to be shot. Hopkins jumped from the buggy before the bridge was reached. The buggy was a total wreck.

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY

A Battle of Names.

According to a Washington dispatch in the Tribune "there is a movement on foot in Washington to restore the use of the term 'Executive Mansion' instead of 'White House,' which has been the custom during the Roosevelt administration;" and many members of congress are said to prefer the longer and more pretentious name, says the New York Sun. "White House" it is, in the mind and mouth of every American; so known across the water, too. The term, as recent researches by correspondents of the Sun have shown, is of respectable antiquity. It seems to have been traced as far back as Madison's second administration. It will soon be entitled to its centenary. It is a familiar figure, of homely and cordial look. It is not to be put out by a long trained intruding trollop like "Executive Mansion." That may accommodate itself well to the legal, formal and clerkly style, but the popular and the fittest name is and will be "White House." President Taft is no friend of pomp and swollen words. We have no doubt that he prefers to live in a "house." As for those members of congress who from fondness for eloquence or want of taste love high-sounding names, Mr. Taft may tell them a little jest by which Dr. William Everett used to teach simplicity: "At Yale 'the president's lady retires;' at Harvard 'the president's wife goes to bed.'"

Rameses II. is dead. He was not the great ruler of ancient Egypt, as the name given him might indicate, though the date of his birth ran well back into the past. Rameses was a toad, and miners digging 500 feet below the surface at Butte, Mont., found him there, imbedded in rock. He was sound asleep, but awoke when brought into the light of day, and has been decidedly lively since. The Bronx zoo acquired him as one of its most notable curiosities, scientists having decided that he must be 1,000 or 1,200 years old, if not more so. And now, having lived to what was literally a green old age, he has succumbed to the inevitable. Life under modern conditions appears to have been too swift for a reptile that had passed so long a period in unbroken stone and quiet.

The April dividend and interest payments in this country aggregate considerably more than $123,000,000. This is about $10,000,000 above the payments of the same kind a year ago, which is convincing proof of the improvement in conditions. What is especially significant is the advance in industrial dividends, which are nearly $5,000,000 greater than in 1908. Dividends represent actual profits, while interest is money paid out for loans. But from either point of view the situation is satisfactory. It shows that industrial concerns are making more tows and that railroad and other tion s are sufficient to meet all interterstmands and in most cases to incorporar distribution of gains to stock, and scribed. Lightning struck a telephone pole out on the Petersburg pike near the residence of G. T. Gaines, yesterday morning, tearing up jack. The wires were melted for nearly half a mile.

The wedding of Mr. Charles W. Guerney and Miss Sarah Elizabeth Parish, last Wednesday evening at Erlanger Baptist church, was the most brilliant matrimonial event in the history of that little city. Mr. and Mrs. Guerney have the best wishes of the RECORDER and a host of Burlington friends.

To Teachers of Boone:—The records at State Normal at Richmond show that Boone county is entitled to 200 weeks free tuition, thereby enabling me as Supt. to make supplementary appointments to the number of 50 or more for the summer term of six weeks. Term begins June 6th and continues until July 17th. Special railroad rates for all those who attend. I hope many will take advantage of this opportunity.

TARIFF ARGUMENT

GENERAL DISCUSSION MAY PROLONG DEBATE FARTHER THAN ANTICIPATED.

WILL ALLOW WIDEST LATITUDE

Western Senators To Make Speeches—Senators Borah and Piles Will Open Ball Monday—Senate To Meet Earlier.

Washington, May 3.—The general debate on the tariff in the senate is expected to continue during the present week and it is now believed that it will extend well through next week.

The committee on finance is disposed to allow the widest latitude in the general discussion on the subject, but is at the same time prepared to proceed with the consideration of the schedules which have been passed over whenever there is a cessation of the speech-making.

Senators Borah and Piles will open the ball on Monday, the former in advocacy of an income tax and the latter in support of a high duty on lumber.

Senator Bradley has given notice for Tuesday, and Senators Dolliver and Cummins, both of Iowa, have indicated that they will make general speeches Wednesday or Thursday.

Beginning Monday the senate will convene at 11 o'clock daily and, if necessary, the session will be prolonged somewhat later in the day than ordinarily.

In the house the Philippine tariff bill probably will be reported on Thursday, but it will not be immediately taken up for consideration.

The senate tariff bill, in the section which deals with the maximum and minimum proposition, has, in the judgment of tariff experts, one very important feature.

It practically vests in the president the power to declare a tariff war against any nation or to refrain from any such war.

It is given to him to decide whether any nation is discriminating against the United States in its system of duties. This permits the government, through the state department and the other agencies provided by law, to make agreements with other nations as to trade and tariff concessions which can be made effective by a proclamation of the president without the necessity of anything in the way of legislation or treaty agreement.

In this way the delay can be obviated which would necessarily follow the submission to congress or to the senate of any proposition requiring such sanction and approval before putting it into effect.

The bill, it is explained, authorizes the president to employ at his discretion any persons to secure information or assist him in the discharge of these duties, which would mean that he can appoint commissioners representing the United States to go abroad and make agreements with foreign nations.

PASSENGERS

On Trolley Car Saw Man Robbed and Murdered, But Could Not Interfere.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 3.—Clarence White, 22 years old, who lives in a secluded section of Chester county, was the victim of a brutal murder early Sunday morning that was witnessed by passengers on a suburban trolley car, who, however, were unable to reach him in time to save his life.

While walking along a lonely country road he was held up by three highwaymen, who relieved him of a small sum of money, then cut his throat. The cries of the approaching passengers frightened away White's slayers.

Late Sunday night Ellwood and Clarence Bias and Orville Forwood were arrested on suspicion of being the murderers.

WHERE ABDUL GETS OFF.

GIRL IS SLAIN AT COLLEGE

STUDENT SHOT BY JILTED SUITOR WHO COMMITS SUICIDE.

Rich Chicagoan's Son Kills Miss Helen Marden Who Had Broken Off Engagement.

Northampton, Mass.—Porter Smith, a graduate of Dartmouth college, and the son of a wealthy Chicagoan, Wednesday fatally shot Miss Helen Ayer Marden of Somerville, Mass., on the campus of Smith college, where she was a senior, and then committed suicide. The young woman had broken off her engagement to marry him.

Miss Marden was taken to the Dickinson hospital, where she died shortly before noon. She was the daughter of Frank W. Marden, a Boston oil merchant, who lives in Somerville.

Smith, whose home was in Chicago, had been in Northampton for several days. It is said that he had persistently followed Miss Marden and tried to force his attentions on her, but she refused to have anything to do with him. In the forenoon when the majority of the students of Smith were at chapel Miss Marden came out of the student's building where she roomed. She had stayed away from the chapel exercises, it is understood, because she feared she would he further pursued by Smith on the way there. She had gone only a short distance when she met Smith.

Suddenly workmen not far distant heard a shot and a girl's scream. Turning around they saw Smith standing beside the girl with a smoking revolver in his hand. Before they could reach the couple they saw Smith raise the revolver and fire two more shots at the girl. Miss Marden sank to the ground and Smith immediately placed the muzzle of the weapon to his own head and fired, falling dead beside the young woman.

JONES' SLAYERS CAPTURED

Head Hunters Who Killed Scientist Are Caught by Philippine Commissioner Wooster and Scouts.

Chicago. — A telegram from Commissioner Wooster, secretary of the interior of the Philippine islands, to Maj. H. F. Edwards, secretary of insular affairs of the war department at Washington, announces the capture of the murderers of Dr. William Jones, the anthropologist, who was killed last March by head hunters of Dumabatos.

Upon receiving word of the murder of Dr. Jones, Maj. Edwards cabled Commissioner Wooster to capture the entire tribe connected with the murder. Wooster immediately set out with a strong detachment of scouts for the Dumabatos country to recover the body of the scientist and bring the guilty tribe to justice. Until yesterday nothing had been heard of the searchers and for a while it was thought the entire party was lost.

Sunday School Convention.

Crookston, Minn.—Hundreds of Sunday school workers from all parts of the state have come to Crookston to attend the fifty-first annual Minnesota Sunday school convention, which opened Tuesday morning. President W. H. Gold of Red Wood Falls was in the chair, and after a song and Bible service W. C. Pearce of Chicago spoke on "A Forward Movement in World Conquest." A practical demonstration of the house visitation canvass followed. In the afternoon H. Bendixen of Springfield presided, and the chief speakers were Rev. E. M. Hullett of Detroit and Rev. Charles Flesher of Fergus Falls. The convention then broke up into denominational meetings.

Prisoner in Suicide Attempt.

New York.—Emil Morhidge, an Egyptian, awaiting extradition to Illinois, made an attempt at suicide by opening veins in both arms, in his cell in the Tombs. The charge against Morhidge is embezzlement.

Harriman Loses Appeal.

New York.—The appellate division of the supreme court has denied the appeal of E. H. Harriman for the dismissal of a suit for $800,000 against him brought by John Donovan of St. Joseph, Mo.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR HARGIS.

Slayer of Feudist Father Is Convicted by Jury—New Trial Refused.

Irvine, Ky.—Condemned to spend the remainder of his life in prison for killing his father, Beach Hargis gave no sign of emotion Wednesday when the verdict of the jury which found him guilty was announced.

Beach sat between his mother and sister. No one of the three spoke. They sat motionless, waiting for the sheriff to take Beach to his cell. After the courtroom became nearly deserted, tears silently began coursing down the mother's cheeks. She had spent much of her fortune in the defense of the reckless youth, who slew his father and her husband—and had spent it in vain, the jury verdict proved.

This was the second trial of Hargis for this crime. At the first trial the jury was not able to agree upon a verdict. United States Senator W. O. Bradley was chief counsel for the defense in both trials.

Irvine, Ky.—Beach Hargis, who was convicted of the murder of his father, James Hargis, was refused a new trial Friday and Judge Adams sentenced him to life imprisonment.

ARMENIAN SLAYS IN COURT.

Outraged Physician Fatally Shoots Nephew in Detroit, Mich., Police Station.

Detroit, Mich. — Dr. G. K. Boyajian, an Armenian, Friday shot and fatally wounded his nephew, Harotoon H. Gaspanian, while the latter was being arraigned in police court with his aunt, the physician's wife, on a statutory charge.

Gaspanian's home is Lynn, Mass.

Dr. Boyajian fired four shots at his nephew, three of which found their mark. He then turned the revolver on his wife and fired the two remaining bullets at her. One missed her entirely and the other only penetrated the crown of her hat. Joseph L. Kraemer, a newspaper artist who was sketching Mrs. Boyajian, saved the woman's life by pushing her into a vacant jury room.

Mrs. Boyajian, who is 28 years of age, and her 23-year-old nephew were arrested on complaint of Dr. Boyajian.

SHOWS BEET SUGAR GROWTH.

Secrstary Wilson Sends the Information on the Industry Demanded by the Senate.

Washington. — The secretary of agriculture has sent to the senate the information regarding the beet sugar industry for which he was asked in a resolution adopted by the senate on April 8.

The data gives a detailed report of the growth of the industry since 1896, showing that the production of sugar from beets has increased from 42,000 tons in 1896 to 425,000 tons in 1908. Detailed information as to the effect of the establishment of beet sugar factories on the value of surrounding farm land and as to the various factories that have been established throughout the country is given hy the secretary.

Ex-Wisconsin Congressman Dead.

Washington.—Former Representative Joseph W. Babcock of Wisconsin, for 14 years a member of the lower house of congress, and for many years chairman of the national Republican congressional committee, died at his home here at 9:45 Tuesday. He was 59 years old.

He had been ill for some weeks with a complication of liver and kidney troubles.

Benson Again Acquitted.

Washington.—John A. Benson of San Francisco, charged with bribery of government officials in connection with western land irregularities, was acquitted by a jury here.

The jury was out only 30 minutes and the announcement of the acquittal was met by a demonstration of approval among the audience.

Benson fleetingly shook hands with the jurymen and thanked them. This is the second time that Benson has been acquitted in this jurisdiction within a year.

130 DEAD IN STORM

MIDDLE AND SOUTHERN STATES SWEPT BY FIERCE TORNADOES.

TENNESSEE SUFFERS WORST

Many Towns Are Totally Destroyed by Winds—Wide Area Covered and Hundreds Are Left Homeless—Partial List of Dead.

Chicago.—At least 130 persons were killed and 300 injured by the tornadoes which swept the middle and southern states Thursday. The property losses will total several million dollars. Only meager reports had been received Friday from the stricken districts. Two were killed and half a dozen hurt in this city.

The tornadoes touching here and there carried their devastation through Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Mic... Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri.

An incomplete list of deaths follows:

Chicago, Ill.	2
Texarkana City, Ill.	4
Horn Lake, Miss.	18
Fayetteville, Tenn.	15
Summerville, Mo.	3
Golden, Mo.	11

Danville, Ala.	2
Noblesville, Tenn.	1
Hardeman County, Tenn.	1
Clarksville, Tenn.	1
Centerville, Tenn.	1
Franklin, Tenn.	1
Hillsboro, Tenn.	4
Laconia, Tenn.	2
Bells, Tenn.	2
Quito, Tenn.	8
Alton, Mo.	6

Nashville, Tenn.—Advices being received by the Banner show that the storm was the worst ever known in this state. The indications are that the death list in this state will foot up seventy or more, and the damage will run into the millions of dollars. The wires are prostrated in every direction, and it will be several days before the full extent of the loss of life and damage will be known.

Twenty persons were reported to have been killed and 40 injured in the tornado which swept over the eastern section of Giles county. Bee Springs, a village in the southeast section, 16 miles from Pulaski, was reported to have been totally destroyed. The country in this section is devastated and details are meager.

Mammoth Springs, Ark.—A tornado passed 18 miles east of here killing eight persons and injuring many others The known dead: B. F. Sanders, wife and daughter; George Whitworth and wife, Robert Frost and wife, Miss Holland.

South Bend, Ind. — Six hundred feet of the west wall of the Northern Indiana state prison at Michigan City was blown down by a cyclone which passed over this section of the state. The prisoners were all in their cells at the time of the accident, and any possible outbreak was prevented by the prompt action of Warden Reid, who placed patrols in the corridors with orders to use their rifles to put down any attempt at escape. Although the convicts were excited, no effort was made to effect a delivery. Company F, Third regiment Indiana National Guard, received orders from Gov. Marshall to proceed immediately to Michigan City to preserve order and prevent any possible outbreak. No lives were lost by the falling of the walls.

Evansville, Ind.—A wind storm in southern Indiana and western Kentucky caused many thousands of dollars' damage in the destruction of outbuildings and fences. The gale blew at the velocity of 50 miles an hour. Boats could not leave port. The damage along the river is quite heavy.

Detroit, Mich.—A tidal wave ten feet high at South Haven, on the east shore of Lake Michigan, was the most unusual feature of the terrific wind and rain storm which swept over lower Michigan. The wave caused about $2,000 damage to water front property at South Haven.

Cincinnati.—A violent wind storm that swept over Kentucky hit Latonia with almost the severity of a tornado, causing a damage of $10,000 to the Latonia race track and from $10,000 to $15,000 damage to the town of Latonia and the vicinity.

At Piqua, O., a tornado 20 miles wide dived down in this section and caused a property damage estimated at $100,000. The path of destruction extends over several counties, and extreme damage was done by the wind in the towns of Piqua, Sidney, Houston, Fletcher, St. Paris and Kirkwood. No loss of life.

Receiver for Evelyn Thaw.

New York.—Justice McAvoy signed an order Friday appointing George B. Hayes receiver for Evelyn Nesbit Thaw in the supplementary proceedings brought by Elisa Hartwig, a milliner, to enforce a judgment of $263.25 obtained against Mrs. Thaw last September.

Brother and Sister Drown.

Atlanta, Ga.—William and Pearl Withra, brother and sister, were drowned Friday as a result of a boat capsizing.

HUNTING BIG GAME IN EAST AFRICA

A Lion Shooting in Somaliland

By Lord Delamere

Foremost among the great hunting authorities of the English speaking world is Lord Delamere. He is credited with being the heaviest killer in the party which bagged the record number of African lions some few years ago. In East Central Africa his prowess is familiar to every native. Not long ago a locality beset with lions sent a delegation four hundred miles to call on Lord Delamere to ask him to come and wipe out the destroyers of their cattle. In this article he vividly contrasts the theory and practice of lion hunting in the region which Ex-President Roosevelt will invade.

THE best piece of lion tracking I ever saw lasted five full hours and is so memorable in several respects that I purpose to use it as an introduction to that general method of lion hunting.

Two of my men got badly mauled by a lion, so our camp had to stop where it was till they could be moved. After a time one of them was able to walk about with his arm in a sling, and the other was getting on well, so one night I decided to leave the big camp next day and go with two or three camels to some villages only a day's march away. Early the next morning Mahomed Noor, the headman, started with the camels. I stopped behind to get some breakfast. Just as we were going to follow, a cameiman, who had gone up the river-bed close by to get some water, came running back to say that a lion had been down to drink at one of the shallow sand wells in the night. I started at once with Abdullah and two other trackers, telling my pony-boy to follow on as soon as he could get the pony saddled. When tracking, I have always found it the best plan to have the pony led some distance behind. The boy ought to have no difficulty in following the tracks of two or three men and a lion, and if the pony is kept close up, it is sure to stamp or blow its nose at the critical moment.

When we got to the well there was the spoor plain enough in the sand, but rather blurred by some rain which had fallen at dayhreak. This made the tracking a little difficult after we left the river-bed, but when we had followed it slowly for some distance, we came to a place where the lion had lain down under a thick bush, evidently to shelter from the rain, as the spoor after this was quite distinct on the top of the damp ground. This made us think we were in for a short track, for it must have been light when the lion went on again from here, and lions generally lie up shortly after the sun rises; but this day proved an exception, because it was cloudy and cool through the forenoon.

Trailing the King of Beasts.

The spoor now led us along a sandy path, where we could follow it as fast as we could walk. When it turned off into the bush we quite expected to see the lion at any moment; but not a bit of it—he wandered about through endless clumps of mimosa and "irgin" bushes, as if he did not mean to lie up at all.

The track at last led us down a little sandy watercourse, which it followed for some distance. Up to this time we had had no real difficulty in making it out, but now came our first serious check. The nullah turned off along the side of a stony ridge, and, instead of going along it, the lion had turned up the hill. We had got the general direction that the lion had been going in, but this was no good to us, as on casting forward in the same line to the bottom of the other side of the ridge where there was some sandy ground, we could find no sign of his having passed in that direction. We spent some time hunting about, growing less hopeful as time went on. A man following a trail by sight certainly has an enormous advantage over a hound hunting it by nose, because time is of no particular object to him, and every direction can be tried in turn. After making out cast forward we went back to the little water-course, and followed that down for some distance, hoping that the lion had turned down hill again; but here, too, we were disappointed, and I gravitated back to where we had first lost the spoor. We knew that the lion had not gone straight on, nor had he turned back; he must have gone along the top of the ridge and then crossed into other stony hills where it was hopeless to try to track him.

Abdullah, who is never defeated, said there was a big river-bed further on in the direction in which the lion was going. It seemed a very slender chance, as he might have turned off anywhere in between, but it was the only one, so off we went. We were evidently in luck that day, for we had only gone about a quarter of a mile when we struck the spoor. The lion seemed now to have made up his mind as to his direction, for he kept on straight down the middle of the river-bed. The sun had come out from behind the clouds, and in places the sand was very deep, so that we were not sorry when at last the track led into a little island of bush in the great flat sand. There was no doubt the lion was at home, for on casting round no sign was perceptible of a track coming out. The island, raised a little above the river-bed, was formed of a mass of thick-tangled bush and creepers clustered round a few big trees. The water coming down the river after heavy rain had washed it roughly into the form of a triangle, the apex of which pointed up the river. From this point the sides widened out to the other end, which was about thirty yards broad, the whole length being somewhat under a hundred yards.

Driving the Lion to Bay.

The shape made it an easy place to drive, for a little way out from the point one could easily command the whole of it. The lion was almost certain to break out of one of the sides towards the bush on the banks of the river-bed, in which case I should get an easy broadside shot. If we followed the track into the place, the noise we were sure to make would be very likely to get the beast on his legs, and he would sneak out at one side as we went in at the other, especially as the water had left a lot of dead sticks along the edges, over which it would be impossible to walk quietly. Abdullah also said that from the way he had wandered about this lion must be very hungry, and would sleep lightly. These considerations decided us to drive. I posted myself with Abdullah a few yards out from the point, and the other two men, having collected some stones, began throwing them in at the far end. Abdullah was right about this lion sleeping lightly; for at the first stone there was a growl and a crash in the bushes and then, for a minute or two, not a sound. The men started to walk down, one on each side, shooting and throwing in stones. I was watching them, and wondering what had happened to the lion, when there was a faint crackling just in front of us, and he appeared at the point of the island. Although we were standing within a few yards of him, and absolutely in the open, he did not see us.

He was facing straight towards us, and was so close that I did not like to fire at him as, on receiving the bullet, he would be very likely to plunge in the direction he was going and be into us; nor did I want him to come any closer; so, as he stepped down on to the sand, I moved my rifle up towards my shoulder to attract his attention. He saw the movement at once, stopped dead, and turned his head sharply towards us. For the fraction of a second I thought he was going to be startled into charging, but he plunged off to the left with an angry snarl as we over his shoulder. As he passed I pulled, and he skated along on his stomach and fell down a little ledge in the sand. This slewed him round, and he lay facing us, spread-eagled on the sand, evidently quite unable to move. All the life in him seemed concentrated in his eyes, which glared at us furiously. Another shot put him out of his misery. The first shot, a very bad one, had grazed the spine just in front of the withers; another quarter of an inch higher and it would have missed altogether.

This lion was quite maneless, except for a few long hairs on each side of the neck, and his teeth were worn down quite short, so he was evidently very old. He was in very good condition, notwithstanding, but his stomach was quite empty, which accounted for his going so far before lying up. We had to stop at the main camp for the night when we got there, and did not follow up our camels till the next day. I have described this track rather at length because it is a good example of many similar days.

Perils of the Man Eater.

My first experience in tracking lions was early in 1892, and the night before was rather an exciting one. After hunting elephants unsuccessfully for about a month, we were on our way south, when we arrived one day at some villages where the natives had been very much bothered by five lions which were said to be still in the neighborhood. A girl had been killed two days before, and an enormous amount of damage had been done among the sheep and cattle. The first day we camped there two of our party had shooting zarebas made at the village to which the lions generally came, and just before sunset they went off there.

I tied up our two donkeys just outside the camp, on the chance that the lions might come and look us up. Just after dark we were having dinner in the tent when there was a scuffle outside, and it was evident that something was attacking our donkeys. It was pitch dark, and we fired several shots in the direction of the sound before we discovered that the attacking beasts were hyenas. We did not mind having a donkey killed instantaneously by a lion, but we had not bargained for the poor beasts getting mauled by hyenas, so taking a lamp we went out to see what had happened. My donkey had got off with a nasty bite in the hollow of the hind leg above the hock, and we had him taken into the camp at once. The other was completely disemboweled and must have been killed instantly. We could not find any dead beasts, but we were pretty sure that one or two must have been hit. Seeing that if the lions did come to the dead donkey there would not be much chance of hitting them on so dark a night, we pulled the carcass right under the skerm or fence round the camp, and, to prevent hyenas dragging it away, tied a rope to one of its legs, and passing it over the fence, fastened it to a heavy water barrel inside the camp. We sat up for a bit and got a few shots at hyenas, and then we went to bed, telling the sentry to keep a sharp lookout and to let us know if lions came to the carcass.

Some time after I awoke to find Abdullah bending over me, with my rifle in his hand. He was frightfully excited, and all I could get out of him was "Libah, sahib, libah!" ("Lion, sir, lion!") Jumping up I rushed out just as my companion fired two shots into the darkness. The first thing I saw when I got to where he stood was that a great piece of the skerm round the camp had disappeared, leaving a broad gap. I could not for a moment think what had happened, and then it struck me that when the carcase had been dragged away the water barrel must have got hitched against the inside of the interlaced mimosa boughs and the whole lot had gone together. It was frightfully dark outside, and we stood peering out for some time without being able to distinguish anything; but after a few minutes we could hear something tearing at the flesh quite close by. We had a shot or two at the sound, and the beasts, whatever they were, went away. As at that time we knew nothing about lions, we were not quite sure that they were not hyenas after all; but Abdullah stuck to it they were lions, so we got our beds and lay down one on each side of the opening, just behind the fence to watch, hoping that the brutes would come back. Nothing further happened, however. At dayhreak we sallied out to see if by any chance we had managed to hit a lion, but we only found two or three dead hyenas. One of these brutes had been partly eaten; we thought at the time by other hyenas, as it was still too dark to make out tracks. We came to the conclusion we had made idiots of ourselves, and had been shooting all night at hyenas, and we did not feel any the better when our friends came back from their night at the village and told us we had probably frightened every lion out of the country by our bombardment.

Reading the Lion Tracks.

Abdullah still insisted that there had been lions round the camp, and a little later we found the spoor of one big lion by the body of the half-eaten hyena. The ground was very stony and there were no other tracks to be seen, but one lion could hardly have dragged the donkey and heavy barrel away so quickly, so there were probably more. The other hunters had got hold of a man at the village who said he knew where the lions always lay, so they went with him. Soon after they left, Abdullah, who had been hunting about, came and told me that he had picked up the track of one lion on soft ground a little way from camp, and that we ought to follow it. At that time none of us knew much about tracking, and we had had such bad luck after the elephants that we did not think much of our shikaries, and I did not think it was much good, Abdullah persuaded me and I went. After we had followed the track for some distance I quite caught his enthusiasm, and when the single track was joined by three others, I was divided between delight at the prospect of having four lions all to myself and the thought that perhaps I had more on my hands than I could manage alone.

After a track of about an hour we came in sight of two or three big thickets of "irgin" bushes surrounded by open mimosa scrub and intersected by narrow paths. My second shikari at that time was a very tall fellow, called Jama, with enormous feet. Several times during the track Abdullah had turned round to pitch into him for making such a noise, and now he confided to me that "Jama walk all same cow," and that we had better leave him behind here with the pony and boy, as the lions were sure to be in the place in front of us. Knowing nothing about it, I agreed and went on with Abdullah. We were walking quietly along the outside of one of the thickets when Abdullah suddenly clutched me by the arm and pointed towards a tree standing on the edge of the bush yards off. The tree was divided into two towards the bottom, and the sun was throwing the shadow of a bush on the ground inside the hollow.

This was where Abdullah was pointing, getting more excited but I could make out nothing at all, until a great yellow beast moved suddenly out of the shadow and slipped away on the far side. I fired from the hip, letting off both barrels into the tree. We rushed round to the other side of the thicket just in time to see a fine lioness come out. I could not get a clear shot at once, and when I did, after running some distance, I was shaking so that I could not get on her at all, and missed. She kept lobbing along just ahead, every now and then stopping to look around and show her teeth at us. Each time she stopped I shot, but so badly that I wanted seven bullets at different ranges without touching her. The first six did not seem to annoy her at all, but the last hit the ground just under her teeth, and either the bullet so close, frightened her or a stone hit her, for she sprang off with a snarl and a flourish of her tail and, putting on the pace, in a minute or two ran clean away from us. I was terribly disappointed and annoyed with myself, and I thought of course, that everything was over for the day after all this shooting; but Abdullah, who was almost weeping, hardly gave me time to get my wind a little before he rushed me back again. As we ran round the place where we had first seen the lioness, a fine lion appeared walking slowly out of another thicket towards us. As I shot, he turned and plunged thorugh an opening in the bushes to our right. We ran round an outstanding bush to head him if he broke out, and met a lion facing us. Just as I fired I heard a moan to the right, so I was sure it was not the same lion. This one staggered away at the shot and fell dead close by.

Death of the Jungle Lord.

Abdullah called up Jama and the pony boy, and they soon had the hide off and tied on the pony. I thought all the time that Abdullah knew all about the other one, but as he seemed to be going right home, I asked him if we had not better go and look for it, and he replied that it was the same lion all the time, and that I had missed it the first shot. I did not feel quite sure about it myself, but the moan in the bushes could only have come from a wounded beast, so I told him we had better go and look anyway. He evidently thought it was waste of time, but when we got back to where the lion had been bit we soon found some blood, and going quietly down a little path between the "irgin" bushes we came round a corner almost on top of the lion. He was stone dead. I was very pleased at scoring off Abdullah, as he had shown such evident disgust at my shooting.

We met one of our party on our way back to camp, and told him he might run across the lioness if he followed our track back to the place we had come from. An hour after we got back to camp he came galloping up, having seen two lions, curiously enough both males, and had shot one with a better mane than either of mine.

I have at another time described two different methods of hunting lions. One of them could hardly be called a method at all, as it depended on news brought in by natives as to where a lion had actually been seen. The second plan consisted of tying up a donkey for a bait, and sitting up to watch at night. A much more interesting way of hunting lions than either of these and a very successful one if the native shikaries employed are any good, is this process of tracking them. A lion lies up in some cool, shady place for the day, unless the sky is overcast and the sun cannot get out, when he will occasionally be found hunting at any hour. If you can strike his spoor of the night before there is a very good chance of following it up to where the lion lies, should the ground be suitable. There is no form of hunting so exciting as this. When the spoor is found there is generally nothing to show if you have come on it early or late in the lion's wanderings, so that it is quite impossible to tell whether it leads you for hours through all sorts of country, or whether you will find him a mile down on a sandy bank. A path, it turns off into a dense patch of reeds or bush close to where the lion is lying. It is extraordinary the excitement grows as you follow and still you keep on finding fresh tracks, sometimes very slowly, sometimes very quickly, and then part of a footprint may be seen on a soft piece of ground, or a few scratches among stones, at other times the spoor is so heavy that you can walk over a hundred yards at a time, when the spoor is visible many times in every yard. Then, after minute go by and you have been following for hours, you begin to think you are getting nowhere, and that you have been following about vainly in a circle, and then comes the moment when, after a long and wretched you suddenly see the lion lying up in front of you, and your spirits rise to fever heat. A sharp whistle or snapping of twigs will generally induce the lion to get up, and then comes the moment when you must be very careful not to shoot too soon, or you will only wound the lion, and he will probably charge you, and if he does not succeed in killing you at once, he will certainly escape into some patch of thick bush, where it will be impossible to follow him up. At all times of tracking lions, whether on foot or on horseback, it is necessary to be very careful not to get between the lion and his retreat, as he will almost invariably charge if he finds himself headed off. Another thing to be careful about is not to get between the lion and the sun, as he will probably charge if he finds himself headed off. Another thing to be careful about is not to get between the lion and the sun, as he will probably charge if he finds himself headed off.

HE PLUNGED OFF WITH AN ANGRY SNARL.

steal forward until the lion is sighted or ringed in a small clump of bush. Then, when all is over, and the lion is being taken off, how pleasant it is to sit in the shade, listening to the excited talk of the natives, and letting your nerves quiet down again after the hopes and fears of the morning. You ride home to camp with the lion skin behind your saddle, while one of your men after another gives his version of the morning's proceedings in a hunting song. On the other hand, when you get a shot, and miss after a long and difficult track, it seems as if any number of lions killed in the future will never make up for the loss of this one, which is always the biggest lion, carrying the finest mane you have ever seen. The ride home to camp is then a silent one, as no lion means no sheep for the men, and they are correspondingly downhearted.

The first thing to be done in tracking is to find fresh spoor. Natives will often bring news of spoor, but unluckily the average villager's idea of a fresh track is rather hazy. I have several times gone a long way to find at the end a few days old. On one occasion two natives arrived, saying there were fresh lion tracks in a river-bed, luckily not more that half a mile from camp, but when we got there the fresh lion tracks turned out to be the spoor of two hyenas, at least a week old.

The spoor of the large spotted hyena is not unlike that of a lioness on certain ground, but the difference can easily be told, because a hyena has claws like a dog, whereas the retractive claws of a lion are always sheathed and leave no mark. The best way to find spoor is to look for it yourself with good trackers. Should there be any villages near camp which lions have been in the habit of raiding it is very necessary to get there as early as possible in the morning. If once the large flocks of sheep and goats and herds of camels which have been shut up in the villages all night are let out, the ground all about is a mass of indistinguishable footprints, and every path from the village is choked with long strings of beasts going off to their feeding grounds. Hitting off a lion's spoor under these circumstances is almost impossible, and the dust raised by the herds is very disagreeable.

Besides villages, any well in the neighborhood is a good place to look for spoor. If a lion is about there ought to be no difficulty in picking up his spoor within a day or two.

Baffling Ways of the Jungle Folk.

Rather curious coincidences are sometimes brought to light by spoor. Not very long after the date of the story just related, one of our party went to a place where two lions had been killing regularly, and sat up two nights for them with a donkey as bait. The lions must have left the district for a day or two while he was there, as there were no fresh tracks to be found anywhere about. The day after he came back to camp I happened to ride out in that direction. Soon after we started we came on the spoor of two lions, which led us along a path till we came to the shooting zareba. The night after he had left, the lions had walked over the very spot where his donkey had been tied up in the middle of the path.

A little later, again, I happened to be at a place where he had camped a few days before. A lion roared near my camp several times in the night, and next morning I heard he had taken a sheep from a village close b We picked up his spoor in a riv bed near the camp, and after follo ing it for some distance came to s wells. The lion had drunk fr between the drinks had crawled under the fence of a s which had been mag water. After dr time he had gone.

Clerk and Winn Nominated.

The ballot boxes used at the primary election, last Thursday, were in the possession of A. H. Renaker, Chairman of the County Democratic committee, at the People Deposit Bank, by the appointed hour, last Friday, and all the members of the county committee were present except Grimsley, of Big Bone; Kendy of Union, and Oneman, of Beaver. The meeting was called to order and the official count was made, which was as follows:

Official Vote of Boone.

Cammack's plurality, 1813.
Cammack's majority, 491.
Winn's majority, 1248.

The election in Burlington was very quiet, except a little on the edge.

Chairman Renaker reports the cost of holding the primary election in this county is $144.25.

In the race for Commonwealth's Attorney 1,364 votes were cast, 18 less than were polled for Judge.

In the race for Judge, 1,382 votes were cast, Cammack receiving 73 votes more than both his opponents.

In the race for Judge Burlington cast 12 more votes than Petersburg, and Attorney she beat Petersburg 4 votes.

Mr. Castleman received the news of his defeat like a philosopher and set the cigars up to the large crowd that was present.

F. C. Greene received votes as follows: At Burlington, 7; Belleview, 1; Bullittsville, 2; Petersburg, 1; Walton, 2; Constance, 2; Rabbit Hash 2; Union, 7—a total of 18.

To the Wool Growers of Boone Co:

Bids on the Bullittsville pooled wool will be considered at 3 p. m. on May 20th at Idlewild. There are now 5700 fleeces on the pooled list. Bids are to be for and include all wool on the pooled list May 20th. Bidders are requested to make separate bids on the good wool, fleece grown, black wool and dead wool. The price of burry wool will be determined by those who have it and the buyer on day of delivery. The wool will be delivered at the following places: Bullittsville, Petersburg, Burlington, Belleview and Verona. Send all bids to J. H. Stevens, Burlington, Ky., R. R. No. 1. The committee reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

The Great Imported German Coach Stallion,
Plutarch 3183

Will make the season of 1909 at T. E. Randall's stable, one mile west of Idlewild, Boone County, Ky., on the Burlington and Petersburg Turnpike at

$12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,

money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular fall season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

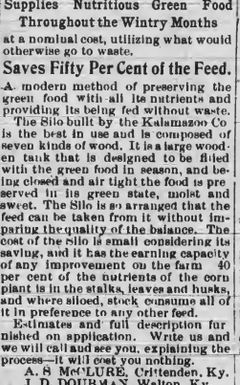
The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm. Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.



Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

High Vine, 2733, foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667; grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730; Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2882, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1365; second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60; third dam, Maxey by Granger; fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

High Vine, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together into a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and feeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

One day last week Leslie McMullen, who lives a mile and a half south of Burlington, shot at a crow with a muzzle loading shot gun, the barrel of which exploded, tearing off the first joint of the index finger on his right hand. Had he been grasping the barrels of the gun with his left hand, it would have been blown off. Mr. McMullen was fortunate in that he was not hurt worse.

J. M. Craven, of Limaburg neighborhood, the county's most noted breeder of Hampshire swine, has been receiving more orders for pigs, in the last few months, than he could fill. He has purchased of J. E. Rouse, of Payne's Depot, Scott county, a very fine Hampshire which he will have at the head of his herd in the next few days.

The wind storm that swept this county about 2 o'clock last Friday morning, assumed the proportions of a tornado in some places, and much timber and many rail fences and small buildings were leveled. It was the heaviest in East Bend neighborhood, where a large barn belonging to William Craig was demolished and the residences of Boone Williamson and Charles Stephens were unroofed.

At Beaver the cupola on the Christian church was blown off.

Richwood was in the path of the severest part of the storm and considerable damage was done there, a large barn belonging to one of the Mr. Bedingers being badly damaged.

In nearly every locality in the county more or less minor damage resulted from the wind, and people, generally, were very much alarmed during the storm which lasted some time.

DOLLAR WHEAT HAS COME TO STAY

IN LESS THAN FIVE YEARS CENTRAL CANADA WILL BE CALLED UPON TO SUPPLY THE UNITED STATES.

A couple of years ago, when the announcement was made in these columns that "dollar wheat" had come to stay, and that the time was not far distant when the central provinces of Canada—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—would be called upon to supply a large part of the wheat consumption in the United States, there were many who laughed at the predictions and ridiculed the idea of wheat reaching the dollar point and staying there. Both of these predictions have come to pass. Dollar wheat is here—and it is not only here, but is here to stay; and at the same time, whatever unpleasant sensations it may arouse in the super-sensitive American, Central Canada is already being called upon to help keep up the bread supply, and within the next five years will, as James J. Hill says, literally "become the bread-basket of our increasing millions."

There are few men in the United States better acquainted with the wheat situation than Mr. Hill, and there are few men, if any, who are inclined to be more conservative in their expressed views. Yet it was this greatest of the world's railroad men who said a few days ago that "the price of wheat will never be substantially lower than it is today"—and when it is taken into consideration that at that time wheat had soared to $1.20, well above the dollar mark, the statement is peculiarly significant, and doubly significant is the fact that in this country the population is increased at the ratio of 65 per cent., while the yield of wheat and other products is increasing at the rate of only 25 per cent. For several years past the cost of living has been steadily increasing in the United States, and this wide difference in production and consumption is the reason.

This difference must be supplied by the vast and fertile grain regions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. There is now absolutely no doubt of this. Even the press of the country concedes the fact. Results have shown that no other country in the world can ever hope to equal those provinces as wheat producers, and that no other country can produce as hard or as good wheat. Said a great grain man recently, "If United States wheat maintains the dollar mark, Canada wheat will be well above a dollar a bushel, for in every way it is superior to our home-grown grain."

With these facts steadily impinging their truth upon our rapidly growing population, it is interesting to note just what possibilities as a "wheat grower" our Northern neighbor possesses. While the United States will never surrender her prestige in any manufacturing or commercial line, she must very soon acknowledge, and with as much grace as she can, that she is bound to be beaten as a grain producer. It must be conceded that a great deal of the actual truth about the richness of Canada's grain producing area has been "kept out of sight," as Mr. Hill says, by the strenuous efforts of our newspapers and magazines to stem the exodus of our best American farmers into those regions. It is a fact that up to the present time, although Canada has already achieved the front rank in the world's grain producers, the fertile prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have as yet scarcely been scratched. Millions of acres, free for the taking, still await our American farmers; and when these millions are gone there are other millions in regions not yet opened up to immigration. A few years ago the writer, who has been through those wheat provinces several times, laughed with others of our people at the broad statement that Canada was bound to become "John Bull's Bread Basket." Now, after a last trip (and though he is a stanch American) he frankly believes that not only will Canada become John Bull's bread-basket, but it will within the next decade at least BECOME THE BREAD-BASKET OF THE UNITED STATES. Perhaps this may be a hard truth for Americans to swallow, but it is a truth, nevertheless. And it is at least a partial compensation to know that hundreds of thousands of our farmers are profiting by the fact by becoming producers in this new country.

The papers of this country have naturally made the most of the brief period of depression which swept over Canada, but now there is not a sign of it left from Winnipeg to the coast. Never have the three great wheat raising provinces been more prosperous. Capital is coming into the country from all quarters, taking the form of cash for investment, industrial concerns seeking locations, and, best of all, substantial and sturdy immigrants come to help populate the prairies. Towns are booming; scores of new elevators are springing up; railroads are sending out their branch lines in all directions; thousands of prosperous farmers are leaving their prairie shelters for new and modern homes—"built by wheat:" everywhere is a growing happiness and contentment—happiness and contentment built by wheat—the "dollar wheat," which has come to stay. Notwithstanding this, the Canadian Government is still giving away its homesteads and selling pre-emptions at $3.00 an acre, and the Railway and Land Companies are disposing of their lands at what may be considered nominal figures.

ENEMIES OF WAR HOLD A CONGRESS

SECOND NATIONAL PEACE CONFERENCE IN CHICAGO.

EMINENT MEN ARE PRESENT

Statesmen, Diplomats and Political Economists Assemble and Discuss the Final Elimination of Armed Conflicts.

Chicago.—The sessions of the second National Peace Congress, which opened in Orchestra hall Monday afternoon, attracted to Chicago many thousand earnest enemies of war, among them being many distinguished statesmen, diplomats and political economists. President Taft is the honorary president of the congress, and Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson is its active president, but neither of these gentlemen was able to be present, owing to their official duties. However, there was no lack of eminent men to preside over the sessions.

As a preliminary to the congress, special peace services were held in many Chicago churches Sunday morning, peace meetings arranged by labor and socialist organizations were held in the afternoon, and in the evening there was a big mass meeting, at which addresses were delivered by Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones and Rev. Emil G. Hirsch, both of Chicago, and President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell university.

Welcome to the Congress.

Orchestra hall was filled to the limit Monday when the first session was called to order by Robert Treat Paine of Boston, the presiding officer, for governors, mayors and hundreds of clubs had been asked to appoint delegates, and most of them had responded. President Dickison's address, the same he delivered several weeks ago before the Hamilton club, was read, and the congress was then formally welcomed by Gov. Charles S. Deneen for the state, Mayor Fred A. Busse for the city and Rev. A. Eugene Bartlett, chairman of the reception committee. The secretary then read a brief letter from President Taft, in which the chief executive heartily commended the aims of the congress.

Miss Anna B. Eckstein of Boston next was introduced to the meeting and read a "World Petition to the Third Hague Conference." This was followed by an address by Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the American Peace society, on "The Present Position of the Peace Movement."

What Has Been Accomplished.

Dr. Trueblood said in part:

"Let me sketch in the barest outlines what has already been accomplished. The interpretation will take care of itself.

"I. The men and women, now a great host, who believe that the day is past when blind brute force should direct the policies of nations and preside at the settlement of their differences, are now thoroughly organized. A hundred years ago there was not a society in existence organized to promote appeal to the forum of reason and right in the adjustment of international controversies. To-day there are more than 500, nearly every important nation having its group of peace organizations. Their constituents are numbered by tens of thousands, from every rank and class in society—philanthropists, men of trade and commerce, educators and jurists, workingmen, statesmen, rulers even.

Triumph of Arbitration.

"II. The position which the peace movement has reached is no less distinctly determined by the practical attainments of arbitration. We are this year celebrating what is really the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of our movement, for it was in 1809 that David L. Dodge, a Christian merchant of New York city, wrote the pamphlet which brought the movement into being, and led six years later to the organization in his parlor in New York of the first Peace society in the world. There had then been no arbitrations between nations in our modern sense of the word 'nations.' In the 100 years since 1809 more than 250 important controversies have been settled by this means, not to mention an even greater number of less important cases, the settlement of which involved the principle of arbitration. Within the past 20 years so rapid has been the triumph of arbitration that more than 100 international differences have been disposed of by this means, or between five and six a year for the whole 20 years. Arbitration is no longer an experiment. It is the settled practice of the nations. A score of disputes to-day go naturally to arbitration where one gives rise even to talk of war.

The Hague Conferences.

"III. In order to determine further the advanced position which the peace movement has attained on its practical side, the two Hague conferences and what they have accomplished must be taken into account. It is still the habit of some persons to speak disparagingly of these great gatherings and their results. Some do it because they are satisfied with nothing short of immediate perfection; others because they wish the whole movement for the abolition of war to fail. Others do it purely from ignorance.

"What have the two Hague conferences really done toward bringing about that state of world organization and co-operation, the result of which will, as is universally conceded, bring the general peace of the world and final relief from the ruinous burdens of 'bloated armaments,' because it will establish the reign of law among the nations as it now prevails among individuals throughout the civilized world?

What They Have Done.

"The first Hague conference gave us the permanent international court of arbitration, to which 24 powers finally became parties by ratification of the convention. This court has now for eight years been in successful operation, and not less than four controversies have been referred to it during the past year. The second Hague conference enlarged and strengthened the convention under which this court was set up, and made the court the tribunal, not of 25 powers, but of all the nations of the world.

"Another step of still greater moment was taken by the second Hague conference in the direction of providing a perfect substitute for force in the settlement of international differences. It voted without a dissenting delegation for the principle of an inwith judges always in service and international court of arbitral justice, holding regular sessions.

"The high water mark of the work of the second Hague conference was reached in its action in regard to future meetings of the conference. The principle of periodic meetings of the conference hereafter was approved without a dissenting voice. The date even of the third conference was fixed and the governments urged to appoint at least two years in advance an international commission to prepare the program of the meeting."

Dean W. P. Rogers of the Cincinnati Law school brought this session to a close with an eloquent talk on "The Dawn of Universal Peace."

Addresses Monday Evening.

Monday evening's meeting was devoted to "The drawing together of the Nations," and was presided over by Dr. Hirsch. The addresses were on "Independence Versus Interdependence of Nations," by Prof. Paul S. Reinsch of the University of Wisconsin; "Racial Progress Towards Universal Peace," by Rev. H. T. Kealing of Nashville, Tenn.; and "The Biology of War," by President David Starr Jordan of Leland Stanford, Jr., university. At the same time another meeting was in session in Music hall, with Miss Jane Addams in the chair. The speakers there were Joseph B. Burtt of Chicago, on "Fraternal Orders and Peace;" Prof. Graham Taylor of Chicago Commons, on "Victims of War and Industry;" Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, on "Organized Labor and Peace," and John Spargo of Yonkers, N. Y., on "International Socialism as a Peace Factor."

Commercial and Legal Views.

Two big meetings were held Tuesday morning, one on commerce and industry, presided over by George E. Roberts, president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago, and the other on "Women and Peace," with Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin of Chicago as chairman. The former session was addressed by Belton Gilreath of Birmingham, Ala., W. A. Mahoney of Columbus, O., James Arbuckle, consul of Spain and Colombia, St. Louis, and Marcus M. Marks, president of the National Association of Clothiers, New York city. The women heard interesting speeches by Mrs. Philip N. Moore, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Jane Addams and Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead of Boston.

"Some Legal Aspects of the Peace Movement," was the general topic of the Orchestra hall meeting Tuesday afternoon, and the chairman was William J. Calhoun of Chicago. Prof. William I. Hull of Swarthmore college, discussed the advances registered by the two Hague conferences, and James Brown Scott, solicitor of the state department, talked about some questions which the third Hague conference probably will consider. "Legal Problems Capable of Settlement by Arbitration," was the subject of a learned paper by Prof. Charles Cheney Hyde of Chicago.

Special Collegiate Session.

In Mandel hall, at the University of Chicago, a special session was held for universities and colleges, a feature of which was an oratorical contest participated in by students. Louis P. Lochner of Madison, Wis., spoke on "The Cosmopolitan Clubs."

The general session of Tuesday evening was perhaps the most interesting of the congress. "Next Steps in Peacemaking" was the topic. The audience was aroused to great enthusiasm by an eloquent and spirited address by Congressman Richard Bartholdt of Missouri, president of the American Group, Interparliamentary union. Another paper that met with deserved applause was that of Edwin D. Mead of Boston on "The Arrest in Competitive Arming in Fidelity to The Hague Movement."

The special collegiate session was continued Tuesday evening in Music hall, with President Nollen of Lake Forest university in the chair. President S. P. Brooks of Baylor university, Texas, spoke, and a stereopticon lecture on the "Federation of the World" was given by Hamilton Holt of the Independent.

Among the diplomats who came to Chicago to attend the Peace congress were: Ambassador Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff of Germany; Herman de Lagercrantz, envoy from Sweden; Wu Ting Fang, envoy from China; Alfred Mitchell Innes, counselor of the British embassy, and Dr. Halvdan Kont, of the University of Norway. The Japanese, Turkish and French embassies also were represented

BRIEF STATE NEWS

GLEANED FROM MANY SOURCES.

Difference of Opinion Between State Veterinarian Eisenman and Dr. Chris. Miller Regarding Diagnosis of Diseased Cattle Will Result in Lawsuit.

Louisville, Ky.—A difference of opinion between Dr. F. T. Eisenman, state veterinarian, and Dr. Chris. Miller, regarding the diagnosis of a disease which has made its appearance among the animals on the farm of Harlan Christie, in Marion county, which the state officer holds to be glanders and which Dr. Miller says is superative lymphangitis, is likely to cause a lawsuit involving the owner of the cattle, the state board of health, Dr. Miller and the United States government at Washington before a final settlement is reached. Dr. Eisenman holds that Dr. Miller has been discourteous to the entire state board and that he has absolutely no basis for his diagnosis. Government Expert Dr. J. F. Buckley sustained Dr. Eisenman's diagnosis several weeks ago, and a strict quarantine is now being kept on the cattle on the Christie place. The state board is worked up over the case and say they will fight it to the end.

LAWFUL MONEY SHOULD BE PAID

Important Decision Rendered by Court of Appeals Regarding Pay of Miners.

Frankfort, Ky.—Miners employed in Kentucky mines are entitled to be paid in lawful money bi-monthly for their labor, and employers can not pay in checks which have a reduced value when redeemed by the company, declares the court of appeals. The decision was announced in a case of the Kentucky Coal Mining Co. against Ben J. Mattingly. The appellee conducted a store which had no arrangement for handling the metal checks of the company. He took in several hundred dollars' worth of them, and when he presented them for payment the company offered to take them at 10 per cent less than their face value. Mattingly sued to recover the face value of the checks. In reviewing the case the court said the mining company is presumed to know its own checks and can not require the plaintiff to prove their genuineness when it is unwilling to say they are not genuine. Quoting Section 244 of the constitution, the court says the company can issue these pay checks on agreement with the miners, but it can not provide any reduction from their face value as paid to the miners for their work.

BEACH HARGIS FOUND GUILTY

Of the Murder of His Father and Given a Life Sentence in the Penitentiary.

Irvine, Ky.—Beach Hargis was found guilty of the murder of his father, Judge James Hargis, by the jury and given a life sentence in the penitentiary in the Estill circuit court. A conference of Hargis and his attorneys at once followed, at which it was decided to ask for a new trial, and failing thus, to take an appeal to the court of appeals. Hargis feels that he was treated unfairly by the trial court in being compelled to stand trial during the illness of two of his attorneys and the absence of some of his witnesses. The representatives of the commonwealth expressed themselves as being satisfied with the verdict and believe it is justified by the law and the evidence. J. C. M. Day, uncle of Beach Hargis, was very much incensed over the action of Judge Adams in permitting the jury to stay at the hotel, which, as claimed by the defense, was the acknowledged headquarters of the prosecution.

Indictments Dismissed.

Louisville, Ky.—Dismissal of indictments against Arch Harris and W. W. Petty, charged with having broken into the offices of the Cincinnati Gas, Coke and Coal Co. and destroying records pertaining to a civil suit the company was about to file against Harris, created much comment here.

Oratorical Contest Results.

Georgetown, Ky.—Jesse H. Wells, of Georgetown, representing Georgetown college, won the gold medal and first honors in the intercollegiate oratorical contest held here. R. G. Foster, of New Albany, Ind., representing Transylvania university, won second place.

Sale of Thoroughbreds.

Lexington, Ky.—Julius Bauer's Kenmore stud of thoroughbreds, consisting of 34 head of various ages, was dispersed at an auction under the auspices of the Kentucky Sales Co., the total proceeds being $4,255.

Paducah, Ky.—W. V. Eaton, of Paducah, was unanimously nominated for the state senate on the third ballot by the Second district senatorial convention. Resolutions condemning Gov. Willson for the wholesale pardoning of criminals and indorsing the present state officials were adopted.

Paducah, Ky.—The court of appeals sustained the McCracken circuit court in deciding that the city license ordinance is valid. The city has been prevented from collecting about $30,000 worth of licenses by an injunction.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Last Hope Is Dissipated.

The last hope of Charles J. Levering, wife murderer, to escape prison walls was dissipated when the court of appeals passed upon his petition for a rehearing of his case, overruling it.

State Auditor Enjoined.

State Auditor Frank P. James was enjoined perpetually by Judge R. L. Stout from collecting taxes for the state after they had been barred by the limitation of five years. Auditor James has been calculating on collecting $750,000 from this source during the next year or so. The matter will go to the court of appeals.

Decision Affects Medicine Companies.

Medicine companies blending distilled spirits must report to the state auditor and pay taxes on such spirits under the rectifiers' tax act, passed by the general assembly in 1906, declared the court of appeals.

Admitted to Kentucky.

State Insurance Commissioner Bell admitted to business in the Kentucky field the Great American Life Insurance Co., of St. Louis. It has $500,000 capital stock and will establish a state agency at Louisville. The commissioner also admitted the Commonwealth Fire Insurance Co., of Ottumwa, Ia. This company has $200,000 capital stock.

May Be Taxed by Municipality.

The court of appeals upheld the right of a municipality in Kentucky to tax its bonds in the hands of a holder. The ruling was announced in a case of the Bank of Russellville against the city of Russellville.

Increased Assessments.

The state board of equalization passed on the assessments of eight counties and increased the assessments in all of them. They are as follows: Lewis, 5 per cent on farm lands; Jackson, 7 per cent on farm lands; Jessamine, 2 per cent on farm lands; Carroll, 2 per cent on farm lands and 2 per cent on town lots; Madison, 2 per cent on farm lands; Henry, 6 per cent on farm lands; Robertson, 15 per cent on farm lands; Woodford, accepted.

Frankfort, Ky.—An increase of $471.76 is shown in the collections of internal revenue in the office of Deputy Collector Grant Roberts over the corresponding month of last year. The total for April this year is $152,944.52.

Louisville, Ky.—Passengers in a Pullman car in the Louisville & Nashville yards were robbed and the thief escaped with booty valued at several hundred dollars. A well-dressed man, who is thought to have been a passenger, ransacked the berths of his traveling companions.

Owensboro, Ky.—Jesse and Joseph Schubert, brothers, taken to Louisville for safe-keeping, shot and probably fatally wounded John Daily, a prominent farmer, and beat W. T. Patrick, a farmer, into insensibility with a club. The country in which the shooting occurred is greatly aroused.

Louisville, Ky.—After a hard-fought battle Cincinnati became the successful contender for the next annual convention of the Master Boiler Makers' association. Arthur E. Brown, master boiler maker of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, was made president of the association in the annual election.

Georgetown, Ky.—Julian Leach, 6, and his sister, Eva May, 4 years his senior, were saved from death in the waters of Big Springs by Robert Jones, who plunged into the stream and swam to their rescue. The lad fell into the water in trying to recover his cap and his sister jumped in to save him.

Louisville, Ky.—An attempt to increase the endowment to $1,000,000 by raising a fund of $600,000 will be one of the principal features of the semi-centennial jubilee of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, to be held in this city May 13, when delegates gather in the 54th annual convention of Southern Baptists.

Lexington, Ky.—Circuit Judge Watts Parker withdrew from the race for the democratic nomination for the office he now holds and for which he was opposed by George R. Hunt, the present county attorney. At the same time Dan W. Scott withdrew from the race for sheriff and S. J. Moore from the race for county assessor.

Frankfort, Ky.—The city council ended the telephone war in this city by passing the first reading of the ordinance providing maximum rates of $2.50 for business houses and $1.50 for residences. The sale of two franchises is ordered. The tax rate of $1.75 was also passed.

Louisville, Ky.—A bolt of lightning struck the roof of the famous dining room at the Galt house, and, tearing a ten-foot square hole in the roof, completely wrecked the room. The damage is estimated at about $5,000.

NEW STRENGTH FOR OLD BACKS.

No Need to Suffer Every Day from Backache.

Mrs. Joannah Straw, 526 North Broadway, Canton, S. D., says: "For three years I suffered everything with rheumatism in my limbs and a dull, ceaseless aching in my back. I was weak, languid, broken with headaches and dizzy spells, and the kidney secretions were thick with solids. I was really in a critical condition when I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, and they certainly did wonders for me. Though I am 81 years old, I am as well as the average woman of 50. I work well, eat well and sleep well."

PAINT EVERY YEAR.

No One Wants to Do It, But Some Paint Will Wear No Longer.

When you have a job of painting done you don't expect to have it done over again very soon. But to make a lasting job, several things must be taken into consideration—the proper time to paint—the condition of the surface—the kind of materials to use, etc. All these matters are fully covered in the specifications which can be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit also includes a book of color schemes for both interior and exterior painting, and a simple instrument for detecting adulteration in the paint materials. The outfit will solve many painting problems for every houseowner.

Meantime while buying paint see that every white lead keg bears the famous Dutch Boy Painter tredemark, which is an absolute guarantee of purity and quality. If your paint dealer cannot supply you National Lead Company will see that some one else will.

"My little boy had an awful rash all over his body and the doctor said it was eczema. It was terrible, and used to water awfully. Any place the water went it would form another sore and it would become crusted. A score or more physicians failed utterly and dismally in their efforts to remove the trouble. Then I was told to use the Cuticura Remedies. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and before we had used half the Resolvent I could see a change in him. Playgrounds in Boston.

Boston women established the first playground in 1902. Last year there were eight, and nearly $2,000 was expended, or about $1 for each child, a very cheap price for the amount of good obtained. The Playground league is the name of the society of the playground boys themselves, who wear buttons and discipline all bad boys, thus making the government easy enough for those in charge. Not the least important result of the playgrounds in that city is said to be that involved in the self-government.

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated with Caffeine.

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not that has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years was troubled with stomach trouble.

"I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to perfect a cure. I was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured my stomach.

"I finally concluded coffee was the cause of my troubles and stopped using it. I tried tea and milk in its place, but neither agreed with me, then I commenced using Postum. I had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste.

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia.

"I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it I appreciate Postum."

HEART QUESTIONINGS

The Mysteries of God Past Finding Out.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Apocryphal Books:—2 Esdras, chapter 4.

First Book of Esdras.—The name Esdras is but another form of Ezra. As regards the antiquity of this book and the rank assigned to it in the early church, it may suffice to mention that Josephus quotes largely from it, and follows its authority. It is quoted also by Clemens Alexandrinus, by Cyprian, Augustine, Athanasius and other fathers. Nothing can be clearer on the other hand than that it is rightly included among the Apocrypha. That it was never known to exist in Hebrew and formed no part of the Hebrew canon is admitted by all. A two-fold design is discernible in the compiler of the book. One was to introduce and give Scriptural sanction to the legend about Zerubbabel. The other to explain the great obscurities of the Book of Ezra, in which the author has signally failed. As regards the time and place when the compilation was made, the original portion is that which alone affords much clew. This seems to indicate that the writer was thoroughly conversant with Hebrew, even if he did not write the book in that language. He was well acquainted too, with the Books of Esther and Daniel, and other books of Scripture.

SERMONETTE.

"Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?" Such was the question propound by Zopher the Naamathite in his controversy with Job, and it is the question which comes some time or other to every seeking heart.

Esdras was troubled by the mysteries of God and sought to fathom the infinite. How hopeless was the task! And rest and quiet could not come to his heart until the angel of God had come and led him to realize that he could not do more than to rest content with the thought that God was, and was a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

Esdras was troubled, as was David of old, by the prosperity of the wicked. He knew that the misery of his people, the Jews, was the result of sin, but the question arose in his heart: Are not the people of the world transgressors of God's law also, and are not they the masters of the Jew? Where was the justice of it all?

But he forgot, like many others of God's children, that it is "the son whom the Father chasteneth." They who are not of the household live and work and reap and sow and pass away without special care or discipline at the hands of the Father, but not so those who have yielded their hearts and lives to God and come into the household of faith where God is Father and Jesus Christ is elder brother. Then begins a new relationship of love and care which is no more strongly manifest than in the chastening which comes. It is thus that the gold is tried out and the dross destroyed. It is thus that the life is purified and made fit to abide in the presence of the Father and to enjoy the blessings of the eternal home.

THE STORY.

ESDRAS was troubled. Scribe and priest though he was, there had crept in his heart honest questionings.

Was God a reality? Was he just? Did it pay to be called a child of his?

Here was the nation of Israel and their city of Jerusalem in distress, and here was the godless Babylon holding dominion over them.

Where was God that such things could be? Are their deeds any better that inhabit Babylon, that they should therefore have dominion over Zion?

Such were the doubts and troubled thoughts which stirred the heart of Esdras as he walked alone in the quiet of the midnight hour.

"I have seen how thou sufferest them sinning and has spared wicked doers, and has destroyed thy people and hast preserved thine enemies," exclaimed Esdras.

He spoke not irreverently, but the anguish of his heart forced him to give expression as though talking to God, for he felt if God were in the heavens he must speak to him the thoughts which were in possession of his heart.

"Are they of Babylon better than they of Zion?" he went on. "Or is there any other people that are thy chosen people? For what generation is there which hath so believed thy covenants as the children of Jacob? And yet their reward appeareth not, and their labor hath no fruit. For I have gone here and there through the heathen, and I see they flow in wealth and think not upon thy commandments. Weigh thou, therefore, our wickedness now in the balance, and theirs also that dwell in the world; and so shall thy name nowhere be found, but in Israel. Or when was it that they which dwell upon the earth have not sinned in thy sight, or what people hath so kept thy commandments? Thou shalt find that Israel by name hath kept thy precepts, but not the heathen."

As the complaining voice of the scribe ceased and he sat in moody silence there came a slight rustling of garments at his side and he shook with fear, for he knew that he was not alone.

"Who art thou, and why thy presence here?" questioned Esdras with trembling voice.

"God hath heard thy questionings and hast sent his angel. It is Uriel who speaketh and bringeth a message from God, who would say to thee:

"'Thy heart hath gone too far in this world, and thinketh thou to comprehend the way of the most high?'"

"Yea, my Lord, that I might understand," faltered Esdras.

"I am sent unto thee to show these three ways and to set forth three similitudes before thee. Wherefore, if thou canst declare unto me one I will show thee also the way that thou desirest to see and I will show thee from whence the wicked heart cometh."

"Tell on, my Lord," eagerly exclaimed Esdras, for the yearning in his heart was after the truth of God.

Then said Uriel the angel:

"Go thy way; weigh me the weight of the fire, or measure me the blast of the wind, or call back again the day that is past."

"What man is able to do that, that thou shouldst ask such things of me?" exclaimed Esdras in amazement.

"If I should ask thee how many great dwellings are in the midst of the sea, or how many springs are in the beginning of the deep, or how many springs are above the firmament, or which are the outgoings of paradise, peradventure thou wouldst say unto me: 'I never went down into the deep, nor as yet into hell; neither did I eyer climb up into heaven.' Nevertheless, now have I asked thee but only of fire and of wind and of the day where through thou hast passed, and of things from which thou canst not be separated, and yet canst thou give me no answer of them."

A long and painful silence followed, in which there were peculiar stirrings in the heart of Esdras and a pricking of his conscience as he realized the wicked blindness of his own heart. Then the angel again broke the silence and said:

"Thine own things and such as are grown up with them thou canst not know; how shouldest thou then be able to comprehend the way of the Highest, and the world being now outwardly corrupted, to understand the corruption that is evident in thy sight?"

"But it were better that we were not at all than that we should live still in wickedness and to suffer and not to know wherefore," exclaimed Esdras.

"I went out into a forest,' said the angel, "and the trees took counsel and said: 'Come, let us go and make war against the sea, that it may depart away before us and that we may make more woods.' The floods of the sea also in like manner took counsel and said: 'Come, let us go up and subdue the woods of the plain, that there also we may make us another country.' The thought of the woods was in vain, for the fire came and consumed it. The thought of the floods of the sea came likewise to naught, for the sand stood up and stopped them. If thou wert judge now betwixt these two," continued Uriel, "whom wouldst thou begin to justify? Or whom wouldst thou condemn?"

"Verily it is a foolish thought that they both have devised," spoke up Esdras, thoughtfully, "for the ground is given unto the wood; the sea also hath his place to bear his floods."

"Ah," replied Uriel. "Thou hast given a right judgment; but why judgest thou not thyself also? For like as the ground is given to the wood and the sea to his floods, even so they that dwell upon the earth may understand nothing but that which is upon the earth, and he that dwelleth above the heavens may understand the things that are above the height of the heavens."

Over the soul of Esdras there swept a flood of contrition and of a need of greater wisdom, and he cried out in eager pleading:

"I beseech thee, O Lord, let me have understanding."

"The more thou searchest," responded Uriel, "the more thou shalt marvel; for the world hasteth fast to pass away and cannot comprehend the things that are promised to the righteous in time to come. For this world is full of unrighteousness and infirmities. But of the things concerning which thou hast asked me I will tell thee. Listen: The evil is sown, but the destruction thereof is not yet come. If my measure hath God measured the times and by number hath he numbered them. He doth not move or stir them until the said measure be fulfilled."

Your Work and Your World.

You are never worth much until some one needs you. Happiness depends on being useful, or, at least, believing that we are. The superfluous person is always in danger. He is out of place in a universe so ordered that its perfection depends on each one taking his place and doing his work. There never was a normal life of which it could not be truly said that the world had need of him.

It is better to make the vain man's error of thinking that the fate of the world hangs in suspension, dependent on your existence, than to fly to the opposite extreme and to lie inert, believing that it makes no difference whatever whether you are alive or not, whether you do your work or not. The value of any life depends much on its sense of being essential to all lives.

ECONOMY IN A LONDON INN.

"Doubtful" Fish Served to Those Guests Who Have Cold in the Head.

Mr. Craig Wadsworth, one of the secretaries to the embassy at London, tells how an American, who was journeying through the midland counties of England, encountered in a certain town a rather pretentious inn, at which he ordered turbot—a favorite dish in those parts.

The American had had a few days of dense fog, and his appearance and manner perhaps showed that he had become a little wheezy in consequence of the climate. He was, indeed, forced to have frequent recourse to his handkerchief.

When the turbot was brought the guest fancied, even before it reached his plate, that it was no longer fresh; and an attempt to eat it confirmed that impression. He called the proprietor, who at once sent a waiter for fresh turbot and removed the objectionable dish.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the inn-keeper, "but we got the idea, sir, as you came in, that you 'ed a bad cold in your 'ead, sir."

"And suppose I had? What would that have to do with my being served spoiled fish?" demanded the indignant traveler.

"Heverything, sir. We 'as this rule in this 'ouse: Fish as is a little doubtful, like that 'ere, sir—them which 'as lost the flavor of youth, as I may say—them we serves to parties as appears to 'ave colds in their 'eads, sir; and we finds that, bein' as such parties can't smell nothink, they likes the fish just as well, sir, and often they prefers 'em!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Search for Submerged Palace.

An expedition left Llandudno, Denganwy and Penmaenmawr recently with the object of tracing, if possible, the submerged palace of Llys Helig, a Welsh chieftain of the sixth century. The palace is said to be visible at very low tides at a point midway between Penmaenmawr and Great Ormes head, but it cannot be said that the recent search established its existence. The exploring party was divided into two sections, one of which laid bare what looked like an old wall, while the other claimed to have traced the outline of a wall 130 yards long, with a shorter wall running at right angles. The rising of the tide compelled the explorers to leave the spot before completing their search.

Largest American Universities.

The ten largest universities in the United States, based on attendance, are as follows: Columbia university, New York, 5,655; Valparaiso university, Indiana, 5,367; University of Chicago, 5,038; University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich., 5,013; Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass., 4,900; University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., 4,000; University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minn., 4,600; University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., 4,500; University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis., 4,500; Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., 4,465.

Guarding Against Earthquakes.

All great crises have stimulated the creative faculty of mankind, and earthquakes have, of course, earned a full share of attention. The most original notion in this connection was put forth by a genius who quite satisfied himself that if houses were provided with wheels or rollers they would move about backwards and forwards during an earthquake and escape disaster.

Characteristics of Servians.

Servians in their good nature and love of humor are said to remind travelers of the Irish peasantry. They are hospitable to strangers; their patriotism is vehement, almost quixotic, and they take great interest in politics. Many of the domestics in the towns and cities come from abroad, as the Servian girl is too independent for domestic service.

Early Experiences.

Some time ago an office boy, answering the telephone for the first time in his life, and not knowing how to use it, was told that when the bell rang he was to answer it.

When, therefore, he heard it ring, he picked up the receiver and shouted:

"Hello, who's there?"

The answer came back: "I'm 105."

"Go on," said the boy. "It's time you were dead."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Bad Breath

"For months I had great trouble with my stomach and used all kinds of medicines. My tongue has been actually as green as grass, my breath having a bad odor. Two weeks ago a friend recommended Cascarets and after using them I can willingly and cheerfully say that they have entirely cured me. I therefore let you know that I shall recommend them to any one suffering from such troubles."—Chas. H. Halpern, 114 E. 7th St., New York, N. Y.

WALTON DEPARTMENT.

D. B. WALLACE, Manager.

Hand your news items to Mr. D. B. Wallace at the Walton Equitable Bank and Trust Co.'s building. He is also authorized to receive subscriptions and collect other accounts.

Floyd Bolington, of Cincinnati, was the guest of relatives here a few days since.

Frank P. Mann, the popular tobacco merchant of Morning View, Kenton county, spent a day last week here on business.

Mrs. Hattie Metcalfe and her sister Miss Lovella Edwards, spent a day in Cincinnati recently, and had a very delightful stay.

Will Martin, of Covington, the genial and popular traveling salesman for the Forwood Shoe Company, Cincinnati, spent one day last week here with his many friends.

Clyde Edward Laws, the pretty little five year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Laws, fell from the fence at his home a few days ago and was badly bruised about the face.

John C. Miller, the popular assistant cashier of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, spent Tuesday of last week in Cincinnati in relation to some business for his store at Landing.

Miss Hattie Hunter, of Dayton, spent part of the past week here at the bedside of her friend, Mrs. Wm. Stephens, who was quite ill with hemorrhages from the lungs, and stomach trouble, but we are glad to say she is now improving, and will soon be able to be out again.

The base ball nine of the Newport High school came out to Walton and played our boys a couple of games. The first game resulted in favor of the visitors by a score of 10 to 3, but the second game was won by the home team, the Walton High school nine, by a score of 9 to 8. There was a good sized attendance and the games were very entertaining.

Real Estate agent W. E. Vest sold for A. W. Smith and the heirs of Mrs. Lutie Smith, deceased, their farm of 61 acres situated between Walton and Verona, to Milton T. Wilson, the contractor at Latonia, for $4,250. Mr. Wilson's brother-in-law will move from Latonia to the farm at once, and Mr. Wilson will move there in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thomas have given up the Phoenix Hotel and have moved to their farm near Walton They are fine hotel keepers and were doing well, but both needed a rest and could get it better on their farm than in the hotel business. George Fullilove has leased the hotel from the owner, A. M. Edwards, and will conduct the Phoenix on the same good conditions as heretofore.

Joe and Robert Green, were guests of their sister, Mrs. Marvin Hudson, of near Walton, the latter part of the week.—R. M. Miller and family.—Frank Buck, a prominent lumber dealer of Chicago, spent part of the past week here with his father, Rev. D. T. Buck and family.—Thomas J. Walsh, who was the Q. & C. station agent here, but has been very ill at Covington, the result of a stroke of paralysis, was able to be here part of last week, visiting old friends. He has about recovered and is looking well.—The lightning last Wednesday night struck a tree in the pasture of Scott Chambers and killed 4 young squirrels and a Yellow Hammer. A valuable cow belonging to B. B. Allphin was standing under the tree and was killed.—Judge and Mrs. Taylor J. Crowe spent part of last week in Covington, guests of son, J. M. Crowe.—Hon. J. G. Tomlin spent part of the past week at Warsaw securing evidence upon which to bring suit to set aside the will of Hugh Montgomery, a wealthy citizen of that place, who died about 10 years ago, leaving a large estate. He was married twice and left the bulk of his estate to his second wife and his daughter by her. Children by the first wife are instituting the suit, alleging they were not treated fairly.—Mrs. A. M. Rouse spent last Friday in Cincinnati with friends.—Misses Nannie and Jean Chambers entertained the children of their respective rooms at the High School last Friday night. Refreshments were served and a delightful evening was enjoyed by all.—R. Lee Huey, of Landing, spent Saturday here with friends.—James A. Huey, a prominent citizen of Union, was a welcome visitor here Saturday.—There has been quite a distribution of tobacco money here the past few days, many farmers receiving checks for part of their 1907 pooled tobacco.—Ellie Hogan, wife and baby boy, of Williamstown, spent last week here with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Jones.—W. T. Wilson, of Latonia, spent part of last week here and at his farm recently purchased from A. W. Smith. While here he bought a span of aged mules from Bruce Dudgeon for $100.—Mrs. Wm. Stephens, who has been confined to her home the past two months with hemorahages and stomach trouble, is improving slowly, but is quite ill.—Miss Fannie Mae Buck spent Saturday in Cincinnati with friends.—R.C. Green was confined to his home most of last week by a severe attack of lumbago.—Robert M. Byland, of Frankfort, spent part of last week here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Byland.—John C. Miller spent part of last week with his friends at his old home at Landing.—Henry C. WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S. CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

VOL. XXXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY MAY 12, 1909. NO 30

A STEAM FERRY

At Lawrenceburg will be of Great Benefit to Boone County Farmers.

Good Highways Leading to the Ferry Should Be Established.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., May 10.

Special to the Recorders

It should be a source of gratification to residents of Boone county that Lawrenceburg Ferry has been purchased by a stock company composed principally of representative business men of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, more especially in view of the fact that the corporation intends to lease its newly acquired property to some competent, reliable person, who will, as soon as practicable, install new and up-to-date facilities.

A large power boat for freight traffic and a launch for the accommodation of passengers are the principal improvements contemplated. These crafts will be of such a character as to insure service under conditions which have never been surmounted by the horse-power boats used for nearly three-quarters of a century. A regular schedule, so arranged as to get the best possible service, including night trips, will be established.

With any feeling of satisfaction that may accrue from this assurance of good service, however, should come a compelling sense of personal responsibility regarding the highways leading to the two ferry landings on the Kentucky shore, both of which ought to be put into a state of repair calculated to stimulate travel to and from the ferry. It is hoped that the encouragement held out by the ferry company will lead Boone county farmers to attend to this very important detail of the purposed improvement. Such road improvements ought to be effected without unseasonable financial outlay. Upon them depend absolutely the grade of service that will be established and maintained. Good roads will be the most potent encouragement to the person who installs these facilities to put in the very best boats obtainable.

The merchants of Lawrenceburg did not purchase the ferry as a speculation, but were actuated solely by a desire to rehabilitate commercial relations between Kentucky farmers and themselves. Lawrenceburg is the logical market for farm products for a great portion of Boone county, and farmers should meet half-way this organized effort to better the most important condition governing commercial intercourse between the two counties. A KENTUCKIAN.

Bro. William Souther died April 13th, 1909, having attained the ripe age of four score, seven years and fourteen days. Bro. Souther was a native born Kentuckian, and early moved to Boone county in the old Point Pleasant neighborhood, in which vicinity he was living at the time of his death. While but a boy he united with the Christian church and lived an earnest, consistent christian life all his days. He married Elizabeth M. Walton Oct. 19th, 1852. To this union two children were born, a daughter and a son. The daughter died in infancy, aged five months; the son, Mr. Maichus Souther, lives today to mourn the loss of a father. As we turned thru the worn copy of the Testament which had been the daily companion of Bro. Souther, we found the passages marked that have ever been the favorites of the faithful. His life was simple. His faith was simple. He was a devoted reader of the Bible and a faithful reader of the Christian Standard for a quarter of a century. In the last few years of his life he suffered agonies untold, often praying that the Lord would take him. His prayer was answered and he fell asleep in Jesus. Oh, the hope to those who fall asleep in Jesus! We sorrow not as those who have no hope, but look forward to the general resurrection in the last day, when we shall meet the loved ones gone before and dwell forever and aye in a land that is fairer than day.

R. H. C.

Another Good Man Gone.

E. H. Howard, of Bullittsville, departed this life last Friday night aged 76 years, 8 months and 1 day. His funeral was preached at Bullittsburg church, last Sunday afternoon by the pastor, Rev. Brooks, after which the remains were placed in the vault. Mr. Howard, always delicate looking, had been in bad health for some time, and a few days before his death suffered a stroke of paralysis. His wife died several years ago, and his sister, Mrs. Hays, is his only near relative who survives. Elijah Howard was one of the county's high toned gentlemen of the old school, and was affable and companionable, his presence was always a pleasure to those whom he met. All mourn the death of this good man, whose good deeds extended beyond the time allotted to man. Peace be to his ashes.

Won't Slight A Good Friend.

Ed Lonlaker, of Bullittsville, started to take his wife's sister, who had been staying with his wife, during a week's illness, to her Indiana home. When they arrived at the Aurora ferry the river was so rough they couldn't cross. They turned back and spent the day with Mr. Lonlaker's brother, Walter returning to Bullittsville in the evening.

Dr. Rockefeller, of Hartford, Ind., whom we mentioned a short time since being very low with typhoid fever, died April 27th. He was twice married, and was 55 years of age. The funeral sermon was preached at his home, Thursday the 29th, attended by 700 or 800 people. The remains were laid to rest in the Dillsboro cemetery. The funeral was conducted by the Masons, the order of which he was a member.

To partly recompense Courtney Walton, wife and little Alice and Geo. Kreylich and wife, for the many acts of kindness extended us, we gave them a free pass by which they could sit at home in easy rocker and in an hour's time visit all the noted places and buildings in this big world of ours. We also gave Carl Price and family a free pass because of friendship. All expressed themselves well pleased with the trip.

Fletcher Clore has been quite deaf for a number of years. One of the days when there was so much thunder, T. G. Willis went over to Mr. Clore's. When in the act of knocking at the door there was a loud report of thunder. Fletcher heard it and thought it was some one knocking at the door and said, "come in." As bidden Mr. Willis opened the door and stepped in without knocking, when Fletcher said: "Tom, I believe my hearing is improving, I heard you knock, the first time I have heard anyone knock, I can't tell the time when."

PUBLIC STATEMENT

By a Public Official—County Treasurer of Granbury, Texas.

A. A. Perkins, County Treasurer of Granbury, Hood Co., Texas, says: "Years ago a severe fall injured my kidneys. From that time I was bothered with a chronic lame back and disordered action of the kidneys helped to make life miserable for me. A friend suggested my using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, with the most gratifying results. I made a public statement at the time, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, and am glad to confirm that statement now."

Tactless or Tactful?

"Waiters who hire out for parties ought to be trained for that," said one who has suffered. "Last night at a little party I was giving a waiter I thought knew his business walked up to a distinguished singer, who was in the midst of a song, and insisted upon her taking a plate of salad and a glass of punch. She had to stop the song to get rid of him."

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

"Carmack Amendment" to Interstate Commerce Act, Making Receiving Company Liable for a Shipment, Upheld by Court of Appeals.

Frankfort, Ky.—In affirming the judgment of the Henry circuit court in the case of the L. & N. Railroad Co. against N. B. Scott the court of appeals upheld what is known as the "Carmack amendment" to the interstate commerce act, making the receiving railroad company liable for a shipment received to be transported over another line of railroad under a contract. The question was presented to the court in a damage suit against the L. & N. Co. for injury to a car load of horses and mules shipped from Campbellsburg, this state, to a point in Georgia, and which arrived at their destination in alleged bad shape.

KENTUCKY RIVER BUSINESS

Shows Steady Growth, According to Report of Engineer Corps.

Frankfort, Ky.—According to the statistics given in the report of J. G. Warren, major of the corps of engineers in charge of the improvements on the Kentucky river, there is a steady growth in passenger and freight traffic on this stream. The building of additional locks and the extension of navigation almost annually has much to do with the rapid increase in traffic of all kinds. The last report made by Maj. Warren shows that the number of towboat trips that pass through the 10 locks in the Kentucky river have increased nearly 400 per cent, and the government boat trips are diminishing. This fact shows that the freight traffic, especially that of coal, salt and lumber, is getting much larger in the towns on the Kentucky river, and that the industries of all kinds in these towns are becoming more numerous.

Lexington, Ky.—Past Assistant Surgeon J. F. Murphy and Gunner's Mate J. E. Johnson, of the navy department, Washington, went to Jackson to accompany Ensign Edward G. Hargis, son of Senator A. H. Hargis and a nephew of the late Judge James H. Hargis and son-in-law of Adm. Holly, to the Naval hospital at Washington, where he is to be treated for a trouble which it is thought is the result of typhoid fever he had about two years ago while in Cuba. Ensign Hargis was married about two years ago on the battle ship Massachusetts in Boston Harbor, to Miss Beatrice Holly, daughter of Adm. Holly.

Frankfort, Ky.—Commissioner of Agriculture M. C. Rankin appointed Pat. W. Filburn, of Louisville, labor inspector for Kentucky, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of T. A. Davis, of Maysville. He also appointed W. H. Green, of Barboursville, assistant labor inspector. Green is a brother-in-law of Caleb Powers, and was the hardest worker in securing Powers' acquittal and pardon.

Louisville, Ky.—The Kentucky Baptist association purchased the handsome property of the University college and hospital and will erect a state Baptist sanitarium upon it. It is proposed to care for Baptist preachers and all members of the denomination within the state at the sanitarium. About $100,000 will be spent upon the institution.

Elizabethtown, Ky.—The contest case of Charles Williams, of Hodgenville, and Frank Daugherty, of Bardstown, against J. Lewis Williams, of Glasgow, for the democratic nomination for commonwealth's attorney in the Tenth district, was decided in favor of Daugherty.

Louisville, Ky.—After having kept her marriage a secret since last July, Miss Jessie MacNeal, a schoolteacher, asked permission to resign. She was married to William B. Key, but friends of the young couple had never had the least intimation of it.

Louisville, Ky.—Judge J. Wheeler McGee, of the city court, created a sensation in the police courtroom when he announced that he would appoint a committee of lawyers to look into charges made against certain attorneys in connection with alleged professional bondsmen.

Louisville, Ky.—Sixty-three pastors, representing forty-nine congregations of the Indiana district of the North American German Evangelical Synod, convened at Christ Evangelical church here in annual conference.

CAPITAL NOTES.

No Increase of Capital.

The East Tennessee Telephone Co., of Nashville, withdrew from the department of secretary of state its proposal to increase its capital stock from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000, which matter had been hanging up for a week on a question of fee.

Assessments Raised in Four Counties.

The state board of equalization passed on the final assessment increasing the following counties: Owen, 8 per cent; Rowan, 10 per cent; Powell, 2 per cent on all property, and Bracken, 10 per cent on farming lands and personalty.

Judgment Affirmed.

The court of appeals affirmed the judgment of the Campbell circuit court in a damage case of C. W. Wallace against the South Covington & Cincinnati Street Railway Co. The appellant sued for injuries sustained while in the employ of the company.

Tax Rate Raised.

The state board of equalization raised Campbell county 2 per cent on farm lands, personalty and town lots. Floyd county and Laurel county were raised 2 per cent on farm lands and personalty.

Governor Is Out Again.

Gov. Willson returned to his office after an absence of six weeks, during which time he was confined to his room at the executive mansion with a crippled leg. He would have been out ten days ago but for the advice of attending physicians.

A FACTORY WITH TWO RULES

Method by Which Up-to-Date Superintendent Restored Plant to Paying Basis.

Some years ago a superintendent took charge of a run-down factory. It had stopped paying dividends under the former superintendent. When the new executive investigated he found out why. From top to bottom that plant was a graveyard of errors, blunders, mistakes. Dead stock was routed out here, spoiled work there. Much of it had been stowed out of sight by men no longer with the company. The old superintendent had worked on the assumption, a very common one, that efficient men make no mistakes, that when a man is found in error it proves his inefficiency, and that the thing to do then is to discharge him before he can make any more. When all these costly private graveyards had been cleaned up (the company had paid for every one of them), the new superintendent made two rules absolutely plain to everybody in the place:

(1) Nobody will ever be discharged for a mistake alone.

(2) Anybody will be discharged instantly for covering up one.

When anything goes wrong in that factory to-day the employe responsible reports direct to the boss. The matter is talked over freely and fully. An error is considered valuable for the light it will throw on ways of avoiding it next time. If the employe needs censure (and he often does), it is given reasonably and quietly. Then the incident must be forgotten by everybody. That plant began paying dividends again in the new superintendent's second year, and he is now president of the company.—Circle Magazine.

Faithful Unto Death.

A pathetic story of heroic devotion to duty comes from Montreuil-sur-Mer, France. M. Lepercq, who was in charge of the lighthouse at Alpreck, near Bologne, was recently taken ill with influenza and had to go to bed. One evening his substitute came to M. Lepercq and explained that he was unable to light the lamp, and in view of the grave consequences that the absence of the light might entail, the sick man rose from his bed, and in spite of the snow and wind, made his way to the lighthouse, where after considerable effort he was able to light the lamp. He returned home, but died two days later of cerebral congestion, the result of exposure to the inclement weather. The humble hero would have been entitled to his pension in five years.

Field Mice Work Havoc.

Certain parts of Lanarkshire, Scotland, are at present suffering from a plague of voles or field mice, which have effected much havoc amongst vegetation. Many young trees in plantations have been destroyed, and various kinds of flower plants have suffered considerably. It is thought that mild winters may partly account for these plagues of voles. The last serious visitation was about seventeen years ago, when great damage was done on the farms in the south of Scotland, and a royal commission was appointed to investigate the matter. It is believed that the main reason of the trouble lies in the fact that the balance of nature has been upset by the destruction of owls, hawks, weasles and stoats, which are the natural enemies of the voles.

Bad Disease.

"What did Jiggsby die of?"

HIGHER THAN THE ANGELS

Man's Exaltation Through Victory Over Sin.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Apocryphal Books.—2 Esdras, Chapter 7.

Second Book of Esdras.—In the English version of the Apocrypha, and so called by the author (2 ESDRAS 1:1), is more commonly known, according to the reckoning of the Latin version, as the fourth book of Ezra. The original title, "The Apocalypse of Ezra," is far more appropriate. The date of the book is much disputed, varying from the period of the time of Caesar down to about 25 B. C., while Grocer assigns the book to the time of Domitian. The original Apocalypse (3-14), consists of a series of angelic revelations and visions in which Ezra is instructed in some of the great mysteries of the moral world, and assured of the final triumph of the righteous. The subject of the first revelation (3-5:15), "the unsearchableness of God's purposes, and the signs of the last age. The second revelation (5:20-6:34), carries out this teaching yet further, and lays open the gradual progress of the plan of Providence, and the nearness of the visitation before which evil must attain its most terrible climax. The third revelation (6:35-9:25), answers the objections which arise from the apparent narrowness of the limits within which the hope of blessedness is confined, and describes the coming of the Messiah and the last scene of judgment. After this follow three visions. The first vision (9:26-10:59), is of a woman (Sion), in deep sorrow, lamenting the death, upon his bridal day, of her only son (the city built by Solomon), who had been born to her after she had had no child for 30 years. But while Ezra looked her face "upon a sudden shined exceedingly," and "the woman appeared no more, but there was a city builded." The second vision (11, 12), in a dream, is of an eagle (Rome) which "came up from the sea," and "spread her wings over all the earth." The third vision (13), in a dream, is of a man (Messiah), "flying with the clouds of heaven," against whom the nations of the earth are gathered, till he destroys them with the blast of his mouth and gathers together the lost tribes of Israel and offers Sion, "prepared and builded," to his people. Chapter 14 recounts an appearance to Ezra of the Lord, who showed himself to Moses in the bush.

SERMONETTE.

The man who has chosen the goodness that is in Christ Jesus is exalted to a higher place in the kingdom of God than that which the angels in heaven occupy, because the angels, not being subject to temptation, know not the joy of victory.

Made a "little lower than the angels," man rises through his victories over sin to an exalted place with Christ, of whom the Scriptures say: He "being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man. And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow of things in heaven and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Here then is the position of the believer in Christ: "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved; and hath raised us up together and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come he might shew forth the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus."

THE STORY.

WHY did God permit sin to come into the world?

This is an old question and has troubled many an earnest seeker after truth.

Esdras came face to face with the vexatious question as he contemplated the sin and woe of the people of Israel.

"Oh, bad it not been better not to have given the earth unto Adam, or else when it was given him, to have restrained him from sinning," thus cried out the heart of the scribe as he wandered under the star-gemmed canopy of the heavens as they stretched over that great and wicked city of Babylon. "For what profit is it for men now in this present time to live in heaviness," he continued, "and after death to look for punishment? O, thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that sinned, thou art not fallen alone, but we all that come of thee. For what profit is it unto us, if there be promised us an immortal time, whereas we have done the works that bring death? And that there is promised us an everlasting hope, whereas ourselves being most wicked are made vain? And that there are laid up for us dwellings of health and safety, whereas we have lived wickedly?"

Thus soliloquized Esdras, and even while he spake the angel Uriel came and answered his questionings, saying:

"This is the condition of the battle, which man that is born upon the earth shall fight: That, if he be overcome, he shall suffer as thou hast said; but if he get the victory, he shall receive the thing that I say. For this is the life whereof Moses spake unto the people while he lived, saying: 'Choose thee life, that thou mayest live.' Nevertheless they believed not Moses, nor yet the prophets after him, nor me which have spoken unto them, that there should not be such heaviness in their destruction, as shall be joy over them that are persuaded to salvation."

"I know, Lord, that the Most High is called merciful, in that he hath mercy upon them which are not yet come into the world, and upon those also that turn to his law; and that he is bountiful, for he is ready to give where it is needed; and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplieth more and more mercies to them that are present, and that are past, and also to them which are to come. For if he shall not multiply his mercies, the world would not continue with them that inherit therein. And he pardoneth; for if he did not so of his goodness, that they which have committed iniquities might be eased of them, the ten thousandth part of men should not remain living. And being judge, if he should not forgive them that are cured with his word, and put out the multitude of contentions, there should be very few left peradventure in an innumerable multitude," answered Esdras, a sigh escaping him as he contemplated the wonder and the mystery of it all.

"Yes," exclaimed the angel, "come with me, I will show you."

Esdras arose at the bidding and followed the angel on and on and on until it seemed as though they had left the earth and were looking back upon it as it lay beneath them. Then spake the angel, as he pointed before them:

"The sea is set in a wide place, that it might be deep and great. But note the entrance that it is narrow, like a river. Who, then, could go into the sea to look upon it and to rule it, if he went not through the narrow entrance?"

"Look, also," continued the angel, after a pause, and pointing in another direction, "for a city is builded, and set upon a broad field, and is full of all good things. The entrance thereof is narrow, and is set in a dangerous place to fall, like as if there were fire on the right hand, and on the left a deep water. And one only path between them both, even between the fire and the water, so small that there could but one man go there at once."

With breathless interest Esdras watched the scene before him, while the angel talked, and the angel continued:

"If this city now were given to a man for an inheritance, if he never shall pass the danger set before it, how shall he receive this inheritance?"

"Surely, it is so, Lord," responded Esdras, as the angel ceased speaking.

"Yea, and even so is Israel's portion. Because for their sakes I made the world. And when Adam transgressed my statute, then was decreed that which now is done. Then were the entrances to the world made narrow, full of sorrow and travail. They are but few and evil, full of perils and very painful. For the entrances of the elder world were wide and sure, and brought immortal fruit. If then they that live labor not to enter this straight way, they can never receive those things which are laid up for them."

Esdras, who had followed the words of the angel without taking his eyes off the scene before him, now turned and was about to speak, when the angel continued, almost reproachfully:

"Now, therefore, Esdras, why disquietest thou thyself, seeing thou art but a corruptible man? And why art thou moved concerning these mysteries, seeing thou art but a mortal man? Why hast thou not considered in thy mind this thing that is come, rather than that which is present?"

"O, Lord," exclaimed Esdras, lifting his eyes now and speaking as though addressing the God whose angel was before him, "thou who bearest rule, thou hast ordained in thy law that the righteous should inherit these things, and that the ungodly should perish. Nevertheless, it does seem that the righteous shall suffer and be straightened and yet hope for the wide. They that have done wickedly have suffered the straight things and yet shall not see the wide."

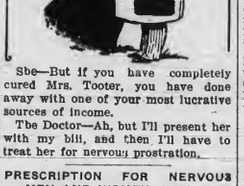
"Listen," interrupted the angel, "for I must now leave thee. Remember, that there is no judge above God, and none that hath understanding above the Highest. For this reason there be many that perish because they despise the Lord and his law."

Live for Others.

A mother's greatness comes out through her child's dependence on her; the man finds himself as he finds how others need him. New high resources of idealism and noble endeavor show themselves in us all under the stress of necessity's call when great issues or events await our endeavors.

All the sacrifice, the heroism, the devotion of the past have sprung from this sense in men—that others needed them. The best thing that can happen to us might be some burden of responsibility. To make our lives worth while, high and holy, to give life purpose and power, we need to see ever bow true it is that the Maker of all has unceasingly need of the least of us all.

Forget What You Have Done.



Put a seal upon your lips and forget what you have done. After you have been kind, after love has stolen forth into the world and done its beautiful work, go back into the shade again and say nothing about it. Love hides even from itself.—Drummond.

AN INTERESTING PAINT TEST

There is a very simple and interesting chemical test by which to detect impurity in paint materials. Thousands and thousands of people, all over the country, are making this test. It is a sure way to safeguard against the many adulterated white leads which are on the market. Any one can make the test—all that is needed is a simple little instrument which may be had free by writing National Lead Company, 1902 Trinity Building, New York, and asking for House-owner's Painting Outfit No. 49. The outfit includes also a set of color schemes for exterior or interior painting, or both, if you wish, and a book of specifications. No householder should make any arrangements for painting till he gets this outfit.

One can't expect a satisfactory painting job without pure white lead. There is a way to make sure you're getting a pure white lead—without testing it. See that the keg bears National Lead Company's famous Dutch Boy Painter trademark, which is a positive guarantee of purity. Your dealer probably has this w[illegible] lead. If [illegible] let National Lead Company know.

The Doctor—Ah, but I'll present her with my bill, and then I'll have to treat her for nervous prostration.

PRESCRIPTION FOR NERVOUS MEN AND WOMEN—TRY IT

The impairment of the nervous force in men and women is first manifested by extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, dread, worry and anxiety without reason, trembling of the hands and limbs, with the slightest exertion, heart palpitation, constipation, kidney trouble, and a general inability to act rationally at all times as others with health in their bodies do.

In a half pint bottle get three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound and add to this one ounce compound fluid balmwort, and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence cardiol, and one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom); mix all together, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at retiring.

An Error.

He had dined exceedingly well and was standing in the hotel lobby, listless, and looking exactly as if he were quite at home there. It was no wonder that the hotel guest walked up to him and inquired imperiously:

"Where's the news stand?"

"Dunno."

The guest glared.

"I'll report you for insolence," he hissed.

"Huh?" inquired he who had dined well. "R'port m'?"

"Say, what are you? A bellboy or a detective or—what?"

"I'm a haberdasher," answered the other, with a pleasant smile.

The other snorted and withdrew.

Work of Fish Hatcheries.

As the result of special efforts in the hatchery work during the year the output of fish and eggs in 1908 was greater than ever before in the history of the national bureau, reaching a total of 2,871,456,280. Of this number 2,413,809,225 were young fish distributed for the stocking and restocking of public and private waters, and the remaining 457,647,055 were eggs delivered to state and foreign hatcheries. The output of young fish exceeds the greatest previous record for any one year by 376,000,000.

Fattest French Soldiers.

Occasionally our Paris contemporaries entertain their readers with an account of the tallest and the shortest conscript. Now a journal has gone one better and discovered the fattest recruit in the French army, who has been found at Corbeil. This honorable distinction belongs to M. Laverdit, the son of a merchant in the locality. The young man turns the scale at 268 pounds, avoirdupois, or rather over 19 stone.

EVIDENTLY FOND OF PHRASE

Or Youthful Sailor's Vocabulary Was Limited, Judging by His Conversation.

He was a sailor boy of about 18, and his companion — probably his girl cousin—seemed to have met him at the station and to be conducting him to spend some of his leave at her home. Evidently the boy had been to see his parents and was satisfied with their general condition, for the conversation went nke this:

"And how is your father?"

"Oh, he's all right."

"And your mother?"

"Oh, she's all right."

"How did Lucy get on at school? She must be a big girl now."

"Oh, she's all right."

"Are the boys quite well?"

"Oh, they're all right."

There was quite a long pause after this, and then the girl tried again. "However do you sailors manage to live on a ship?" she said. "You must find it very monotonous." For the first time the sailor smiled. He answered the earliest part of the question by shaking his head. "Oh, we're all right," he explained. — Manchester Guardian.

A CURE FOR FITS.

The Treatment is to Accomplish What Science Has Been Struggling to Attain for Centuries.

The intense interest that has been manifested throughout the country by the wonderful cures that are being accomplished daily by epileptiecide still continues. It is really surprising the vast number of people who have already been cured of fits and nervousness. In order that everybody may have a chance to test the medicine, large trial bottles, valuable literature, History of Epilepsy and testimonials, will be sent by mail absolutely free to all who write to the Dr. May Laboratory, 548 Pearl Street, New York City.

To Help Him Save.

H. H. Rogers plunged into the politics of Fairhaven last month in order to secure prohibition for the beautiful Massachusetts town that is his birthplace.

"Mr. Rogers is against drinking," said a Fairhaven man. "He thinks, for one thing, that drinking brings on extravagance and thriftlessness.

"Mr. Rogers stopped and shook hands with me on the street the other morning.

"'Glad to see you out again,' he said. 'Hope you'll vote the right ticket. You've been sick, haven't you?'

"'Yes,' said I. 'Stomach trouble; I guess I won't get to the Easter blowout. The doctor has ordered me to give up champagne.'

"'You haven't paid his bill, yet, eh?' said Mr. Rogers, and he walked off chuckling."

All Over.

While work on a new building was going on in a southern town not long ago an old negro employed as a hodcarrier suddenly slipped while nearing the third story and plunged headlong to the ground. Several passers-by rushed over expecting to find a man dead with a broken neck, as the old fellow had struck squarely on the top of his head. Finding the old man still alive some one emptied the contents of a whisky bottle down his throat. In a few moments the old negro sat up and looked around.

"How do you feel now, uncle?" asked a bystander kindly.

"Well, sah," came the reply, "I wuz sorter cornfused when I fust started, but now dat I's hit I's all right!"

Shiloh Church to Be Repuilt.

An effort is being made to build a suitable memorial church on the site of the original Shiloh church, on Shiloh battlefield, now one of the most attractive of military parks. It was on this very spot the bloody battle of Shiloh was begun on the morning of April 6, 1862. It is the purpose to build a memorial church to cost not less than $10,000. The names of all contributors will be recorded in a permanent register and kept on exhibition in the church, which will be open to visitors and tourists.

Western Canada the Pennant Winner

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1908 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

"The thing which most impressed us was the magnitude of the country that is available for agricultural purposes."—National Editorial Correspondence, 1908.

HON. E. E. WINN, of Warsaw, surprised himself as well as his numerous friends, by the great race he made for the nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney at the recent primary election. But Mr. Winn entered the race with the reputation of being an easy local derby winner on several occasions in the past, and his last "go" only added to that rep.

AT their meeting held last Saturday the directors of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association revised and adopted the premium list for the 1909 fair, and appointed the several committees to each of which is allotted certain work to look after between now and the fair. There is no doubt but the next fair at Florence will be as good as any of those of the past.

THE dry order under which the recent district primary election was held worked nicely in this county up to the day of the election, when, notwithstanding some of the boys appeared to have something to revive their drooping spirits, nothing was said or done of which to complain. The order being in force during the campaign protected the candidates from being imposed on by numerous friends who would have enjoyed taking part in the financial feature of the canvass.

SEVERAL papers in different parts of the State have been handling a boom for Judge Lassing, of the Court of Appeals, as a candidate as the next Democratic nominee for Governor of Kentucky, but the Judge is quoted as saying he does not want and will not accept the nomination, but then politicians some times change their minds. Besides a nomination for the office of Governor of Kentucky is an honor not to be cast aside if obtainable, and the Judge could not be blamed for a change of mind should he see his way to the nomination clear.

JUDGE CAMMACK'S overwhelming victory at the primary election in this judicial district, was an endorsement of him as a public official of the most substantial character—an expression of the people's faith in his integrity and ability of which he can justly feel proud. In this county the effort that was apparent previous to the primary election was in opposition to Judge Cammack, but to no avail, as a majority of the voters was not disposed to have it that way and could not be hoodwinked and lead away from him. The voters all over the district proved to be pretty much of the same mind in regard to the judgship, and the result was that Judge Cammack's opponents were not given a look in at the primary.

Notice.

All persons permitting their stock to run at large in the Burlington, Bullittsville, Constance, Florence, Hamilton and Union precincts are openly violating the law, and are subject to a fine of not less than five ($5.00) nor more than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars for each offense. Such persons are liable for all damages done by their stock, whether the party damaged has their property inclosed or not, and the person so damaged has a lien on such stock, for the amount thereof. It is the duty of the sheriff, constable or town marshal when they see stock running at large or are notified that such is the case to at once impound such stock and the owner thereof shall pay the officer so doing one ($1.00) dollar per head and the cost of feeding and taking care of such stock, and the officer has a lien on such stock for his fees and expenses. It is the sheriff's duty and he will rigidly enforce this law when he sees stock running at large or complaint is made to him.

This notice is given as a last warning on account of the numerous complaints lately made to this office.

The Great Imported German Coach Stallion,
Plutarch 3183

Will make the season of 1909 at T. E. Randall's stable, one mile west of Idlewild, Boone County, Ky., on the Burlington and Petersburg Turnpike at

$12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,

money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—it will cost you nothing.

BURLINGTON & WATERLOO HORSE CO.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20 00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

HIGH VINE, 2733, foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1867; grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730; Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2882, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1365; second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60; third dam, Maxey by Granger; fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

HIGH VINE No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and feeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

Address all communications to

Prof. Jas. H. Craven, who has been teaching in the public schools of Covington, for several years, was at a meeting of the Board of Education of Latonia, one day last week, elected principal of the Latonia public schools. Mr. Craven was formerly a resident of Verona, this county.

A traction road at Florence would make the trip from Burlington to Covington much easier than it is, but the clang of the gong in Burlington would be a joy forever to this part of the country, a music that would have a charm that would be appreciated for all time to come.

The Erlanger Dramatic Club will give an entertainment at Literary Hall, Burlington, on Saturday evening the 22d inst., when "Tommy's Wife," a comedy, and the "Elopement of Ellen," a comedy farce will be presented in a most entertaining manner by a strong cast of characters.

A Good Institution.

The Boone County Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., was very busy last county court day. It had notices out of a 4½ per cent assessment, which covered two losses, and the money was coming in from every direction. Many of the amounts were small, but each required the same amount of labor to keep a record thereof. This company is the greatest and most popular institution in the county, made so by the safe and economical principles on which its directory has always conducted its business. Good, safe men have always been at its helm.

Ferry Sold.

Atty. S. W. Tolin transferred the Lawrenceburg Ferry to Peter O'Shaughnessy, of Newport, the consideration being $2,500. It is supposed that the purchase is really for the city of Lawrenceburg, which has been trying to acquire the property for several years, and if that be the case it will at an early date install one of the best equipped ferries along the Ohio river. Lawrenceburg is a growing city, to which a very large portion of Boone county is naturally tributary, and the merchants in that city desire to give them quick and comfortable transportation across the river in order to secure their trade and turn back to them the tide which it is claimed has set in towards Aurora. If the ferry is really the property of Lawrenceburg or a company of her enterprising merchants, and they really mean what they have been saying for several years, there will be something doing at the ferry at an early date.

Play Ball.

Caddie Maurer, of Belleview, and Herbert Kirkpatrick, of Burlington, two of the most enthusiastic fans in Northern Kentucky, put their heads together in an effort to organize a base ball league of four clubs, believing that better ball will be the result, and that there will be an increased local interest in the national game in the county. They do not expect that the league will prove any more than self-sustaining. Mr. Maurer says that he believes there is some good ball talent in Boone county, and he will be glad to assist in its development, and considers a local league the best medium for bringing the star players in the county to the front. Big Bone, Belleview, Hebron and Burlington can each put a good team on the diamond. Each team should play all home talent, thereby giving the younger players a chance to develop. There is plenty of good talent in the county to furnish a four team or even a six team league.

That Traction Road.

W. T. S. Blackburn, S. M. Billiter, Perry Simpson and Geo. W. Sleet, of Grant county, accompanied by S. C. Hicks, of Walton, were in Burlington, last Thursday in the interest of the traction road from Florence to Burlington that has been under discussion here for the past few weeks. Mr. Blackburn is the chief promoter of a system of proposed traction roads in this part of Kentucky, but the scheme he submitted to those he met in Burlington, last Thursday, was not received with any enthusiasm. His proposition was this: The right-of-way is to be given, and as much money subscribed as is possible to get as a bonus after which the road will be bonded for $15,000 a mile less the amount of the bonus. The bonus is not to be paid until the ties are laid. It might be possible to secure a right of way for a traction road through this part of the country, but when it comes to making up a bonus of any amount to assist in its construction it can not be done, and if the construction of the road depends on a good, fat bonus it is all off right now.

Much Excitement.

The citizens of Erlanger, Florence and Union, and many in the vicinity of those towns, are considerably excited over what appears to be a scheme that will insure them a traction road.

Large and enthusiastic meetings have been held at each of these towns, and appointments have been made for others to be held in the next few days.

Considerable money has been subscribed at each place for the purpose of securing the right of way, and everybody nearly seems to have their shoulder to the wheel and pushing with all their might.

Instead of the road being an extension of the traction line that runs to Highland Cemetery on the Lexington pike near Covington, the proposition to build from Ludlow via Crescent Springs to Erlanger and on into the country seems to be the most favored.

The rural population has become so thoroughly imbued with a desire for a traction road, that assistance will be rendered any company that will construct the road at once. The people are not particular from what direction the city is entered, and all traction roads look alike to them.

The nearer the day for holding the election approaches the more interest the people in Union and the surrounding country show in the proposed graded school there. The little town between the hills has been manifesting considerable life for a year or more and is ready to tackle any proposition that looks to its up-building, and along that line a graded school looks good to the people over there.

CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress From Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes In Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis, or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 25-grain Triangule and see it within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring: the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Kentucky Crop Report.

May 1.—Much rain has fallen during the month, causing much damage in many sections of the State. Wheat is generally in very poor condition for the time of the year but with good growing weather we may expect a fairly good crop. Hemp looks well and promises a large crop. Some large growers are planting a larger crop than ever before. Fruit has been damaged in some localities especially peaches, plums and cherries, but there is a good prospect for a large crop of apples and grapes. The prospect for the oats crop is better than at this time last year. An unusually large crop of tobacco is promised exceeding almost all records, especially is this so in regard to the Burley tobacco. About an average crop of dark tobacco will be planted. Tobacco plants are not as far advanced as they should be on account of so much cool weather. Live stock are in fairly good condition, and a decrease of cattle and hogs are shown on account of the high prices of feed. An increase of sheep is shown in many counties of the State. A large corn crop will be planted, due in a large measure to the farmers using pure bred seed corn. There is a small acreage of rye and barley grown in the State and both are looking fairly good. Clover is in poor condition. Alfalfa looks well and the acreage is being increased throughout the entire state.

Don't forget to stop in and inspect Clark's line of watches, clocks, jewelry and spectacles. tf

THE TOO-CLEVER WOMAN.

Man unjustly accuses woman of enjoying a monopoly of vanity, when, as a matter of fact, no woman is any more vain than most men, and in some respects mere man is so much more vain than woman that comparison is ridiculous. A good many men spend as much time as any belle over their attire and the manner of its assumption on state occasions, but the real vanity of man concerns his brains. He likes a clever woman, but the very instant he suspects she is cleverer than he, he takes fright. His vanity is hurt. Inasmuch as awe and love are not given to rambling leafy lanes hand in hand, and man in his superiority likes to believe woman dependent upon him mentally as well as for creature needs, the woman who is really clever will never allow her cleverness to obtrude itself too strongly upon men. Wit is a good servant, but a bad master. The girl who acquires a reputation for putting on airs, or being "smart," is never popular among men. The too-clever woman is handicapped by her cleverness. It sometimes pays to pamper foolish, egotistic man, and use wit with discretion.

This country that laid the rails for the great railroads of Russia, that has bestowed upon the czar's realm many of the implements of its industrial promotion is being looked to by the douma for other assistance of the same nature. A bill has passed the parliament providing for the establishment at Washington of a Russian agricultural agency for the purpose of introducing American methods and machinery. This is but another evidence that America leads the world, and the nations are sitting at her feet seeking instruction in the modern art of getting to the goal without going in a circle. The American methods and machinery in agriculture account for much of the prosperity of the American people. Russia is doing good work in seeking to introduce them for the benefit of the vast rural population of the empire.

There can be no long felt or deeply serious depression from financial panic in a country whose agricultural production is increasing at the rate of $300,000,000 a year. Nearly $8,000,000,000 of new wealth was brought up out of the ground in the year just coming to a close, or $80 per capita on a basis of 100,000,000 population—an increase of more than a third of a billion over the the soil production of 1907. These are farm values based on prices paid the producer, and the increase has come despite the fact that cotton and hay, the second and third crops in importance, measured by aggregate value, have experienced a heavy slump in price as compared with the prices prevalent a year ago.

The sad plight of an old couple driven from the home they had given to their daughter is pitiful testimony to the heartlessness of children who are humored, petted and pampered into selfishness by indulgent parents. The daughter who turns her aged parents into the street is like the husband who borrows his wife's girlhood savings and spends them on other women. In each case the fault is in fathers and mothers who permit their children to grow up selfish. Parents and wives who are tempted to sacrifice the little substance which guarantees their independence should beware. Love is blind, and there is danger in intrusting common sense to a blind guide.

The latest London health fad is drinking hot milk. It was started by the prince of Wales when he drank a large quantity of hot milk at a dinner of the Savage club. The statement is made that one glass of hot milk at bedtime will insure pleasant dreams, while a glass every half hour through the day has been known to put physical wrecks upon their feet. It will be generally conceded that there might be worse fads than that of drinking hot milk.

A Mexican who was a member of the firing squad that killed Emperor Maximilian has just died at the age of 104 years. He was an unknown man yet he helped to make history. His shot helped to the undoing of Napoleon III. and the remaking of the map of Europe—for the Mexican adventure ruined Napoleon's fame and prestige.

The proposition for a closed season for minnows may have a bearing on the supply of sardines. As "almost anything" is codfish that is marketed in dry salt, all small fish that are sold in cans pass as sardines.

A FATAL BOAT RIDE

OCCUPANTS OF CRAFT JUMPED UP WHEN IT DIPPED, CAUSING IT TO CAPSIZE.

NINE PERSONS SWEPT TO DEATH

Whole Family Lost in Swollen Susquehanna River—State Troops Trying To Recover Bodies, But as Yet All Efforts Have Failed.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 10.—William Andrews, of Port Griffith, Sunday, took two of his brothers, two cousins, his brother-in-law, his sister and two nephews, a total of nine persons in all, out for a boat ride on the Susquehanna river near his home.

The river is high on account of the recent rains, and the overloaded boat capped water as soon as it got into the swift current. Some of the people in the boat, growing frightened, stood up, screaming for help, and the next moment the boat capsized.

Before people on shore could overcome their horror and get boats out into the river all of the nine had been carried away by the swift current and disappeared.

Some boys at play on the bank of the river heard the screams for help, but before a boat could be obtained the rowboat, in midstream, had filled with water and sunk.

One of the boys who witnessed the tragedy said Sunday night that the man who was rowing seemed to dip his oars too deep. This, he said, caused the water to splash over the side of the boat.

The woman, in order to avoid the water, started to move toward the stern of the craft. This shifting of the seas caused the boat to fill rapidly with water.

In a few minutes all were floundering in the rushing river. The two boys grabbed the clothing of their mother as the boat toppled over and the three disappeared almost instantly.

The river is high and the swift current carried three of the men to within 50 feet of the bank, while the others were drowned within a stone's throw of the scene of the accident.

The names of the dead: Thomas Andrews, Wm. Andrews, Theodore Andrews, Frank Marionosky, Adam Struskus, Frank Ganofky, his wife and two boys, John and Mitchell.

State troops are now trying to recover the bodies. All of Andrews' eight visitors were from Providence, Lackawanna county.

NEGRO WAS HUNTED DOWN

And Then Identified By White Woman as Her Assailant—Prisoner Riddled With Bullets.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 10.—In the presence of Mrs. Andrew Deas, whom he had assaulted, an unknown negro was lynched in the suburbs of Jacksonville early Sunday morning. The assault on Mrs. Deas was committed about dark Saturday evening. Mrs. Deas was in the grounds of her home when the negro sprang from behind shrubbery and seized her. She fought desperately, but the negro dragged her into the shrubbery. After the negro left Mrs. Deas managed to reach the house and gave the alarm.

Her son organized a posse and the negro was chased with dogs all Saturday night. He was captured about 4 o'clock some miles from the Deas home and was hurried before Mrs. Deas for identification. "He is the negro," cried Mrs. Deas. As soon as Mrs. Deas announced that the right man had been captured, the posse began to pour volleys into the prisoner riddling his body.

Not satisfied with this, knives were used and the negro's head almost severed from his body.

The sheriff was notified that there might be a lynching and he hurried from Jacksonville to Deas' home, but when he reached there the mob had done its work, leaving the mutilated body of the negro in front of the Deas home.

Rescued From Watery Graves.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 10.—Five Cornell students and one other young man were rescued from a watery grave Sunday afternoon when a party aboard the launch Dixie took them off a sinking sailboat in the middle of Cayuga lake after they had been in the ice-cold water for 20 minutes and had given up all hope.

Double Accident Kills Negro.

Jessup, Ga., May 10.—Posses are scouring the county for miles around for three negro prisoners who escaped from the Wayne county jail here, leaving behind them Deputy Frank Madray dying from a fractured skull.

POET'S STATUE UNVEILED

MONUMENT TO LONGFELLOW IS GIVEN TO NATION.

President Taft and Other Notables Take Part in the Ceremonies at Washington.

Washington.—To the strains of "Hiawatha" and "The Star-Spangled Banner," played by the Marine band, the statue erected to the memory of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was unveiled Friday. The monument, which shows the American poet seated with a book in his hand, represents 12 years of hard and conscientious work by the Longfellow National Memorial association and the generosity of the public in coming forward with subscriptions to perpetuate in the national capital the memory of one of the nation's greatest poets.

The occasion was the more notable because of the presence of the president of the United States, members of the diplomatic corps, men distinguished in letters, and by practically all of the living relatives of the poet. The statue itself is an artistic addition to the tributes to Americans who have won renown in the higher arena of individual effort which adorn the national capital. It is the first statue erected here to mark distinguished services rendered to our national literature.

The statue, which is located in a small triangular parking at the intersection of Connecticut avenue and U street, is of heroic size, of pure white Persian marble, and the pedestal, in striking contrast, is of reddish brown marble imported from Scottish quarries. William Couper of New York is the sculptor.

Chief Justice Fuller of the supreme court of the United States presided at the unveiling exercises, and the invocation was delivered by Rev. Charles Wood, pastor of the Church of the Covenant. Addresses were delivered by Rt. Rev. Alexander Mackay-Smith, coadjutor bishop of Pennsylvania, on "The History of the Statue;" by Maj. Gen. A. W. Greely on "Longfellow the Man;" by Prof. Bliss Perry of Harvard university, on "Longfellow the Citizen," and by Hamilton W. Mabie on "Longfellow the Poet."

The statue was presented to the city by Brainard H. Warner, treasurer of the Longfellow National Memorial association, and was accepted by President Taft.

21 ARE REPORTED DEAD.

Duluth Hears the Steamer Shores Went Down in Lake Superior—Vessel Long Overdue.

Duluth, Minn.—Advices received here are to the effect that the steamer Shores, six days overdue at Duluth, went down off White Fish Point in Lake Superior with all on board.

The crew and passengers numbered 21. News of the destruction was brought to Duluth by the crew of the steamer Northland, who say that as the latter was passing White Fish Point on the way up they discovered wreckage strewn all over the lake and in their opinion it belonged to the Shores. The fact that she was a week overdue adds color to the theory.

The Adelia Shores belonged to the S. O. Neff Transportation Company of Milwaukee, Wis.

The gale in which the ship foundered last week and in which also the Aurania, the Russia and the Nester went down was one of the fiercest in the history of Lake Superior for this season of the year. The wind at times gained a velocity of 70 miles an hour. This, together with the fact that a violent snowstorm prevailed for three days, made navigation extremely perilous for ships that were caught away from land and in the trough of the sea.

TRIAL FOR JUDGES

MURPHY SAYS HE WILL FILE IMPEACHMENT CHARGES AGAINST JURISTS.

REPEATS CHARGES IN HOUSE

Declares He Will Attempt to Oust Philips and McPherson from Federal Bench for Conduct in Missouri Railroad Rate Cases.

Washington.—Mr. Murphy of Missouri, following a speech in the house Thursday, said he would file formal charges of impeachment against Federal Judges McPherson and Philips of the western district of Missouri, whom he accused in a resolution Monday of misconduct.

Incensed over a telegram to Attorney General Wickersham by Frank Hagerman, attorney for railroads, in which Mr. Hagerman characterized Mr. Murphy's resolution of inquiry into the official conduct of the two judges, introduced in the house Monday, as "an outrageous tissue of misrepresentation," Mr. Murpby held the attention of the house with a repetition of the charges.

His colleague, Mr. Rucker, corroborated all that he said in denunciation of the action of the two judges in connection with Missouri's two-cent passenger rate law and the maximum freight law. Incidentally Mr. Rucker remarked that Judge Philips ought to have been impeached 20 years ago.

Mr. Murphy brought the matter up as a question of personal privilege. Mr. Murphy had read some newspaper dispatches to the effect that Hagerman had telegraphed the attorney general of the United States alleging that the charges in the Murpby resolution were "an outrageous tissue of misrepresentation by one who had no knowledge of the facts." He said that he had confirmed the fact that such a telegram had been received by Attorney General Wickersham.

Mr. Clayton of Alabama, a member of the judiciary committee, objected, saying that the argument was not one of personal privilege.

Speaker Cannon ruled that Mr. Murphy was within his rights and could continue, but he had not proceeded far when Mr. Henry of Texas, another member of the judiciary committee, stopped him with an inquiry as to whether he did not intend to formally bring in charges of impeachment.

The Missouri member, however, did not give a direct answer, but continued his recital of the charges contained in his resolution.

Several times Mr. Payne, the majority leader, objected, saying Mr. Murphy could not yield for debate. Later he again objected on the ground that Mr. Murpby was traveling outside the issue raised by the Hagerman telegram and the preamble of the resolution.

Again in passing on the objection, Speaker Cannon ruled in favor of Mr. Murpby, remarking that "the telegram is pretty broad."

Continuing, Mr. Murphy denied that the state of Missouri had been accorded every courtesy in the rate cases, as was stated in Mr. Hagerman's telegram. The state, he declared, had no knowledge or notice whatever of the first injunction in those cases.

"I am asking the congress of the United States," he said, "to give back to us that government which you handed to us when you admitted us as a state in the union by requiring the federal judiciary in the western district of Missouri to proceed along orderly and decent lines in the execution of the law."

Both Judge McPherson and Judge Philips declined to discuss the announcement that Representative Murphy will ask their impeachment.

BRITONS THE BEST SHOTS.

John Bull's Riflemen Defeat Uncle Sam's 14,583 to 14,179 Points in Match.

Washington. — British riflemen in the international small bore match just ended, demonstrated their superiority over the Americans. The match was a friendly one with bore rifles on gallery ranges in the respective countries.

The targets were issued by the British Society of Miniature Rifle Clubs, were signed by the respective associations and interchanged, and the results announced by cable. Australia, the other contestant, has not yet been heard from but the National Rifle association of America, under whose auspices the contests were conducted in this country, is of the opinion that their scores will not equal those of the British team.

The British team made the grand total of 14,583 points out of a possible 15,000, or an average of 291 per man. The scores of the American team were 14,179.

IN PRAISE OF THE COUNTRY.

Residence There Has Many Advantages of Which City Dweller Knows Nothing.

There are hardships in the country; struggles are necessary to wrest a livelihood from the soil or from business in a small community. But every stroke can be made to count for permanence, comments the Columbia State. The food and the air are better; man's independence is more real, where he can own the roof that shelters him and the ground upon which he can grow his provisions. Every cow or horse added to his holdings is an increase of his capital. Little by little, year by year, he can, with industry and good judgment, increase his store of worldly goods and give to his children a tangible inheritance, a foothold in their own land, an anchorage from which the shifting tides of trade cannot dislodge them. And while such a family is living its own life, solving its own problems, it may enjoy the same literary and artistic pleasures, and the same general advantages that the city family has.

ECZEMA COVERED HIM.

Itching Torture Was Beyond Words—Slept Only from Sheer Exhaustion—Relieved in 24 Hours and Cured by Cuticura in a Month.

"I am seventy-seven years old, and some years ago I was taken with eczema from head to foot. I was sick for six months and what I suffered tongue could not tell. I could not sleep day or night because of that dreadful itching; when I did sleep it was from sheer exhaustion. I was one mass of irritation; it was even in my scalp. The doctor's medicine seemed to make me worse and I was almost out of my mind. I got a set of the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent. I used them persistently for twenty-four hours. That night I slept like an infant, the first solid night's sleep I had had for six months. In a month I was cured. W. Harrison Smith, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., Feb. 3, 1908."

Locations of Promotion.

Elzena, aged four, reveled in kindergarten lore, and each day imparted to her young mother the many interesting things that the sweet-faced teacher had told them. Among the vicissitudes of school life to be encountered was that of vaccination, which was new to the little one. After much explaining and reassuring this difficulty was safely passed. A few weeks later she returned one day from kindergarten in a whirl of excitement, exclaiming: "Mother, mother, I'm going to be promoted—mother, will I be promoted on my arm or leg?"

NOT DRUGS Food Did It.

After using laxative and cathartic medicines from childhood a case of chronic and apparently incurable constipation yielded to the scientific food, Grape-Nuts, in a few days.

"From early childhood I suffered with such terrible constipation that I had to use laxatives continuously going from one drug to another and suffering more or less all the time.

"A prominent physician whom I consulted told me the muscles of the digestive organs were partially paralyzed and could not perform their work without help of some kind, so I have tried at different times about every laxative and cathartic known, but found no help that was at all permanent. I had finally become discouraged and had given my case up as hopeless when I began to use the predigested food, Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had not expected this food to help my trouble, to my great surprise Grape-Nuts digested immediately from the first and in a few days I was convinced that this was just what my system needed.

"The bowels performed their functions regularly and I am now completely and permanently cured of this awful trouble.

"Truly the power of scientific food must be unlimited." "There's a Reason."

On the Spoor of the King of Beasts

By Lord Delamere

TO get good sport in Somaliland the first thing is to get a good shikari. There are excellent men to be found with care and good luck, but a great many who are absolutely worthless. In addition to others, I have always had one man, Abdulla Ashur, as head shikari. Besides being an agreeable companion, he is far and away the best finder of game I have ever seen in the country. His pluck is undeniable, and the only difficulty I have had with him is to prevent him going where I did not care to go myself. This may sound exaggerated praise of a native, but among other things he grappled a lion which had knocked me down, being severely mauled before he got the brute off, so that I naturally entertain a very high opinion of him. Owing to his skill in tracking I have only lost one wounded lion out of many that were hit, and that was not his fault, as the blood stopped almost directly and the ground was nothing but stones for miles. This speaks for itself, as any one who has shot lions knows how difficult it is to recover a wounded beast without dogs.

I only once had the help of dogs after wounded lions. We were camped down in the Haud among the Eldegali villages under Sultan Derla. One day I went out to try to get some meat for the natives, accompanied by a warrior called Hassan and his pony. I had just shot an oryx, and we were cutting it up, when the smallest Somali I have ever seen came running up to say he had just observed five lions asleep under a tree close by. This man belonged to the low-caste tribe of Midgans—people who do not live together in one tribe, but are scattered all over Somaliland in different villages, where they are chiefly engaged in killing antelope for meat, other Somalis, as a rule, thinking it below their dignity to do anything but go out occasionally on looting expeditions. Midgans are armed with bows and poisoned arrows, and each of them carries a knife. Until quite lately no other Somali would use a bow, but now it is quite a common thing to meet a native belonging to another tribe who has discarded his spears for a bow and quiver of poisoned arrows.

Shooting Lions with Poisoned Arrows.

Lions are occasionally killed by Midgans, but the poison on the arrows cannot be very strong, as frequently, after being sick two or three times, the lion seems to recover and get away. Captain Swayne gives an account of the way in which these Midgans hunt the oryx with their dogs. But to get on with my story. The little Midgan carried a bow nearly as long as himself, and was followed by about a dozen small native dogs with curly sterns and prick ears. These little curs were wonderfully broken. The man trotted off in front of us, and when he got near the place where he had seen the lions he simply put out his hand, and all the dogs lay down in a bunch and never attempted to follow on after us. Then we stalked carefully towards a big thorn tree rising above the bush. This was where the lions were said to be. The bush was very open, and when we came in sight of the tree the lions were just decamping. There were four of them, not five—an old lioness and three lions, perhaps not quite full grown, and with very little mane. Hassan had followed close behind on his pony, so I shouted to him to try and keep his eye on the lioness, and ran on myself with Abdulla after one of the lions. This one did not seem much inclined to run, and after a short burst I managed to get a bullet into him somewhere just as he disappeared into some thick bushes.

At that moment we caught sight of another lion trotting along parallel to us about 200 yards off. The wounded one was keeping up a continuous low growling in the bushes, so, thinking he would not get far away, we ran to cut off the other. He turned off when he caught sight of us, and we had a long, stern chase after him, as a result of which I was so blown I could not hit him, although he was lobbing along not more than 100 yards ahead. At last I did get a bullet into his flank, he at once turned, and, growling fiercely, came bounding a few yards towards us, as if trying to make up his mind to charge. Whether he would have done so or not I do not know, as my second barrel caught him on the point of the shoulder, bringing him on to his nose, and before he could recover himself I put in another bullet from my second rifle and finished him.

It is more than likely he would not have charged, as I have several times seen a lion make this kind of demonstration when slightly hit, more, I think, to try to frighten his assailant than anything else. A lion that really means charging up comes quite silently, galloping very fast along the ground like a dog.

A Wounded Lion at Bay.

While this was going on we could hear Hassan shouting in the distance, so now we ran off towards the sound. When we started the shouts seemed to be almost stationary, but as we ran they got further and further off till at last we could hear nothing. We then turned to go back for the wounded lion. As we got near the place where we had left him, we could hear a tremendous row going on, men shouting, dogs barking, and the unmistakable grunts of an angry lion. Running up, we found the lion, with his shoulder broken, standing in a bush surrounded at a respectful distance by the little dogs. They kept up an incessant yapping, and every now and then the lion would make a drive at them, but they were much too quick for him with his broken shoulder, and were at him again directly he retreated to the bush. The little Midgan and one of my men were close by, yelling with excitement. As I walked up to try to get a shot without hitting one of the pack, the lion took no more notice of the dogs, but kept his eyes fixed on me. I never saw a lion look nastier, but I suppose his broken shoulder had sickened him, and I shot him without difficulty. The Midgan, after calling his dogs, had run on after us, and had come on the wounded lion. We skinned this beast, and the little Midgan rather amused us, as he got so very much annoyed because his dogs would not eat some great chunks of raw lion-flesh he cut off and offered them. We were on our way to skin the other lion when we met Hassan looking rather sorry for himself. He said that the lioness had trotted quite quietly at first, and he had brought her round in a circle towards the place where he had left us, riding alongside of her, and shouting to let us know where he was. Unluckily she crossed the track of the wounded lion, and after smelling at the blood she became perfectly unmanageable, making off at a gallop and charging him whenever he got in front to try to turn her. At last she had gone into the thick bush on some hills, where he had lost her. When we had skinned the other lion we made a cast to try to pick up the fourth, but could make nothing of him—I never got this lion, although he killed one of our donkeys the next day.

Badgering an Angry Lioness.

We had not been back in camp very long when my companion came in, saying he had run across a lioness in the hills, which he was sure was the one we had seen, as she was very angry. She had run into some long grass, and had charged out towards his men, when they were going up to light it. He was very unwell with fever at the time, and although he had two or three shots, he was so shaky he could not hit her, and at last felt so ill he had to give her up. His shikari told me the lioness was very much beat from being badgered about in the sun and he was sure we could find her. I owed her one for frightening Hassan, so we started at once, Hassan not coming, but sending a relation of his on the same pony. After a short ride we got to the place and found the tracks going into a long strip of high feathery grass. We cast all around and could find no tracks coming out, so decided to burn the patch. It was about 200 yards long and perhaps 50 broad. I could not command the whole of it, so I told the men to light it at the top and along one side, and Abdulla and I took up our station halfway down the other side, about 30 yards out from the edge. At the bottom end I put the warrior on the pony to see if the lioness broke that way. Almost directly the grass was lit a big spotted hyena blundered out and came within a few yards of us, but the great part of the patch was burnt before there was any sign of the lioness. Then I caught sight of her slinking along through the thin grass at the edge of the strip going towards the bottom end. She did not see us, as we were rather behind her and standing quite still.

When I shot she seemed to stumble forward, but recovering herself caught sight of the man on the pony, and before I could shoot again she was half way towards him, going like a flash. He had not seen her when I shot, as she was hidden by the grass, and by the time he got his pony turned around and started she was close to him. He galloped straight away from me, and I dare not fire at the lioness for fear of hitting him. For nearly 200 yards it looked any money on the lioness. She got right under the pony's tail, but did not seem to know how to strike, and at length, to my great relief, the pony began to gain on her. She at once pulled up, and turned into a bush where she lay down stretched out at full length, panting. Running up, I shot her before she could prepare for another effort. My first bullet had gone through the muscles of the forearm just below the shoulder, and being solid had only drilled quite a small hole. The natives said that the reason she could not catch the pony was because a lion could not spring before a momentary halt to crouch. If this is so, a pony could always get away from a lion galloping straight behind it, unless the pony was such a bad one that the lion could come alongside. On two or three occasions I have been chased myself in the open grass plain, but have always got a fair start, and my pony has had no difficulty in keeping out of the lion's way. A pony boy of mine was very nearly caught one day in the open. He was trying to round up a lion, and got rather too close to it on a tired pony. He only just got away. This same lion afterwards chased me and two or three of my men for quite a long time. Unless a pony falls down, I am sure there is nothing to be feared from a lion in the open, if one gives him a pretty wide berth, so as to get a start when he charges. As a rule the lion will give up the chase after 100 yards or so. This pony of Hassan's was about the best I ever saw in Somaliland. He would not put a price on it, because he said he could make quite a respectable income by making looting expeditions on its back, as it was so fast nobody could catch it.

Killing Camels to Save a Pony.

A year after this I met Hassan again, and asked him how his pony was. He said it was very well, but that he had very nearly lost it a short time before. He had been down in the waterless plain on a looting expedition with some other Eldegalla warriors. After a successful raid they split up to avoid pursuit, and Hassan was on his way home driving some of the looted camels in front of him. It was a very dry year, and although it was the rainy season, he had been unable to find any water in pools to give his pony. The result was that having been ridden hard for two or three days with little or no water to drink, the pony got beat, and at last lay down, about 20 miles from the wells they were making for. No amount of stick would get it on its legs again, and Hassan was in despair. He knew there were no villages at the wells where he could get vessels in which to carry water back to the pony, and it seemed as if nothing could be done to save it. At last he thought of a plan. Driving the camels at top speed to the wells, he gave them as much water as they could drink, and hurried them back again. He found the pony where he had left it, in a very bad way, but immediately proceeding to kill and cut open the camels, he took the water out of their stomachs and gave it to the pony, which revived sufficiently to struggle to the wells. After a few days' rest it completely recovered. Hassan added that he could very soon get some more camels, and that he would rather have cut the throats of a hundred than have lost his pony. This story shows a great deal of resource in a native, but the life a Somali leads makes him wonderfully quick at finding a way out of a fix of this kind. It was very lucky the pony was not killed by lions or hyenas while Hassan was away.

Just before Hassan's pony was nearly caught by the lioness we had a pony killed by lions, the man on his back escaping rather cleverly. At that time we had two separate camps, six or seven miles apart, each of them on the edge of the Marar Prairie, on a ban or open grass plain many miles in extent. This was the best place for lions it has ever been my luck to come across. Hardly a day passed that lions were not seen by one or the other of us, very often right out in the open, miles from any bush. It was cool, cloudy weather while we were there, and the lions seemed to do most of their hunting in the daytime. There were so many, and they were so bold, that the Somalis were quite nervous about walking through the bush in the daytime. Between us we shot 24 lions in this place in a little over a fortnight. Besides lions there was more game than I have ever seen anywhere else. Large herds of hartbeeste, oryx, and Sommering's gazelle were to be seen feeding in every direction. Besides this, in the open there were a good many ostriches and a few hunting cheetahs. In the bush at the back of our camps were Waller's gazelles, leopards, warthog, and innumerable dikdik and birds. In the rocky hills I saw several klip-springers.

One morning my companion was roused by his natives, who told him that three lions were just crossing a strip of open ground within 100 yards of his camp. Before he was ready, two or three of the men jumped on ponies and galloped after the lions—three very fine males with manes—which were by that time making off. The natives meant to try and keep them engaged till the hunter had time to get his rifle and cartridges and catch them up. The lions were galloping among scattered mimosa scrub, making for the thick bush beyond, and with an object in view a lion can get along at a very fair pace in the cool of the morning. One of the men got a start of the others and was rapidly overhauling the lions, when he lost sight of them for a moment. He galloped up to the bush where he had last seen them, and as he rounded it, one lion came at him from behind and the other two from the front. They had got sick of running and had waited for him. The native did a very clever thing. There was no chance of getting away by galloping, as he was regularly bemmed in, so, half checking the pony, he put his heel on its wither, and jumped right into the middle of a mimosa bush. Almost as he jumped the lions knocked the pony over, and when my companion came up he found them eating it, taking no notice of the dismounted men close by. The first shot hit one, and while he was following it up the other two gave him the slip. These two lions were decidedly out of luck, as I got them the same night.

Approaching Big Game in Jungle.

That morning a lioness killed a heifer close to my camp. I had already seen her tracks several times, but they had always led us on to some stony hills where we had lost them. This time the same thing happened again, so, thinking she would probably come back that night to finish the heifer, we decided to sit up for her. We therefore made an enclosure of thorns under a mimosa bush near by. The flat top of the bush came down to meet the thorns built up all around and one could hardly tell the whole thing was not a bush. In the front there was a hole to shoot through, and at the back we left an opening so that we could get inside. After this we returned back to camp, and in the evening after dinner went off again, taking my bedding on a donkey. This donkey was also to serve as a bait, for the natives had cut up and taken away the heifer. We tied the donkey by one foreleg, almost touching the fence of our zereba, and after shoving in my bedding, crawled in through the opening at the back. Two men who had come with us crammed this hole up with thorns, and then went away, talking loudly to make the lioness think that all was safe if she were anywhere near.

After looking about for some time I made out the lioness slinking along behind our bush. She would not come up to the donkey, but lay down some way off under a bush. There was no hole on that side, so I could not shoot with any certainty; and at last, needing sleep, I lay down, telling Abdulla to keep his eye on the lioness, and wake me if there was any chance of a shot. I had not slept long when he touched me, at the same time putting his hand over my mouth to prevent me calling out on being suddenly awoke. I got up on my knees, looking out of the hole, but for a moment I could not make out anything.

It was a lovely night, but even by the brightest moonlight a lion is not a very easy thing to see. There was an open glade in front of the donkey, and, at last, standing out in the open, I saw two lions. They seemed as if they could not make out why the donkey did not run away, and stood quite still looking at him. As I watched they suddenly started, and came racing towards us side by side like two enormous dogs. When the lions got up to the donkey they did not seem to stop their rush, but donkey and lions all went down with a crash together. How they actually knocked him over I did not see, as at that moment I drew back my head involuntarily, because, although we were absolutely safe inside a mass of mimosa thorns, the whole thing felt unpleasantly close. When I looked out again I could easily have touched one of the lions, which was standing with its forepaws on the donkey and its hind quarters within a few inches of our fence. The other lion was standing on the far side looking me straight in the face; but I am sure he could not see me, as the moon was right in his eyes, making them shine as if they were alight. I could only see his head, as the other lion's body was in the way, so I determined to give the one nearest me a shot. There was very little of him to be seen except his hind quarters, but he was so close I was sure the bullet would drive right through him.

Quick Shooting in a Crisis.

As the rifle came up to my shoulder it touched a branch, which seemed to make a crack like a pistol shot, and the lion turned half round to see what it was. At the same moment I fired, and he fell, rolling over and over against the fence, and roaring loudly. Thinking that in his struggles he might carry away some of our zereba, I gave him two more shots to finish him. As I shot the second time, the other lion, which had run back a few yards, came and stood close to the donkey, looking straight towards us. I pulled at his chest directly I was loaded. He plunged forward, hitting the corner of our zereba, then swerved off, and we heard him crash into a bush, where we found him stone dead in the morning. The bullet had gone through his heart. These two lions were very fine specimens. One had a thick, almost jet black mane, the other had a lighter mane, but for a wild lion very thick. There is no doubt these were the lions seen the day before, as the next day, riding over to visit the other camp, I followed their back trail to within a mile of the spot.

Shortly before this I shot three times at a lion which was eating my donkey. The night was as dark as pitch. The lion took very little notice of the two first shots, although one of them hit the donkey in the ribs. The third shot was a very lucky one. The bullet hit the donkey in the stomach, and, going through, caught the lion at the junction of the neck with the chest, killing him on the spot. One would think that a 577 rifle blazed in his face at about five yards would frighten any lion. This one had killed and eaten a sheep the night before, taking it from the same village where I sat up for him.

The two foregoing stories would seem to show that a large percentage of the lions killed in Somaliland are shot at night over a bait. This is not really so, as it is quite a chance if a lion passes the place where you have a donkey tied up. Night shooting, to my mind, is a thing to be avoided, except now and then as an experience. It generally means a very disturbed night, especially if there are any hyenas about, and in the morning you are not fit for a hard day's work. Occasionally by bright moonlight it is very interesting, but if circumstances admit of lions being killed by day, it is rather like shooting a boar in a fine pig-sticking country to kill a lion over a bait at night. Sometimes it is the only chance you have of getting a lion, either because you are moving camp next day, or because the country is unsuitable for tracking. Under the circumstances you are bound to try it.

I have never myself shot more than two lions in one night, but a man whom I met in the country showed me the skins of four he had shot when sitting up over the dead body of an elephant. It was very dark or he might have got any number, as he told me he was shooting most of the night, and that in the morning there were tracks of many lions all round the carcass.

I have once or twice sat up over a dead animal. This way of getting lions is only likely to be successful when there are many hyenas about, as they make such a noise that they will attract any lion that may come past within a reasonable distance.

RUDE SHOCK FOR THE GIRLS

Japanese Could Not Understand Their Desire for Privacy While in the Bath.

An interesting article in the Wide World Magazine is entitled "Two Girls in Japan," by Irene Lyon. Here is Miss Lyon's account:

The bath itself—which looked like a large box—was a wooden structure built into a corner, and all round the inside ran a convenient ledge for sitting on. The water being little short of boiling, our movements were decidedly cautious, and, curling ourselves up on the ledge, we tried to grow accustomed to the temperature by degrees before plunging right in. When, thinking to remove the traces of our journey by a vigorous application of soap, we began to scrub ourselves, it suddenly occurred to us that such a proceeding was not "etiquette," out of consideration to the other bathers. So we stepped out, soaped ourselves well, and rinsed our bodies with the wooden ladles supplied for the purpose, before getting back into the water again.

We were sitting on the ledge, chatting peacefully, when a sudden premonition of danger made me look up, and the spectacle which greeted my eyes caused me to utter one agonized gasp, and then sink rapidly out of sight. The pains we had taken to block up the gap at the entrance had all been in vain, for the various garments which we had used for the purpose lay scattered on the floor, and the opening was occupied by a line of little heads, one above the other, while ten gleaming eyes were interestedly fixed upon us!

Opposes Bleached Flour.

The Lancet (London) agrees fully with the action of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture in this country in ruling against the bleaching of wheat flour. "The public," says the Lancet, "would be well advised to abandon the fallacious notion that the whiteness of bread is a mark of quality. On the contrary, it nearly always means an insipid, unpalatable bread, and an attractive flavor is a factor of considerable importance in connection with the digestibility of food. The destruction of the natural color of flour by bleaching agents synchronizes with the destruction of its attractive flavor. Such tampering with the 'staff of life' should be made illegal."

Horses May Be Insured.

The Saxon government has sanctioned a horse insurance. All horses, asses and their crossbreeds, over six months old, may now be insured.

Artificial Silk Made in France.

France has five great mills and a number of smaller ones at which artificial silk is made. There are three kinds of it.

WALTON DEPARTMENT.

D. B. WALLACE, Manager.

Hand your news items to Mr. D. B. Wallace at the Walton Equitable Bank and Trust Co.'s building. He is also authorized to receive subscriptions and collect other accounts.

Jas. R. Wallace, of Warsaw, spent part of last week here on business.

Mrs. W. R. Rouse and son, Clifford, spent Thursday of last week in Cincinnati.

For Sale—Fresh cow and calf. $40 will buy them. A. J. Thomas, Richwood, Ky.

Geo. W. Wharton and son, Will, of Landing, were here last Thursday on business.

John M. Carlton, of Zion Station, spent Thursday here on business and with his many friends.

Mrs. E. P. Northcutt, returned home last week from a visit to relatives and friends at Latonia.

For Sale—Two year old sow and seven pigs. Call or address Mrs. Annie C. Stapleton, Walton, Ky.

John G. Adams and R. S. Veach, of Key West, were in Walton the latter part of the week on business.

E. P. Northcutt, one of our enterprising merchants, spent last Thursday in Cincinnati on business for his store.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Blackwell, of Covington, spent Sunday here with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Jesse E. Franks.

O. S. Watts spent the past week in Indiana and Ohio buying wool for a Louisville firm and has made a large purchase.

George W. Ossman and grandchildren, Ossman and Louise, of Beaver Lick, were here last week visiting friends.

Wood R. Miller spent part of last week at his old home at Big Bone Springs, where he still has some business interests.

Miss Mary Graham returned home the first part of the week after a pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. E. W. Sechrest, of Ludlow.

J. R. Kinman, of Jonesville, was here last week contracting with Geo. P. Nicholson to erect him a fine residence on his land near Jonesville.

Albert Young, who has been learning telegraphy at the L. & N. Railroad depot, under S. W. Beverly, has resigned his position to take up another line of work.

Hon. J. G. Tomlin and John L. Vest spent part of last week in Warsaw relative to some of their law cases that will come up in the Gallatin circuit court in July.

Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Atwood and two sons, of Alpine, Texas, arrived here last Thursday on a visit to her parents, Dr. and Mrs. D. M. Bagby, and expect to remain several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. George Nicholson, of South Walton, entertained with a social on Tuesday evening, May 4th, in honor of their neice, Miss Virginia May Nicholson, of Dinmore Park, Latonia.

Walton High School base ball team will give an ice cream supper next Saturday evening, the proceeds to be used to purchase the new uniforms, which have been ordered. This is the best team that has represented Walton in several years, and deserves the support of the people of the town.

The Knights of Pythias had a most enjoyable meeting at their castle last Thursday night, and following the business session, ice cream and cake were served, and after all had partaken to the extent of their desires, there being lots left, each member took a cooling portion home to his better half. The members present resolved to have a similar social function and refreshments in the near future, and want the absent brothers to all be present to enjoy it.

A VERY BUSY MAN.

J. C. Byland spent part of last week in Cincinnati on business. Mr. Byland is the cashier of the Richwood Deposit Bank, and is also State agent for a life insurance company, and consequently can only give a part of his time to the bank, which, however, is most ably managed by his son, Raymond Byland, who resides here, but is at Richwood bright and early every morning to attend to the duties of cashier, and is virtually the cashier. He is a splendid young man and manages his bank in a first class manner and to the satisfaction of the general public.

THAT TRACTION ROAD AGAIN.

S. M. Billiter, W. T. S. Blackburn, of Dry Ridge; Geo. W. Sleet, of Crittenden, and A. P. McMillan, E. C. McMillan and Perry Simpson, of Williamstown, were here last Thursday in the interest of the proposed traction line from Lexington to Cincinnati, passing through this territory. Mr. Blackburn, who is at the head of the enterprise, states that the enterprise is receiving much encouragement and that the road will be built. The party were here in Mr. Blackburn's automobile, and accompanied by Samuel C. Hicks, went to Big Bone Springs to talk up the project.

A GOOD SHOW.

Colorado Grant's Georgia Minstrels showed here last Wednesday night to a large audience, who were highly pleased with the very entertaining performance, the singing and dancing being particularly good. The troupe consists of about thirty people, and travels in a Pullman car especially built for the purpose, and the show is given in a large tent capable of seating about 1000 people. The members of the troupe performing on the stage are negroes, who are familiar with the old time darkey sayings, and it is a genuine minstrel show with all of the old time entertaining features, which they present to the public in a laughable manner. The music is a splendid feature and the brass band with its showy uniform is a drawing card. Mr. Grant resides at Sparta, where he owns a large tract of land. He toured the country last year with his Wild West show, but concluded to try the minstrel feature this year and started on the season two weeks ago, and the show has been praised everywhere it has visited. The show left Thursday on the southern railroad for a tour through Kentucky and Tennessee. Mr. Grant and his wife manage the show and they are excellent people and universally popular with the public.

The regular yearly open session of the Philomatheon Society of the High School will be held at the school hall Friday night, May 14th. Following is the program: Society called to order by president; declamation—Ben Stansifer; Music—Tom Hughes; recitation—Blanch Kennedy—vocal solo—Lena Tanner; essay—Raymond McMillian; Letter of Futurity—Hannah Hearn; duet—Sara and Rachel Conner; recitation—Sara Gaines; debate: Resolved, That Wars Have Advanced Civilization Rather Than Hindered It. The annual commencement exercises of the Walton High School will be held in the school chapel Friday night, May 21st. The largest number of pupils of any class within the history of the school will graduate on this occasion, there being eleven in number, who, with their subjects are as follows: Omer Cleek, Class Historian. Mabelle Margaret Powers, subject, "Life," Robert Coffman, Class Poet. Adda Mae Conner, "What Flowers say to us." Harry Dahling, "What the Class of '09 will be pleased to remember." Sara Conner, "Ancient Music." Rachael Conner, "Modern Music." Clifford Rouse, "Defense of Our Classics." Robert Rouse, "Class Will." Elizabeth Bedinger, "Class Prophesy." Hannah Hearne, Class Valedictorian. Motto of Class: "Non Palma Sine Labore." Class colors: Crimson and Gold. Class Flower: American Beauty Rose. The work in the school has been very successful this year and the entire corps of teachers and the pupils deserve praise for their conscientious, earnest, harmonious work. The Baccalaureate Sermon will be delivered by Rev. J. B. Harris at the Walton Baptist church, Sunday evening, May 16th, at 7:30 p. m., to which all are most cordially invited. There will be special singing by the school, and a discourse by Bro. Harris is always pleasing and instructive, so there will no doubt be a good attendance.

A LIVELY MEETING.

The last session of the "City Fathers" was rather a stormy one, and to the spectator it resembled a session of congress during an exciting debate over the pending tariff bill. The occasion of the tumult was the proposition on the part of the city council to pass an ordinance increasing the present rate of taxation for city purposes from 20 cents advalorem to 50 cents advalorem and to levy a poll tax of $1 per capita. The object of the increased rate is to produce sufficient funds with which to improve the main streets by spreading crushed stone and screenings on the road bed and after rolling the surface to cover the same with liquid asphalt or crude petroleum to keep down the dust during the hot, summer months. Part of the fund is also to build some new cisterns for a water supply in parts of the town where there are no public cisterns. There was a large attendance of citizens who came to argue the proposition, pro and con, and as it was an "open session" everybody had a chance to have a "say" and it was a sure enough say, some dealing in oratorical flights and others depicting the injustice to the tax payer. It was a late hour before the session concluded, but the storm is still with us, as the council passed the ordinance levying a poll tax of $1 and a fifty cent advalorem tax on each $100 worth of property to be divided as follows: 11 cents for general expenses; 21 cents for improvement of Pike street, which belongs to the Covington and Lexington Turnpike, and there is a "kick" about that; 11 cents for the improvement of Main, High and Botts streets, and 7 cents for cisterns. The ordinance was passed May 3d, and the taxes are due May 24th, 1909, and a six per cent. penalty is to be added as costs on all who fail to pay by that time. One can imagine what a delightful position a member of the council occupies, who is cussed if he does, and cussed if he don't, and is an object of a general boycott if he should be in business. The opinion as to the wisdom of the measure is considerably divided, but it seems as if the most of the heavy property owners favor the proposition.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.

CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by Since pikes have been built in Verona, the town is growing so rapidly that even the veterans of the town get lost on Maine street. Mrs. James Cummins had this dire misfortune one day last week. Automobiles are seen quite frequently spinning through the town, and we see visions of aeroplanes, street cars and traction lines running through our town in the near future.

The Belleview ball club went to Vevay, yesterday, to play two games with the club there. Our club has several new players this year.

Last Saturday evening about dark Cyrus Kelly, was trying to cross Middle creek with a horse and buggy. The creek being swollen by the rain a few hours before, caused the horse to lose its footing and horse, buggy and driver were swept down the turbid stream. Mr. Kelly managed to extricate himself from the vehicle and reached the bank, where he caught a bush and held on for a few minutes to rest, as he was in an exhausted condition. The horse with the buggy meanwhile reached the bank 100 yards or so below, and came out and came in a trot back up the road to the ford, where it made another attempt to reach the "home side" of the creek, and was again carried several hundred yards further down stream and came out at the road near Joe Stephen's place. It was preparing to try again to cross, when it was caught by Mr. Kelly, who had gotten out of the creek and reached the road. Mr. Kelly was completely exhausted by the accident and spent the night in a vacant house near the ford. What a convincing argument for a bridge at that point.

The plays to be given by the Erlanger Dramatic Co., at Burlington, next Saturday night, have been given a number of times in and around Cincinnati, and have been very suceessful. Tommy's Wife, given by this company at Erlanger, was very popular. Be sure and see them if you want to spend a joliy evening.

Dogs made a raid on Geo. Blyth's flock of sheep, last Saturday night. The sheep were in a pasture near the house, and Mr. Blyth hearing the noise, appeared on the scene with a gun and took a crack at one of the dogs as it was going over the fence, leaving the pasture, but it did not have the desired effect. Two sheep were considerably mangled.

Shortly afternoon, last Saturday, lightning struck the farmers' telephone line that comes into Kelly & Roberts' store off of the Belleview pike, and so nearly was that so alarmed the several persons in the store that they climbed over eachother in their frantic efforts to get out of the room. No damage, other than putting the phone out of business, resulted. Ed Burres, was coming into town on the pike when the telephone wire was struck, and says that the electric current's passing the insulators on the several poles sounded like a volley of musketry.

Attys. Graziana and Boughner, of Covington, were in Burlington, last Monday, representing James H. Hastings in a tax matter in the county court. When Mr. Hastings divided his real estate among his three children, he reserved a lien in each deed to secure an annual annuity equal to six per cent on $5,000 and on each of these $5,000 amount the State Revenue agent has filed a claim against Mr. Hastings for several years' back taxes. After the evidence was heard, and the arguments by counsel was made, the case was submitted and counsel given ten days in which to file briefs.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY.

"BLACKMAIL" AND "PIRACY."

When waiters neglect early comers to pay assiduous attention to late arrivals who have given them tips, they perpetrate a disgraceful injustice well worthy of punishment as a misdemeanor, says the Milwaukee Wisconsin. The United States is a republic. In a republic distinctions between the rich and poor are especially invidious. Distinctions between persons who tip and persons who refrain from tipping are not only invidious, but constitute a species of blackmail, and blackmail is certainly a misdemeanor, if indeed it is not a crime. The object of all good laws is to enforce justice. Is there any justice in a conspiracy among waiters to neglect those of their employers' patrons who are unwilling or unable to pay more than the established and current price for what they order? Is the conspiracy any less a conspiracy if the employer of the waiters is a party to it, as is sometimes the case? A corporation or an individual engaged in catering to the public in any capacity who sets a price on meals or on anything else in which he deals, and then permits his employes to exact tips, and to discriminate against those of his customers who do not give tips, is not only disloyal to his patrons, but an enemy of the public and deserving of punishment. His employes who exact tips, and give grudging service if the tips are not paid, are also enemies of the public.

The United States life-saving service is little heard of, especially in inland states, yet its work, for the amount of expense, produces wonderful results. The report for 1908, just to hand, contains some interesting facts. Of 1,094 vessels wrecked in American waters 56 were a total loss. The entire property value at stake was $13,630,225. The life-saving service snatched back from the waves $12,666,435. On board the imperiled vessels were 5,712 human beings. At the usual valuation of an average of $4,000, the life savers, who rescued all but 22 of these people, preserved to the nation human energy worth $22,760,000. A total of $34,426,435 return from an expense of $1,962,524.90, the entire outlay of the department. This seems to be one instance at least in which government insurance is a conspicuous success.

"A woman's sphere is to keep house," the masculine conservative growls, whereat the suffragette pouts and protests. Yet both may be right. Much depends on the breadth of the term. The trouble is the suffragette and the anti-suffragette seem to imply that housekeeping is not much of a job. As a matter of fact, it is the biggest in creation, when measured by any true standard of values. It is really the one and only universal, indispensable trade, as necessary in China as in America, among the Esquimos as among the Europeans, in the cave as well as in the palace, beneath the thatch no less than beneath the tile. And it is the oldest, beginning as it did when Eve gave Adam his first breakfast and the morning stars warbled the first song.

The equal-suffragists may consider New England as practically lost to the cause, since a prominent one of their number sarcastically told the Pilgrim Mothers that from the tens of thousands she has met in the United States whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower, she was led to believe that vessel the size of the Lusitania, or a whole fleet of modern steamers. Now there is a coldness in the cause.

For the second time within a couple of weeks, the American bluejacket has distinguished himself. A fire broke out in a Philadelphia tenement on Friday; a man climbed the rainspout to the second story and helped five persons to safety. On his cap was the name of the battleship Kearsarge, but he refused to give his own name. His modesty gave the finishing touch to a brave deed.

There is always a day of settlement for countries where fanatical mobs or murderous soldiers are permitted to run loose. China learned that lesson when it met the bill for damages to foreigners by the Boxers. Turkey and Persia will be on the collector's route when the mischief wrought by bloody-minded Moslems and fierce Turcomans has to be paid for.

BARES TURKS' PLOT

AMERICAN MISSIONARY SAYS ABDUL'S GOVERNMENT PLANNED THE ADANA MASSACRE.

RAPS AMERICAN TARDINESS

Declares United States Subjects Had to Depend on British Consul for Aid—Forty-five Mutiny Leaders Arrested at Salonika.

Boston.—That the recent massacre at Adana, Asiatic Turkey, was deliberately planned by the Turkish government under Abdul Hamid, is the belief expressed in a letter to the American Board of Foreign Missions, from Rev. Stephen Van R. Trowbridge, one of the missionaries in the district where many were killed.

The letter from Trowbridge, dated April 23 and sent by way of Constantinople, has just reached the American board, and it gives some particulars of the recent massacres not hitherto made known in this country.

Briefly describing the funeral of American Missionaries Maurer and Rogers, who were killed during the disorders, Mr. Trowbridge writes:

"The burial took place on Friday evening, the 16th of April. With the city in terrible disorder and scores of conflagrations raging, it was impossible to take the bodies out to the cemetery. The graves were dug side by side at the edge of the girl's school yard and services were conducted by Mr. Macallum and Mr. Trowbridge.

Mr. Trowbridge criticises the American government in the following paragraph of his letter:

"All regret the tardiness of the American government in meeting the crisis. A week and three days have passed and yet not a word from the embassy. Were it not for the untiring efforts of the British consul, Maj. Doughty-Wylie, whose right arm is broken from a bullet, we could neither send letters nor telegrams."

Erzeroum, Asiatic Turkey.—Forty-five leaders of the mutiny here have been arrested on orders issued by Field Harshal Ibraham Pasha, commander of the Fourth army corps.

There is great uneasiness among the population of this city on account of the threatening attitude of the garrison, which has refused to accept 52 officers belonging to the Young Turk party. Djelal Pasha has gone to Constantinople to report on the situation.

Alexandretta, Asiatic Turkey.—The United States revenue cutter Tahoma arrived at this port Thursday for the protection of American interests. The Tahoma is the first American ship to appear in Turkish waters since the beginning of the massacres and disorders in Asiatic Turkey.

Cologne.—The Koelnische Zeitung published a dispatch from Saloniki saying that the Young Turk officers at Erzeroun, Asiatic Turkey, have sent a telegram to the local officers of the committee of union and progress declaring that their soldiers are refusing obedience and demanding the restoration of the Sheriat, and at the same time threatening a general massacre.

The message begs Schefket Pasha to send representatives to quiet the troops and the people, and concludes with the statement that the Young Turk officers do not dare to show themselves abroad.

Marash, Asiatic Turkey.—Distressing accounts continue to be received here from the country side of Armenian villages assailed by bands of Mohammedans, who, acting on the supposition that the Armenians were rising against the government, were quick to strike the first blow. The men were killed whenever found within reach of knife or bullet. The girls were often maltreated, and some of them were carried off to become the wives or slaves of rich men.

Houses were sacked and then burned, farm animals were driven off, and small parties of horsemen rode through the country "cleaning up the Armenians." The entire population of Bechkeny, 2,000 souls, moved to the Zeitoon region for safety.

Children See Three Drown.

Pittsburg, Pa.—To save five cents bridge toll, five foreigners, who had been out of work for many months attempted to cross the Monongahela river at McKeesport, a suburb, in a small boat, which sank as they got into midstream, drowning three of men. Five hundred school-children enjoying their first day's diversion in a new playground, saw them drown.

Ten bodies had been recovered when the search was abandoned at dark Wednesday night for the victims of Tuesday night's ferryboat accident

HITS AMERICAN BEEF TRUST

ENGLISH REPORT POINTS OUT DANGER OF MONOPOLY.

Armours, Swifts, Morris' and Hammond Companies Are Named—Testimony Is Doubted.

London. — The departmental committee appointed in July of 1908 to inquire into the alleged combinations in the meat trade in the United Kingdom devotes a large portion of its report to the American beef trust and its representatives in London.

The committee concludes that while a combination exists to a certain extent between four companies in the United States, engaged in the United Kingdom, it is not at present sufficiently powerful seriously to endanger the beef trade as a whole. But should these firms, as seems possible, acquire considerable interest in the Argentine situation with regard to the meat supply of the United Kingdom might become serious.

"With such command," the report says, "of practically the whole imported live cattle and chilled and frozen beef trade, the firms composing such combination might be able to determine beef prices at Smithfield market itself and largely affect prices throughout the country."

According to the report, the representatives of the American companies in London all told the committee that they knew nothing of the conditions prevalent in the United States and, commenting on these statements, the committee says:

"The committee reluctantly is compelled to express grave doubt as to the reality of this uniform ignorance, and its assumption naturally has tended to throw doubt upon the other statements made by the representatives of these firms. It is almost incredible that Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Morris & Co., and the Hammond Beef Company, the last-named representing the National Packing Company, should be in combination in the United States and in competition in the United Kingdom."

The committee failed to find evidence of any deliberate action on the part of the Americans with the object of destroying inconvenient rivals, and it does not think that they have yet attempted to capture or control the whole beef trade in this country, as alleged. At the same time it is satisfied that the firms mentioned consult together with regard to prices and the amount of the supplies to be put on the market, and they fix the prices at which chilled beef shall be sold in the provinces, and furthermore, that provincial salesmen are practically bound to sell at the price daily dictated by the Americans.

TAFT REBUKES GOVERNOR.

Stubbs of Kansas Feels Presidential Wrath—Man He Had Appointed Will Not Get Job.

Washington.—President Taft administered a severe rebuke to Gov. Stubbs of Kansas and at the same time served warning to politicians that he did not purpose to be used to promote the causes of contending political factions.

The president at the same time announced the withdrawal of the appointment of Robert Stone of Topeka to be assistant attorney in the department of justice.

Stubbs is making a hot fight for the senate against Senator Curtis. When Stubbs got back to Kansas he announced that the president had appointed Stone as a personal favor to him and that Senator Curtis, Mr. Anthony and other members of the Kansas delegation did not cut much figure at Washington.

BLOODHOUNDS ON TRAIL.

Charles Caldwell in Jail Following His Attentions to Elizabethtown (Ind.) Girl.

Columbus, Ind.—Charles W. Caldwell, a lawyer who sought to oust Philander C. Knox, secretary of state, from President Taft's cabinet, is in custody here awaiting investigation of a serious charge. Caldwell was found in his office, after bloodhounds and armed men had sought him at Elizabethtown, Caldwell is married, and he is accused by A. M. Remy of Elizabethtown of making secret visits to his 16-year-old daughter, Belah Remy. He pleaded not guilty to both charges and his bond was fixed at $300. He was unable to give bond and was taken back to jail.

The Remy girl was closely questioned by Sheriff Cox and others. She admitted being in love with Caldwell and told a straight story of Caldwell's attentions. She said he sent her clandestine notes and gifts and had visited her since last March. She was firm in her denial, however, of any wrongdoing and said that he was just so good to her she could not help loving him. She showed a diamond ring, several pieces of jewelry, books, music and other gifts made to her by Caldwell.

HAIR "RAT" SAVES TWO.

Mother and Baby Escape Death in Auto Accident When Padding Acts as Buffer.

Jackson, Mich.—A large "rat" in her hair saved the life of Mrs. Richard Frost, in an automobile accident Thursday, her physicians say. Mrs. Frost and her baby were both thrown from the machine when it collided with a telephone pole and Mrs. Frost struck on her head with such force that hair pins were driven into her scalp.

At the hospital the surgeons who attended her said the "rat" saved her head being crushed. The baby was injured about the head, and it is feared both mother and child were also internally injured.

Richard Frost, the husband and father, was driving the automobile when the accident happened.

LEAVES PRISON AT 71.

James Saunders Pardoned by Iowa Governor Set Free—Has Saved $1,800 Pension Money.

Fort Madison, Ia.—James R. Saunders, alias William B. Glyndon, was released from the penitentiary by pardon of the governor Thursday, after serving 31 years for the alleged murder of a 14-year-old girl in Grundy county.

Saunders served a longer term than any other man ever sent to the prison and is now hale and hearty at 71 years. He was a sharp-shooter in an Ohio regiment in the civil war and was granted a soldier's pension since his incarceration, during which time he saved $1,800.

He came of a prominent eastern Ohio family and has all these years hidden his family name.

Long Race with Death.

New York. — Racing with death, which the physicians have assured him is inevitable, Alexis Laudent is attempting, with a broken back, to make the trip from Birmingham, Ala., to Moscow, Russia. His parents reside in Russia, and it is due to an overweening desire to see them that he has undertaken the remarkable journey. Laudent was injured in an accident in an Alabama mine several weeks ago. He will rest in a Jersey City hospital there and will then sail for home.

New York.—Max Alheim, a baker of east New York, who did not close his bakery when the bakers recently went out on strike, was dragged from his bed by strike sympathizers and thrown into a vat of dough.

FIVE DIE; 55 HURT IN STORMS

TORNADOES HIT KANSAS, MISSOURI AND OKLAHOMA.

Complete Reports May Increase Number of Dead—Train Plunges Into River.

Kansas City, Mo. — A series of tornadoes in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma Friday evening killed at least five, injured 55, devastated one town, wrecked a train and did great damage to property.

Twenty-five were injured by a storm that swept over Mount Washington and Fairmount Park, suburbs of Kansas City. At least two of these are thought to be fatally injured and others seriously.

The town of Hollis, Kan., near Concordia, was swept away. Here three were killed and ten seriously injured.

The dead are Fred Jeardoe, John Cyre and George Eckert.

The Eckstrom family, consisting of five persons, is missing. Their house is laid in ruins and it is thought they are dead.

Near Great Bend a tornado killed two and injured 20. All wires are down in that vicinity and it is feared that the death list may be greater.

William Ackerly, a Santa Fe engineer, was killed while working with a bridge gang between Great Bend and Kinsley. Frank Nicholson, a conductor, was also killed. The tornado wrecked the work train of which Ackerly was engineer and blew it into a ditch.

The storm spread over a wide area, however, laid waste many farm houses and injured many whose names could not be obtained. On account of a great portion of the damage done on farms its full extent could not be learned. Many conflicting reports have been received. One had ten killed.

At Hoisington, Kan., a tornado injured and greatly damaged farm property. It was not so severe, however, as that passing over other portions of the state.

Wabash passenger train No. 9 ran through a bridge that had been weakened by a flood into Bull creek, near Randolph. The engine, baggage and mail cars fell into the water. A telephone message from Randolph said several trainmen were missing but that no bodies had been found.

TWENTY BLOWN TO ATOMS

Half Ton of Dynamite Explodes in New York State with Fatal Results.

Albany, N. Y.—The explosion of half a ton of dynamite in the stone quarry of the Callanan Road Improvement Company at South Bethlehem near Albany, Wednesday, blew to atoms the bodies of 20 workmen.

One thousand pounds of dynamite exploded, and the bodies of the victims were hurled hundreds of feet by the concussion and so badly mutilated as to be almost beyond recognition. As darkness was falling a wagon drew up to the engine house loaded with bodies that had been picked up back on the quarry hill. A crowd of grief-stricken relatives gathered around eager to identify the dead only to turn away at the sickening sight.

Italians with shovels found here and there portions of bodies and brought their gruesome loads in boxes to the engine house which served as a temporary morgue.

JURY FINDS HAINS GUILTY.

Army Officer Convicted of Slaying Annis—Verdict is for First Degree Manslaughter.

Flushing, L. I.—Capt. Peter C. Hains, U. S. A., charged with the murder of William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht club on the afternoon of August 15, 1908, was found guilty of manslaughter in the first degree by the jury in the case Tuesday.

The jury had been out two hours and 45 minutes, when the members filed back into the courtroom, crowded with spectators, and rendered the verdict, which was received by some in the nature of a surprise.

Immediately after the jury rendered its findings the captain was remanded to the custody of the sheriff until Monday, when he is to be sentenced by the court.

ARREST IOWA TEACHERS.

Des Moines School Ma'ams Held to Answer Charge of Cruelty to a Boy.

Des Moines, Ia.—Miss Maud Ewing and Miss Ida May Tilden, teachers in the Longfellow school here, were arrested Thursday, charged with having beaten nine-year-old David Kaplain until he was black and blue.

At a trial before Police Judge Stewart behind closed doors the teachers pleaded not guilty.

The teachers accused the little boy of stealing a five-dollar bill from Miss Tilden. When he denied the charge, he says they laid him over a chair and beat him with switches and pinched his cheeks and body.

Sergeant Given Medal.

Dunkirk, Ind.—The war department at Washington has awarded to Amos Weaver of this city a medal for conspicuous bravery in the Philippines. Weaver on November 5, 1899, alone routed a band of 15 insurgents, killing four and wounding several others.

Postmaster's Son Drowns.

Lacon, Ill.—George Sherburn, the nine-year-old son of Assistant Postmaster Marion Sherburn, was drowned by falling off the pontoon bridge Thursday.

Hunting the Dangerous African Buffalo

By H. A. Bryden

H. A. Bryden, the co-author with Percy Selous of "Travel and Big Game," is a man who was born to the chase. From his youth it has been his ruling passion and he has gone with his rifle all over the world. In every continent his fame as a Nimrod is known, and he has a modest direct style of presenting his adventures, tinged with a little touch of poetic sentiment here and there, which is very pleasing indeed. If any fault at all could be found with him it would be that he was overmodest and inclined to boast for others instead of telling his own story.

An incident highly indicative of the extraordinarily dangerous character of the African buffalo is related by Mr. Ainsley Williams, the gentleman scout of the famous Niger water-shed exploring party.

I had missed him from his accustomed stations and on his reappearance he was generally bandaged up and one leg was in splints. It appears that one late afternoon when the shadows in the brush were growing to the point of almost complete darkness though the sun still illuminated the tops of the trees, he was returning to camp alone save for a Senegambian gun bearer noted for his bravery. Both were mounted on native ponies, wiry and keen of senses. Suddenly Williams' pony began to snuffle and snort and both stood stock still refusing to advance into the darkness of the foliage-arched trail. Williams quickly unslung a double barrelled ten gauge Parker with which he had been after fowl. He meant to slip in a buck shot cartridge, but before he more than had his gun across his pommel, with a grunting hellow the huge form of an old bull buffalo rushed out of the darkness ahead and charged the two with all ferocity.

It was impossible to turn out of his way and all that Williams could do was to lean forward and pull both barrels point blank. The massive horns and frontal bones must have shielded the beast from any injury, save enough to infuriate it more than ever. The next instant Williams' pony was disemboweled with a side swipe of the bull's horns and the rider was pitched into the brush with a broken leg. On over the dying pony rushed the buffalo and his charge drove the second pony end over end on top of his Senegambian rider. The two rifles he carried flew into the brush and one fell near Williams. It was the Winchester forty-four. Williams dragged himself over to it and found it uninjured, but a tragedy was transpiring meanwhile. Giving the poor gun bearer no chance for his life, the bull swept first one tip of his mighty horns and then the other into the jumble of horse and man and in his blind fury knelt on them and stamped on them. Th's happened in the fraction of a minute of course, and was terminated only when Williams, mustering all his strength, rose to his knees and began pumping soft-nosed pellets into the bull's flank, raking him forward into vital parts. The murderous creature fell on top of his victims and when searchers attracted by Williams' cries, found them, horse, bull and Senegambian lay dead in one heap.

Most Dangerous Game in Africa.

It is agreed upon all hands by experienced hunters in Africa that the buffalo is one of the three most dangerous four-footed foes that man can attack. Most men class this animal with elephants and lions, as game that requires the highest attributes of skill courage and caution to bring to bag. As a matter of fact, it may be laid down that more deaths and dangerous accidents happen annually in Africa in hunting the buffalo than in the chase of any other species of heavy game. In regions where large numbers of these splendid beasts still wander, in troops of three hundred, four hundred and even more, and where they have been little disturbed, the hunter has no great difficulty in shooting as many as he requires. In fairly open country, where scattered covert exists, and where they can be readily approached—for they are by no means keen-sighted creatures—a man may, he begins to think, shoot buffaloes as easily as he can shoot oxen. But, directly a buffalo is wounded and his blood-spoor has to be taken up, and the hunter has to follow him into the dense coverts to which he retreats, the business is entirely changed. Then you may prepare to look out for yourself, to take up your heaviest and most reliable weapon, and to follow the track of your game with every sense alert, and your rifle handy for an instant and most deadly cuarge.

You will find, too, that the native spoorer, who trotted in front of you readily enough on the blood spoor of elephant, and even lion, will now greatly prefer to follow in your rear, and leave you to take up your own person the first and dangerous risk in the dark and shadowy thickets into which you are advancing. He knows—none better—the dark, evil fury and the lurking, noiseless ways of the beast of which you are in search. The buffalo, so soon as he is wounded, seems, indeed, to think of little else than a bloody revenge. Unlike most other game, which, when wounded, will almost invariably betake themselves in flight as far from the pursuer as possible, he usually retreats some distance into the densest hush, and then either hides up in some dark corner, where the shadows are deep and dense, or, turning upon his line, takes a parallel path back, and so waits for his foe; or he will even follow back upon his own spoor and conceal himself. Sometimes he will stand lurking amid the dark thickets; at another time, if badly wounded, he will lie down; in either case prepared and determined to inflict a bloody revenge for the hurts under which he is smarting. Year after year fatal accidents happon in South African buffalo hunting, year after year men, if not killed outright, are terribly mauled; and, until the buffalo is completely exterminated, he will be found as savage and as dangerous as the lion himself, and, withal, far more revengeful.

Stalking a Buffalo Herd.

I cannot better illustrate the character of these determined and plucky animals than by an adventure narrated to me not long since in the hunting veldt by a Boer hunter from the Transvaal. He had been tracking with some other compatriots far to the northwest of Lake Ngami. Flesh was badly wanted in camp, and as tsetse fly was prevalent in the marshy country, north of the Okanango river, on which they were outspanned, and the natives reported large herds of buffaloes, he left his horses behind him, ferried across the river, and spent the next two days in hunting. He had with him his own Hottentot servant, a good and reliable hunter, and a fair shot, and he had as well several natives of the district who were anxious for meat, and ready to show him the game.

On the first day the Dutchman came across some fifty buffaloes grazing in fairly open veldt. Getting behind some good and convenient covert, and with the wind in the right direction, he had little difficulty in shooting two fat cows and a young, fresh hull. The cows were pretty easily secured; but the young hull, although shot through the lungs, jumped on his legs from some long grass and hush, then walked up, charged fiercely at the spooring party, and was only killed within a few feet of the hunter. The rest of the day was spent in skinning and cutting up the game. Part of the natives were sent back to the Boer camp, laden with as much meat as they could carry—the Boers requiring not only fresh meat for immediate use but enough to make a supply of "hiltong" (salted sun-dried flesh); the remainder of the flesh was bestowed upon the native villagers who were with the expedition.

Large numbers of buffaloes were still reported a little further ahead, among the lagoons and marshes of this region, and the Dutch hunter, therefore camped for the night, ate a hearty supper by the roaring fire, and slept soundly till early dawn. Before sun-up the party were again stirring. In less than two hours' time the natives had led the way to a broad, marshy lagoon, or "viel," as the Boers call it, surrounded by drier ground, upon which grew hush, acacia trees, and a few tall palms. Part of this lagoon was shallow open water, the remainder consists of a dense hed of tall reeds, which led to further swamps and lagoons beyond. The sight that met the Dutchman's eyes, as he and the natives crept cautiously towards the edge of the "viel," and surveyed the scene from behind a screen of hush, was a wonderful one. In and about the "viel," stood a troop of not less than two hundred buffaloes, some rolling in the shallow, some drinking, some standing belly-deep in water, dark and motionless. The buffalo birds (a species of starling-Buphaya Africana) those watchful allies of these animals and rhinoceroses, were flying hither and thither, many of them packing and feeding on the ticks and parasites which infest the buffalo. A number of small white herons, too, were about the "viel," some of which were also to he seen actually perching on the broad backs of the great game. In any case the stalk required caution, and, with these watchful "huffel-vogel" about, extreme care was, as the Boer saw, essential. Concealed behind a thick mass of hush, to which he and the Hottentot had crept, the Dutchman waited patiently till the troop moved and a fair shot offered.

Attacked by an Enraged Buffalo.

At last several fat cows, for which he had been waiting came, togcther with a tremendous old hull, within 30 yards. Selecting the best cow, the Boer aimed behind the point of the shoulder, and brought her down. She fell instantly to the shot, struggled a little further, and soon lay dead. The Boer had hoped and expected to bring down another cow. His intentions were frustrated, however, by the hull, which charged upon the instant directly towards the rifle smoke. Within ten yards, the Dutchman, who was kneeling, fired again, hitting the grim beast in front of the chest, and turning it. Meanwhile, at the sound of the firing the whole immense herd floundered out of the "viel," and went off crashing through an angle of the reed beds, and thence far into the hush. As they fled the Boer shoved in another cartridge, took aim at a retreating cow eighty yards off, and by a lucky shot, broke her back. She fell hellowing, and was quickly dispatched. Leaving the natives to skin and cut up these carcasses, the Dutchman now took up the pursuit of the wounded hull, which he had marked in his flight through a dense patch of reeds to the light of the lagoon. The beast had turned of alone, and the greatest care had to be taken in following it through such covert. But the Dutchman had hitherto always had great luck with buffalo, and was determined to finish off his task. As soon as the reeds were reached, the hlood spoor was easily to be followed. The heavy bullet had evidently raked the lungs, the hull was hleeding freely, and large patches of crimson marked its path. The reeds were very tall—twelve or fourteen feet—and thick, and the spooring seemed so dangerous an operation that the Hottentot, who was carrying a second gun—a Martini Henry—fell behind, leaving his master to take the first risk with his heavy eight-bore. At every step—they were wading knee deep in water—the hunters stopped to listen. They had not penetrated fifty yards through the avenue of broken reeds, afforded by the passage of the hull, when in an instant, and without warning, the beast was upon them. The Boer was knocked flat upon his hack by the charge; the bull had miscalculated his distance, had no douht, charged for the sound, and had struck his nemy with his nose, which was held high, as is the hahit of these hrutes when charging. Galloping over the prostrate Boer, the Buffalo went straight for the Hottentot a few paces hehind. This unfortunate the hrute struck with his horn and tossed on one side some yards into the reeds. Then, continuing its career, the hull passed on out of the "viel" and took shelter in some thin hush, where it was afterward found dead. The Boer, all the wind knocked out of him, and severely hruised, picked himself up, retrieved his rifle, which was flung yards away, and then sought the Hottentot. The unfortunate servant lay among the reeds and water, a terrible wound gaping just helow his chest, to the left—hreathing his last. He lived only a short time, and died a pathetic and unwilling object lesson in the risks and dangers of following a wounded buffalo into thick covert.

Some Perils of Buffalo-Hunting.

Occasionally hunters have been attacked by a solitary buffalo which has charged them hefore a shot has been fired, and without apparent provocation. In such instances it has usually been found either that the animal had been previously wounded by some other hunter, or had been clawed by a lion; in either case its naturally morose temper having been rendered yet more dangerous.

No hunter ought to attempt to tackle a buffalo with a rifle of lighter calihre than a 577 douhle express.

Once plentiful all over Southern Africa wherever water was to be found, the buffalo has now to be sought far in the interior. There is one singular exception to this statement. Many years ago the Cape government passed an act protecting under severe penalties the buffalo—as well as the elephant—in Cape colony, in the forest and deusely hushed regions bordering the coast line, some strong troops of buffaloes are still to be found hetween Mossel hay and the Kowie river. A few years ago, during a great drought, some of these fine heasts were to be seen drinking in the river within a few miles of the town of Ultenhage. These animals can only be shot in Cape colony by a special permit from the governor, and on payment of the sum of ten pounds for each specimen obtained. Beyond Cape colony the sportsman has to travel nowadays several hundred miles before he can hope to find buffalo. Perhaps the hest country existing at the present time is the low and unhealthy region lying in Portuguese territory between the Sabi and Zambesi. Upon the Busi and Pungue rivers and their tributaries, and from the tributaries of the Zambesi, on its easterly course, large herds of buffalo are still to be found. This country, however, is only accessible during the African winter—April to October—unless the risk of deadly fever be taken. There are still buffalo to be found, to, about the Chobe river, in the far-off swamps and marshes of the Upper Okavango. In these regions the tsetse fly is certain to be found in the buffaloes' haunt, and the hunter must perforce do all his work on foot.

As the African buffalo is one of the toughest and most difficult of all game animals to bring to hag, so that handsome creature, Burchell's zebra (Equus Burchelli), the zehra of the plains, is by far the most easily destroyed. A single 450 Express or Martini-Henry bullet will at once turn this fleet and handsome animal of the troop, an easy victim (if not a ealy killed outright) to the hunter's next shot. With a broken leg the zebra is instantly helpless; with a broken limh, and a shot through the body to boot, one of the larger African antelopes, such as a harteheest or hrindled gnu, will often run for miles, and finally escape the hunter altogether. As an almost invariable rule Burchell's zehras are hunted on horseback; they are fleet and enduring, and even a first-class South African hunting pony must be in very good form, and upon hard even ground, to carry his rider within hail of them. Most usually these animals are to he met with feeding on open grassy plains, or in open hush, where large glades and clearings are to be found. In a tail-on end chase across flats, with a fair start, they can usually gallop clean away from the mounted man. If it were not for a hahit of curiosity, they would, indeed, he "kittle cattle" to come up with on the great plains. But their curiosity is often their undoing. I have many times galloped steadily behind a troop of these zebras, and then halted for a moment. The zehras would then wheel quickly round in line and stand for a minute to have a good look at the pursuer. This was the time to put in a steady shot. Sometimes, even when the hunter is galloping, they will turn round and stand for a moment, apparently out of sheer curiosity.

Exterminating the African Zebra.

In semi-hushy country, where their view is more circumscribed, these zebras are without much difficulty shot. In Mashonaland large numhers of those zebras have been shot within the last few years by the pioneers and settlers. I have found that hy making a long detour and getting between them and the hush to which they run for shelter, these animals when feeding in the open can he driven about and shot pretty much at will. They seem for the time to become Cursed, lose their heads, try to make short cuts past the mounted men, and so fall victims. In former days these magnificent heasts ran in immense nnmbers in all the open country from the Orange river to the Zamhesi. They are still to he found in large troops in the Ngamiland country, in remoter parts of Mashonaland, and in still larger numhers east and northeast of Mashonaland, toward the coast. Beyond the Zamhesi they are widely distributed in Africa, becoming exceedingly plentiful again upon the great plains between the east coast and Uganda. South of the Orange river they seem seldom, if ever, to have ranged. Burchell's zehra is not to be confounded with the more asinine hlack and white mountain zehra (E Zehra), which is perfectly striped all over. The Burchell's zebra is best known to the British public of all this handsome group good examples heing always on view in the Zcological society's gardens. As a general rule this zebra is not perfectly handed down the legs—as is its mountain cousin—hut a variety, sometimes called hy scientists "Chapman's zehra," is to be found in the interior, with the white legs pretty generally handed as far down as the fetlocks. The average European sportsman, having shot a few of these beautiful creatures as specimens, will usually stay his hand and spare them unless meat for his followers is absolutely needed. The Boer and native hunter, on the contrary, shoot them whenever they get the chance, merely for the price of the skin—a matter of a few shillings up country. And so the species becomes exterminated. It is a thousand pities! Of all sights in the fair veldt—and there are many to charm the eye—I know of few nohler than a good troop of Burchell's zehras, creatures which seem to have been created for no other purpose than to adorn the wilderness. Whether feeding quietly among the herhage; or resting in the heat of mid-day; or fleeting across the plain, their striped coats, as clean and shining as a well-groomed race horse, gleaming in the sunlight; brisk, beautifully proportioned, and full of life and spirits; these zehras represent the highest perfection of feral life. True children of the sun-drenched plains, long may they yet flourish to decorate the African veldt!

Worldly Wisdom.

As there is a worldly happiness which God perceives to he no more than disguised misery; as there are worldly honors which in his estimation are reproach, so there is a worldly wisdom which in his sight is foolishness. Of this worldly wisdom the characters are given in the Scriptures, and placed in contrast with those of the wisdom which is from above. The one is the wisdom of the crafty, the other that of the upright; the one terminates in selfishness, the other in charity; the one is full of strife and bitter envyings, the other of mercy and of good fruits.—Blair

HENRY WATTERSON has served notice that the Courier-Journal will not support Senator McNutt, of Louisville, for reelection, and further that the paper will not support any ticket which has his name on it. Senator McNutt was one of the Democratic State Senators who rendered Senator Bradley's election possible.

WHEN General W. S. Hancock was the Democratic nominee for the presidency in 1880, he declared that the tariff was a local issue, and was laughed at by the wise heads of both parties, but the action of the Democrats in the present congress shows that they believe now as Gen. Hancock did then. Local interests obliterates party lines very quick.

SOME of Burlington's colored population are entirely too scrappy for their own good, and the white people are getting tired of so much fussing among them, and the officers will exert themselves to break up the reign of lawlessness that has been on the increase in Bucktown for several weeks if it takes all summer, and requires the building of an addition to the county bastile.

IN the North Atlantic States farmers raises $984 worth of products from farms averaging 96 acres each. In the South Atlantic States farmers raises only $484 worth of produce on farms averaging 108 acres. The farmer of the North Central States raises $1,074 worth of products on farms averaging 144 acres, while the South Central States farmer raises but $686 worth of produce on farms averaging 155 acres each. These figures are of the last census year.

PROF. YEAGER, president of Georgetown College, has made an announcement that an effort will be made this summer to raise an endowment fund of $100,000 to enlarge the facilities of Georgetown College. Dr. Yeager points out that the smaller colleges are being drained of their best professors by the larger universities, which pay high salaries. He proposes to maintain the high standard of Georgetown College by increasing the salaries which were fixed many years ago.

To the Senators who are earnestly advocated, during the last campaign, experience is demonstrating that it is very much eatier to make promises than it is to fulfill them. Everybody, that is nearly everybody, thought the revision would be downward and its primary purpose to reduce the cost of living, and the profits of the great combinations that have the country in their grasps, but fort the last few weeks the tariff revision so freely promised last fall is proving a delusion, especially in so far as the downward features are concerned.

IT is said of President Taft that he is very much concerned in regard to business conditions of the country that are very unsatisfactory to him. If he can devise a plan by which the band can be prevented from flying off occasionally, he will have to be the most accomplished financier who has occupied the white house, and his efforts will meet with opposition on the part of trusts and combines in many directions, when his plans indicate an infringment on what they have come to consider the vested rights under the laws as they have been administered for many years.

WHEN the new owners equip the Lawrenceburg ferry in the manner they claim they desire, the crossing at that point will at once show a large increase, and so soon as the tide of travel starts in that direction the roads leading to the two ferry landings will be put in shape, that it may be that Boone county people will prove to be from Missouri as regards the contemplated ferry equipment. There is no question but what Lawrenceburg is the natural trading point for a large Boone county territory, and the RECORDER hopes to see at an early date, the ferry improved as contemplated, and the county roads leading thereto put in proper condition. The roads can be put in first-class order with but little expense, and the people who would use them are entitled to that much consideration, and, no doubt, would contribute liberally in one way or another in bringing about the desired result.

The Kentucky Farmer says: "Corn is without question the leading crop of this country, and there is no reason why Kentucky should not be a valuable corn growing State. By careful experiments it has been shown that a field of corn from tested seed will yield one-fourth to one-third larger crop than the ordinary field of corn from untested seed. At any rate, the farmers of Kentucky know that the yield of corn in this State for the last quarter of a century has not been as large as it should have been. This lack of yield was not due to bad soil, or bad cultivation, and we can assign no better cause for it than the use of bad seed."

NOTICE OF Graded Common Election.

Boone County Court.
Regular term 5th day of April, 1909.
Hon. P. E. Cason, Co. Judge Presiding.

In re Petition
for } Order.
Union Graded School.

At the regular term of this court a petition having been filed, signed by James A. Huey and more than ten others, to-wit: Twenty-two (22) others asking that a Graded Common School District be organized with the following boundary, viz: Beginning at Lewis Rouse's, including him; thence straight to Mark B. Judge's, including him; thence straight to Joseph A. Huey's, including him; thence straight to E. C. Garrison's, including him; thence straight to Mrs. J. A. Rogers', including her; thence straight to D. B. Dobbins', including him; thence with the public road to the Frogtown school house, leaving it out; thence straight to the John Glacken house, including it; thence straight to Thos. Marshall's, including him; thence straight to Gunpowder creek, in front of said Marshall's and with the said creek to the iron bridge over said creek; thence straight to Jemima Tanner's, including her; thence straight to Leonard Rouse's, including him; thence straight to Jno. M. Long's, including him; thence straight to C. M. Delph's including him; thence to Lucinda Weaver's, including her; thence straight to M. L. Tanner's, including him; thence straight to J. J. Garrison's tenant house including it; thence straight to N. S. Bristow's, including him; thence straight to the beginning. The foregoing boundary embraces Common School District, No. 35, and parts of Nos. 22, 48, 36, 9 and 51.

It further appearing that the site for the school house of said proposed district is in the town of Union which site is certified to be not exceeding two and one-half miles from any part of the boundary of the said proposed district, and it appearing also that said petitioners are tax-payers, legal voters and residents of the proposed Graded Common School District and of Justice District No. 4 of this county, and, it further appearing that the County Superintendent has endorsed on said petition his approval of same and that a majority of the Trustees of the Common School Districts that will be embraced either in whole or in part in said proposed Graded Common School District, have endorsed their approval on said petition as provided by law, and this court being sufficiently advised, it is ordered by the court that M. F. THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—it will cost you nothing.

What does that mean? Did you ever see it before? It is found on the fourth ridge of every genuine CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLE.

And what are CORTRIGHT METAL SHINGLES? They're a handsome roofing that lasts as long as the building itself and never needs repairs. Think of it—they were put on the market 22 years ago and the roofs put on then are as good as new today. What's more—they're comparatively cheap. Sold by Grand Chief will stand in Burlington on Monday and Thursday of each week instead of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday as announced on the bills.

The Great Imported German Coach Stallion,

Plutarch 3183

Will make the season of 1909 at T. E. Randall's stable, one mile west of Idlewild, Boone County, Ky., on the Burlington and Petersburg Turnpike at

$12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,

money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

BURLINGTON & WATERLOO HORSE CO.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20 00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

HIGH VINE, 2733, foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1867; grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730; Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2882, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1365; second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60; third dam, Maxey by Granger; fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated together and as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and breeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

He has been operating the mill for 24 years, and has cut out frames for hundreds of buildings in the south end of the county.

F. C. Greene returned from Owenton Saturday, where he had been attending a special term of the Owen circuit court, called for the special purpose of trying the boot-leggers who were indicted at the last term of the Owen circuit court. He secured many convictions and when he left the jail was full, and many of those convicted were being worked on the county roads.—Carrollton Democrat.

Indications are that there will be at least a 200 per cent increase in the corn crop in this county this year as compared with the 1908 crop. On many farms where little or no corn was cultivated last year an effort is being made to plant from 20 to 40 acres this spring. Of course this large increase may not hold good on half the farms in the county, but it will be the case in instances enough to bring the per cent of increase up very high.

Under the census bill passed by the United States Senate 2,000 new employes are provided for. Lived 152 Years.

Wm. Parr—England's oldest man—married the third time at 120, worked in the fields till 132 and lived 20 years longer. People should be youthful at 80. James Wright, of Spurlock, Ky., shows how to remain young. "I feel just like a 16 year-old boy," he writes, "after taking six bottles of Electrix Bitters. For thirty years Kidney trouble made life a burden, but the first bottle of this wonderful medicine convinced me I had found the greatest cure on earth." They're a godsend to weak, sickly run down or old people. Try them. 50c at Bentler's drug store Erlanger.

A Convenient Slaughter House.

Since William Kirkpatrick has completed his slaughter house it requires a very short time in which to dress a beef. One day last week the two men who butchered a beef were away from the shop just 40 minutes, in which time was included the time necessary for the men to go to and return from the slaughter house, which is about a quarter of a mile from the shop. He has the house so equipped that one man can kill and dress a large beef without any trouble. Mr. Kirkpatrick will handle ice cream, soda water and all kinds of soft drinks, this summer in connection with his grocery and meat business.

Don't Want the Appropriation.

A few days ago county clerk B. W. Adams received a letter from an attorney-at-law in Washington, D. C., informing him two bills for his benefit had been past by congress, allowing his two claims, one for $10,000 and the other for $1,500, for property confiscated by the United States during the civil war, and requested him to get up certain proof that was necessary before the appropriation for their payment could be made. The information took Mr. Adams off his feet, and as soon as he recovered he wrote the attorney that he was an ex-soldier but entered on the Confederate side; that he entered the war without anything, and came out without anything, and had managed to hold his own these many years, consequently he had no property confiscated and is not trying to collect any claim through congress.

And Still Living.

Here is a good story of the man who was determined to commit suicide: "He went to a store and bought a rope, a can of oil, a box of matches, a dose of arsenic and a revolver. He went down to the river and pushed the boat from the shore and waded to where a limb hung over; saturated his clothing with the coal oil, lighted a match and set fire to his clothing, took a dose of arsenic, put the muzzle of the revolver to his temple, pushed the boat from under him and pulled the trigger. But the bullet glanced and cut the rope above him and he fell kerflop into the river; the water put the fire out and he got strangled and coughed up the arsnic. He arose and waded out and declared himself a candidate for the Legislature on the reform ticket.—Ex.

Chester Park.

The regular season is now on at Chester Park and visitors to Cincinnati, having a few hours to spend, will be making their way out to the great summer resort, which is said to have more amusement and free features than any similar place in America. All street cars give transfers, free, to Chester and the Clark Street, Avondale and Winton Place lines pass the gates. All the C. H. & D., Big Four and C. & O. trains stop almost in front of the main entrance. It is easy to get to Chester from the city and once there one is assured of a good time. There is a free vaudeville show, free band concerts, free illustrated song and moving picture show, free slides, free bumps and innumerable other free devices for the entertainment of the young and old. A popular priced cafe is a new attraction.

Exciting Chase After a Thief.

One morning last week, a strange, hungry dog of the long, lean, lank variety, was in Burlington, and when passing Marce Riddell's general store caught a zephyr that was fragrant with the odor wafted from a piece of country side meat, which the canine was not long in locating No one being present to interpose an objection the dog siezed the piece of meat—about half an ordinary middling—and was leaving the building when discovered by some one on the street who gave the alarm. Mr. Riddell came to the door, unaware of the robbery, but so soon as he saw the dog going down the street he "caught on," and started in pursuit, and an exciting race of a quarter of a mile ensued in which the dog had to drop the meat or be overhauled. When Mr. Riddell returned, carrying his reclaimed property, he looked like he had participated in a five mile marathone. Hereafter he will keep a watchful eye on strange dogs.

An open air graphophone entertainment was enjoyed by quite a crowd that assembled in front of the Court House one evening last week. The machine was splendid and the records used were very entertaining—often amusing.

CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress From Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes In Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis, or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Trianguie and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring: the Digestive organs become weak: there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, billiousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, The Great Master of the Universe has called to himself our dear brother Holland Goodridge, and whereas, by his death Greenwood Grange No. 263 loses a faithful member and his family a devoted head, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we greatly deplore his loss we bow in humble submission to the will of a loving father, knowing that our loss is our dear brother's infinite gain.

Resolved, That our charter be draped for a period of thirty days and that we our badges reverse for that period. Also that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our Record Book, one be sent to the family and one to the Boone County RECORDER.

The Boone Literary Society had a very interesting open session at Library Hall, last Friday night. The program had been arranged with considerable care, and those to whom duties had been assigned acquitted themselves with much credit. Many of the young people about town and in the immediate neighborhood have become interested in the work of the society, and much good will result from the efforts of the organization. Its meetings, which are held once in two weeks, are looked forward to with interest by all the members.

A final test of Scott's aeroplane, the "Purple Flyer," Friday afternoon, proved unsuccessful, and Henry Sieker, the Cleveland aviator, who has had charge of the experiments since the departure of Scott for Chicago, gave up in disgust, which, it is said, was shared by a well known Cincinnati newspaper man, who backed the project. Sieker has joined Scott in Chicago, whither the machine was shipped Tuesday.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Capt. Henry Kotmyer visited his sister, Mrs. A. H. McGlasson, at Madison, Indiana, a greater portion of last week. While in the downstream city he inspected quite a number of launches, and gave the owners some pointers in regard to the proper care and handling of gasoline engines that they had never dreamed of. He visited the ferry also and reports it the best patronized and best equipped ferry property on the Ohio river.

The special term of the circuit court which was to have been held in Burlington, last Saturday, for the trial of a question of a right of passway on which Isaac Flick, of Bellview, is claiming over the lands of James Rogers, was called off, the parties agreeing to let the case go over to the regular August term. Mr. Flick is to use the passway during the interval.

Counterfeit $100 bills are said to be in circulation. A counterfeit of that size is not dangerous to the poor man nor the country publisher.

Those who have seen the Erlanger Dramatic Club in the two plays it will put on at Library Hall next Saturday night, say it is immense.

OBITUARY.

Elizabeth A. Finnell, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Johnson was born near Walton, Boone county, Ky. January 28th, 1831, where she grew to womanhood and was married to the late James S. Finnell, August 23rd, 1849, and together with their oldest son moved to Hancock county, Ind., in 1881, where she made her home until five years ago, when she moved to Greenfield where she departed this life May 11th, 1909, aged 78 years, 3 months and 14 days. To them were born six children, three sons and three daughters—James S., Vardiman H., and Weden W., Mary J. Merchant, Rachel E. Watson and Sarah F. Barnard, of which the oldest daughter died March 17th, 1879, and the youngest son who died in infancy. The deceased leaves to mourn her death, one sister, Nancy Finnell, of Reno county, Kansas, two brothers, Nathaniel G. Johnson, now of this county, Burton S. Johnson, of Covington, Ky., four children, eighteen grand children, twelve great grand-children and a host of relatives and friends. She united with the Baptist church at Greenfield, April, 1905, in which faith she died, often expressing her readiness to answer the call, she has lived an industrious and useful life, having settled here in the woods where she helped to clear the farm and made most of the clothing for the family, being always ready to help the worthy needy, and to minister to the wants of the sick and afflicted for which she has gone to receive her reward.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

FEW CARESSES IN HER LIFE

Infinite Pathos in Remark Made by Little Philadelphia Child of the Slums.

Dr. Herman L. During, superintendent of the Philadelphia City mission, has for many years devoted his life to the poor. Dr. During is the inventor of the pretzel test for street beggars. When a street beggar pleads starvation, you buy him a big German pretzel at the nearest stand. If he eats the pretzel, he is honest; if he refuses it, he is a fraud.

Dr. During in his work among the poor has learned many odd, quaint things that he relates superbly, for he is a born story-teller. In an address at Bala, apropos of the hard, rough lives of the children of the poor, he related a dialogue between two little girls in Rum alley.

"Maggie, wuz ye ever kissed?" said the first tot.

"'On'y wunst in me life wot I kin remember,' said the second. 'When I wuz in de Honnyman hospital wid a broken arm one o' de lady nusses kissed me, an' I blushed like a child.'"

Cuticura Met with Great Success.

"I have two little girls who have been troubled very badly with eczema. One of them had it on her lower limbs. I did everything that I could hear of for her, but it did not give in until warm weather, when it seemingly subsided. The next winter when it became cold the eczema started again and also in her head where it would take the hair out and leave bare patches. At the same time her arms were sore the whole length of them. I took her to a physician, but the child grew worse all the time. Her sister's arms were also affected. I began using Cuticura Remedies, and by the time the second lot was used their skin was soft and smooth. Mrs. Charles Baker, Albion, Me., Sept. 21, '08."

BRIEF STATE NEWS

Items of Special Interest to Our Readers

GLEANED FROM MANY SOURCES.

Frankfort Physicians Meet to Devise Means to Put a Stop to Criminal Operations, and Adopt Resolutions Urging State Board of Health to Act.

Frankfort, Ky.—That 500 criminal operations have been performed in this city during the past five years is the belief of Dr. J. W. Hill, former superintendent of the Institute for Feeble Minded, who made the statement after a meeting of the physicians here to devise means of putting a stop to this criminal practice in this city. Strong resolutions were adopted urging the state board of health to take immediate action and calling upon the county officials and the citizens at large to take steps to lessen the crime. Thirty-one physicians signed a pledge to go before the grand jury and tell all they know. Mayor Hume stated that he would call a mass meeting of the citizens to urge the grand jury to investigate a number of suspicious cases.

50 PER CENT ADVANCE.

Kentucky Wool Growers' Union Disposes of Pool Consisting of About 500,000 Pounds.

Louisville, Ky.—At an advance in price of 50 per cent over that paid last year directors of the Kentucky Wool Growers' Union, a branch organization of the American Society of Equity, disposed of its entire pool to the Huntington Produce and Feed Co., of Huntington, W. Va. The conference between growers and purchasers lasted two days, five concerns offering to buy the pool. While the price paid per pound would not be stated either by buyers or sellers all admitted that the figure set the record for prices paid for wool in this state. The pool contains about 500,000 pounds. C. U. Stuart, president of the purchasing company, conducted the negotiations. By the terms of contract dates for delivery and grading of the pool were fixed. The first consignment will be received at Beaver Dam, Ky., May 20. Following the successful consummation of the deal plans were made by the officials to pledge a 1909 pool of wool, which it is expected will amount to several millions of pounds.

$1,000,000 INCREASE.

Convention of Baptists Considering Increasing Endowment of Louisville's Baptist Seminary.

Louisville, Ky.—To raise more than their share of $1,400,000,000 for the evangelization of all the heathens and to increase the endowment of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville $1,000,000 are some of the projects before the convention of the Baptists of the south, whose biennial convention was begun here with a banquet. Col. Thomas D. Osborne, prominent both in the memories of the confederacy and in general philanthropic work, was toastmaster. The convention will be adjourned at 4 o'clock Saturday, that the delegates may be permitted to attend the unveiling of a monument over the grave of Rev. Dr. T. T. Eaton, long a trustee of the seminary and editor of the Western Recorder. On Sunday a devotional service in the sign language will be held for all the deaf mutes of the city.

EDITOR WATTERSON

Declares He Will Not Support Democrats if Senator McNutt Is Renominated.

Louisville, Ky.—Henry Watterson stirred up local political circles by declaring that if the democrats of Louisville renominated State Senator H. S. McNutt he would not support the democratic ticket. It will be recalled that Senator McNutt, along with Senator Albert Charlton, of Louisville, the late Representative Chris Mueller, of this city, and Representative E. W. Lillard, of Boyle county, voted for W. O. Bradley for United States senator as against J. C. W. Beckham, the democratic nominee. The election of Senator Bradley was made possible by the defection of the four democrats in joint assembly.

Louisville, Ky.—Bound, gagged and tortured for three hours by a burglar, who finally beat her into insensibility when she refused to reveal the hiding place of $6,000, Mrs. Mary Menz, 75, is at the point of death as the result of her terrible experience. Several posses of citizens have set out after the assailant of the aged woman, and he will be summarily dealt with if captured.

Frankfort, Ky.—The Cincinnati delegation of retail grocers and other boosters of that city, 300 strong, arrived here on a special train to attend the third annual convention of Retail grocers of Kentucky and the pure food show.

Louisville, Ky.—Col. E. Polk Johnson, of this city, has accepted an invitation to become the principal speaker at the annual celebration of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, in Columbus, O., on June 5.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Tax Commission Wants Suggestions.

The Kentucky state tax commission issued an address to the people of the state, seeking to arouse interest in the work which it has mapped out to perform before the next session of the general assembly. It wants suggestions from those who have studied tax matters, and makes formal announcement that the people of every city in the state will be given opportunity to present their views personally to members of the commission.

Must Have License.

The court of appeals affirmed the judgment of the Fleming circuit court in the case of the United States Fidelity and Guarantee Co. against the commonwealth, upholding the validity of the provisions of Section 4224 of the Kentucky statutes, imposing a license tax and fixing a penalty for not securing license for "inquiring and reporting on the credit and standing of persons engaged in business in this state."

Assessments Increased.

The state board of equalization made final increase on the assessment of the following counties: Pike, 5 per cent on all property; Powell and Letcher, 5 per cent on lands and personalty.

No defense was offered against the petition of the husband, who is one of the wealthiest men in Kentucky.

Lexington, Ky.—Woodford Clay's stable of racers, including Marcellus, Jolly, Whistler, Flyin Footsteps, Ocean Bound, Bright Star, Makeshift, Malden and Collnet, left here for Sheepshead Bay in charge of Trainer French Brooks.

Louisville, Ky.—Banking circles received with much surprise the announcement that Peyton N. Clark, one of the best-known capitalists of Louisville, had resigned his position as vice president of the Southern National bank. The resignation was accepted.

SECURED $20,000

TRAIN ROBBERS LOOT GREAT NORTHERN TRAIN NO. 3, WESTBOUND.

A MOST THRILLING HOLD-UP

Bandits Detached Mail Car and Engine and Rifled Former, Then Hurled Them Back on Filled Coaches—Twelve Persons Injured in Collision.

Spokane, Wash., May 17.—Six masked bandits secured over $20,000 when they held up and robbed Great Northern Train No. 3, westbound, early Sunday morning, between Mead and Colbert, 14 miles east of Spokane.

The robbers detached the engine and mail car from the train, and, after running up the track a mile and a half, during which they rifled the registered mail bags, they disembarked, reversed the engine, which went tearing back toward the stalled train, and made their escape.

Twelve persons were seriously injured by flying glass and splinters when the wild engine and car crashed into the balance of the train. That many were not killed was due to the action of Conductor C. L. Robertson, who, seeing the inevitable collision, had his trainmen place ties on the track in an endeavor to derail or lessen the speed of the runaway. The engine and mail car were partly stopped by the ties, but plunged into the standing train.

Posses with bloodhounds are scouring the entire country, but up to late Sunday night the bandits have not been apprehended.

When the train left Colbert two men suddenly appeared in the cab and, pointing revolvers at Engineer William Miller and Fireman John Hall, ordered them to do as commanded. After the train had progressed a few miles the engineer was ordered to stop and he and the fireman were forced to dismount from the cab.

Two other robbers then ordered Benj. F. Stumpf, the mail clerk, to open his car. Meanwhile the other bandits were uncoupling the mail car and the locomotive from the rest of the train. When the train stopped Conductor Robertson jumped from the car, but was driven back by the shots of the robbers.

Hastily climbing into the cab the robbers opened the throttle and dashed down the track. The conductor, realizing that the train was being held up, ordered a brakeman to the rear of the train to prevent a collision and had another cut in the telegraph wire to send word to Spokane of the affair. Another of the train crew hurried to the station with the news.

About half an hour later the engine and mail car were seen coming back down the track and preparations were made to ditch them.

Reports seeping through to Spokane Sunday night from the wild country surrounding the scene of the hold-up tell of the covering of every possible route of escape by the city and county officials. The robbery was one of the most thrilling in this part of the west in years.

BOATS CAUGHT BY STORM

And Three Lives Believed To Have Been Lost—Part of Michigan Swept By Terrific Storm.

Detroit, Mich., May 17.—A terrific storm of wind, rain and hail swept over this section of Michigan late Saturday afternoon and night, causing the loss of at least three lives and doing hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage to property.

Two Mt. Clements youths, Carl Eyley and Charles Ullrich, were out in Lake St. Clair in a small gasoline launch when the storm broke, and nothing has since been heard of them. George Brooks, who lived in a little hut on the shore of Lake Huron, near Port Huron, and who was known as "The Hermit Fisherman of Port Huron," was seen out in the lake in a small sailboat just before the storm there. He is believed to have perished.

At Fowlersville the storm was of cyclonic proportions. Dwellings were demolished, orchards uprooted and wheat fields ruined by hail. Several large grain elevators were also leveled.

A circus tent was lifted from its stakes at Eaton Rapids while the show was in progress, almost causing a panic among the crowd. Hail stones of large size also fell, doing much damage. Other Michigan towns in the cyclonic belt report much damage.

Jap Strikers Firm.

Honolulu, May 17.—With no prospect of receiving recognition from their employers the 5,000 Japanese plantation hands, on strike in the Hawaiian Islands, have resolved to stand pat to the last. They ask an increase in wages from $18 to $22.50 a month.

Once upon a time a child who was asked on an examination paper to define a mountain range, replied: "A large-bloxed cook stove." The same method of reasoning seems to go with older growth. Only Sure Cure for Tuberculosis.

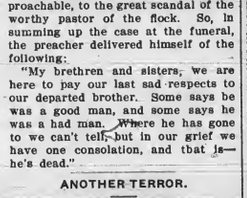
In view of the constant agitation and misrepresentation with regard to the treatment of consumption, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has issued a statement in which it states that the only sure cure for this disease is fresh air, rest and wholesome food. Hardly a week passes without some quack "doctor" or "eminent specialist" informing the public that he has at last discovered the sure cure for tuberculosis. After examining every one of these so-called cures, several hundred in number, the National association states that, one and all, they are misrepresentations or fakes.



Cause for Relief.

An Alabama man tells of an unique funeral oration delivered in a town of that state not long ago by a darky preacher.

Now, it seems that the habits of the deceased brother had not been irreproachable, to the great scandal of the worthy pastor of the flock. So, in summing up the case at the funeral, the preacher delivered himself of the following:

"My brethren and sisters, we are here to pay our last sad respects to our departed brother. Some says he was a good man, and some says he was a had man. Where he has gone to we can't tell, but in our grief we have one consolation, and that is—he's dead."

LIGHT BOOZE
Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife bad quite a tussle with coffee and her experience is interesting. She says:

"During the two years of my training as a nurse, while on night duty, I became addicted to coffee drinking. Between midnight and four in the morning, when the patients were asleep, there was little to do except make the rounds, and it was quite natural that I should want a good, hot cup of coffee about that time. It stimulated me and I could keep awake better.

"After three or four years of coffee drinking I became a nervous wreck and thought that I simply could not live without my coffee. All this time I was subject to frequent bilious attacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me in bed for several days.

"After being married, Husband begged me to leave off coffee for he feared that it had already hurt me almost beyond repair, so I resolved to make an effort to release myself from the hurtful habit.

"I began taking Postum, and for a few days felt the languid, tired feeling from the lack of the stimulant, but I liked the taste of Postum and that answered for the breakfast beverage all right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer headed and had steadier nerves. After a year's use of Postum I now feel like a new woman—have not had any bilious attacks since I left off coffee."

THE DISCIPLINE OF AFFLICTION

Tobit, a Devout Jew, Sorely Troubled at Nineveh.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Eaton.)

Based on the Apocryphal Book of Tobit, chapters 1-3.

The Book of Tobit.—Place in Apocrypha.—The Book of Tobit is the third in this collection of books which are not considered as part of the Scriptures but were writings which held high place in the regard of the Jews and the early Christian church. Of the 14 books of the Apocrypha the Book of Tobit and the Wisdom of Solomon are considered the most valuable for their moral teachings and precepts, just as the books of the Maccabees are esteemed for their historical narrative. As previously stated, the primary meaning of Apocrypha, "hidden," "secret," seems, toward the close of the second century, to have been associated with the signification "spurious," and ultimately to have settled down into the latter. At the present time copies of the Book of Tobit exist in Greek, Latin, Syriac and Hebrew, but it was probably written originally in Greek.

SERMONETTE.

The story of Tobit offers many helpful suggestions to the one who, amidst tribulation, and suffering, and opposition, remains true to his conviction of right.

While yet in his own country of Naphthali, and while still a young man, Tobit records the failing away of his father's house to the idolatrous worship of Baal. But with rare strength of character, he refused to be led away from the true God of Israel, and almost pathetically says: "I alone went often to Jerusalem at the feasts."

This glimpse of his early life, of its struggle and its victory explains the secret of his subsequent steadfast loyalty to his own persecuted people and his religion when suffering bitter hardship in captivity.

While this story of Tobit does not belong to our Bible as we have it to-day, it has its rich lessons for our contemplation, and this first one is the value of an early religious conviction, and a steadfast faith which can hold one true to his course.

While in his native land Tobit continued to worship at Jerusalem according to the commandment of God, and when carried off to Nineveh he did not do as his brethren did—make it an excuse to lay aside his convictions of right and follow the easy way of those about him. Rather did he become more devout in his loyalty to his God and he records again: "All my brethren and those that were of my kindred did eat of the bread of the Gentiles. But I kept myself from eating, because I remembered God with all my heart."

And reward came, for "the Most High gave me grace and favor before Enemessar, so that I was his purveyor."

Such preferment brought riches, and enabled him to devote himself to his needy brethren. He says: "I gave many alms to my brethren, and gave bread to the hungry and my clothes to the naked." And when any of his persecuted brethren were killed and thrown out like dogs, he went out and gave them decent burial.

This led to persecution which left him penniless, but he still continued to do what he felt was right. Blindness came with the poverty. But the school of affliction through which he passed opened the way for blessing to his and joy and deliverance for himself.

And the story of Tobit finds its counterpart in every age and generation.

THE STORY.

TOBIT, a devout Jew, his wife Anna and their little son Tobias were among those carried away captive out of the land of Israel into Nineveh.

While on the long journey the Jews had bad things in common, and had observed their ceremonial laws, but soon after reaching the great Gentile city, and the scattering hither and thither of the company, each came face to face with the question as to the manner of their living.

"Why," exclaimed one in response to Tobit's remonstrance with him that he must not eat the Gentile's bread, "what is there for us to do but to get along the best we can? How can we do otherwise than live as those about us do? We shall never get along here if we do not, for we are apt to give offense by our peculiar customs, and thou dost well know that we have had trouble enough already."

"What thou sayest may seem wise to thee, but it is contrary to the law which God has given his children to follow, and whatever may come we cannot with safety do that."

And that evening as he sat and talked with his wife Anna and related to her the conversation, he found her heart responding to the loyal purpose of his own to serve God in the great and wicked city of Nineveh, cost what it would.

Tobit, after many weeks of privation, at last found place in the household of the king, Enemessar, and by his faithfulness won his regard, and was promoted to the position of purveyor.

This meant prosperity and comfort to Tobit, his wife Anna and their son Tobias, and they rejoiced greatly in the Lord, knowing it was he who had blessed them in their way and given them abundance of this world's goods.

And in his prosperity Tobit forgot not his poor, oppressed brethren of the city, but gave liberally that their condition might be improved and the burdens lightened. Did he hear of any one who was in trouble, he sought him out and helped him in his distress. Did any ruthless taskmaster among the Ninevites abuse his Jewish slave he sought to have the poor unfortunate rescued from his unhappy lot. And where a hapless Israelite was slain and thrown out like a dog beyond the walls of the city, as too often was the case, he would go and take the body and give it decent burial.

Now, this effort in behalf of his brethren at last won the enmity of some of the prominent Ninevites, who were jealous of this Jew's great prosperity, and they began to persecute him, and when Tobit realized to what straits such treatment might drive him, he secretly made his way into Media and left with a friend there the great hulk of the wealth he had accumulated, "for," said he to his wife before his departure, "if mine enemies learn that I am possessed of this money they will take it from me."

The wisdom of his course was evident, for following his return the persecution broke out with new vigor against him. Then Enemessar the king died and Sennacherib ruled in his stead. At that time there were many fugitive Jews seeking refuge in Nineveh, and the king, incensed thereby, caused many such to be put to death. And Tobit, without any thought for himself, continued to bury such.

Now his enemies seized upon this as opportunity to make complaint direct to the king against him, and having obtained decree from the former, they swooped down upon the quiet household of Tobit and stripped him of everything he possessed.

Ah, the bitterness of that bour. Tobit cared not for himself, but to see his wife and tender hoy suffer caused untold anguish.

Then he remembered his wealth left for safe keeping in Media, but he could not go thither owing to the troubled state of the kingdom.

"Has God forgotten me?" he asked bimself, over and over again. "Are my good deeds, my devotion to the law of God to he of no effect?"

It would seem so, for secret word was brought him that a plot was under way to slay him, and he fled from the city, leaving Anna his wife and his son hehind. But so wicked a king could not long reign, and shortly after this two of his sons slew him and Sarchedonus ruled in his stead.

Now it came to pass that Achiacharus was appointed over the accounts of the new king, and he being a son of Tohit's hrother Anael, Anna hesought the latter that he would plead with the king that Tohit be brought back. This consent was at last won, and the day approached when he sbould return to Nineveh.

Great was the joy of Anna and Tobias the son, who made a feast ready for his coming.

And it would have seemed as though when Tohit was again in the midst of his family and had sat down to the feast spread by his wife Anna, that he would have felt that he might enjoy the season in the seclusion thus of his family. But no, the thought of Tobit was ever with his unfortunate brethren, and as he sat down on that glad day when fortune was again returned to him he paused and then said to his son:

"Son, the Lord hath indeed been good to us, in that we are again restored unto thee and thy mother. And we have here an abundance while without in the city there are those of our brethren who are in want. Go hither, and bring what poor man soever thou shalt be able to find, who fears the Lord. Lo, we will tarry for thee."

Some time later Tobias the son returned, hut without a companion, and with the awful story that one of thel hrethren had just been strangled and even then lay in the market place.

Notwithstanding that it was his interest in his unfortunate hrethren which had before won bim disfavor, he went at once and brought the body and lay it in one of the upper rooms until the going down of the sun.

And that night he went and buried the body, but some of his old-tim enemies saw him, and said;

"This man is not yet afraid to be put to death for this matter, who fled away; and yet lo, he hurieth the dead again."

And when Tobit had finished his task, being unclean therefrom, he lay without by the wall of his courtyard. And during the night there fell into his eyes from the walls a dust which took his sight and no physician was found which could help him. Thei Tobit prayed, saying:

"O Lord, Thou art just, and all thy works and all thy ways are mercy and truth, and thou judgest truly and justly forever. Now, therefore, deal with me as seemeth best unto thee, and command my spirit to he taken from me, that I may be dissolved, and become earth. For it is profitable for me to die, rather than to live, hecause I have heard false reproaches and have much sorrow. Command, therefore, that I may be delivered out of this distress, and go into the everlasting place. Turn not thy face away from me."

Thus he prayed, but God in his mercy preserved him in his affliction, for through the darkness he was to come to the light and out of the affliction was to come great blessing.

DIDN'T SEE ANY DIFFERENCE.

Beauty Doctor's Little Lecture and Manipulations Had Little Effect on Lady's Double Chin.

A beauty doctor toiled on a double chin.

"Let them sneer if they like," he said, "but we beauty doctors have added some 15 of 20 years to the age of the heroine of fiction and the stage. I mean the modern heroine is as young at 35 as she used to he at 18."

He attacked the great chin with hot, dry compresses.

"Dickens and Scott had heroines of 17 or so. In those days at 17 a girl was at her best. Thereafter she faded. But Hichens, the daring novelist of the day, has in the 'Garden of Allah' a heroine of 32, and in his last book the heroine is 40. Hichens knows, you see, that we beauty doctors can make a woman's youth stay with her till long past 40."

He smeared the chin with grease.

"The same with the stage. The heroine used to be a kid. She's a mature woman now, only she has retained the kid's charm, the slim and supple figure. Barrie in 'What Every Woman Knows' gives us a heroine well on toward 40. Maugham in 'Mrs. Dot' does the same. Pinero's heroines are all ripe."

He kneaded the douhie chin with both hands like a haker.

"The doctors of medicine have prolonged life; we doctors of beauty have prolonged youth, and the world grows daily a finer place to live in. See any difference?" he added, proffering a mirror.

The owner of the chin studied its reflection carefully.

"No," she said.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Women's Food Expensive.

The question whether men eat less than women do or whether they buy more economically is suggested to a writer in Health Culture, hy a comparison of the grocery hills run up hy men students and hachelor girls who have clubbed together for the purpose of cutting down expenses.

In every case in which tables for comparison are given the men's menu for the week costs less than that of the women. Both seem to have reduced the food allowance to the lowest possible terms, but in footing up the amount spent the women have run into certain extravagances avoided hy the men.

"Maybe," says the puzzled inquirer, "women really don't know how to shop, after all, hut the more likely supposition is that no matter how strict the regimen the feminine nature requires certain luxuries that mere men can get along without."

Earthquake Districts.

Considering earthquake forecasts, Dr. G. K. Gilbert finds that the places liable to he shaken can be pretty well determined by geological evidence as well as from pastexperience, but there is little reason to expect satisfactory prediction of the time of earthquakes. The one well-known earthquake district of the United States includes Central and Southern California, with areas in Mexico and the Pacific ocean. Alaska also has a district, and there may be a third in Utah. Since the beginning of last century, Alaska has had at least nine destructive shocks, and 11 are listed for the California district, or 13 if the Oregon earthquake of 1867 and the Sonora and Arizona of 1887 are included. Other United States earthquakes have been the New Madrid of 1811-12, the Charleston of 1886 and the New Madrid of 1865.

Rainy Day Thoughts.

"When I used to live in the west," said the New York woman, "there seemed to he a good excuse for the rain. Whenever it rained we said: 'How fine it will he for the crops,' and stayed indoors gladly, hut here in New York there's no earthly excuse for its raining day after day, and the shops so full of heautiful things we would like to huy."

Answer This Question

When thousands of women say that they have been cured of their ailments by a certain remedy, does this not prove the merit of that remedy?

Thousands of women have written the story of their suffering, and have told how they were freed from it by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound — for thirty years these reports have been published all over America.

Without great merit this medicine could never have gained the largest sale of any remedy for woman's ills — never could have become known and prized in nearly every country in the world.

Can any woman let prejudice stand between her and that which will restore her health? If you believe those who have tried it you know this medicine does cure.

Read this letter from a grateful woman, then make up your mind to give Mrs. Pinkham's medicine a chance to cure you.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I am a firm believer in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was a great sufferer from organic female troubles for years, and almost despaired of ever being well again. I had bearing-down pains, backache, headache and pains in my abdomen, and tried Mrs. Pinkham's Compound as a last resort. The result was astonishing, and I have used it and advocated it ever since. It is a great boon to expectant mothers. I have often said that I should like to have its merits thrown on the sky with a search-light so that women would read and be convinced that there is a remedy for their sufferings. "My husband joins me in its praise. It has used it for kidney trouble and been entirely cured."—Mrs. E. A. Bishop, 1915 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

The baccalaureate sermon delivered last Sunday night at the Baptist church by Rev. J. B. Harris of the M. E. church was a most delightful discourse, and Rev. Harris covered himself with glory by the masterly manner in which he delivered the address to the eleven graduates, taking as his text, Christ, the Great Teacher. The house was crowded to overflowing, and praise was awarded Rev. Harris on every hand for his splendid sermon.

Rev. Father Joseph Broeman, of Warsaw, who has charge of the Catholic church of Verona and the communicants at Walton, held services at both places, last Sunday. At Verona there was a class of eighteen who made their first communion—twelve boys and six girls, and Bishop Camillus Maes, of Covington, will hold the confirmation exercises at Verona, Tuesday, June 8. The members of the Verona church held a forty hours devotion beginning Sunday and closed Tuesday.

Rev. E. L. Andrews, of Covington, at the conclusion of the services Sunday, resigned his pastorate of the Walton Baptist church to take place at once, he having arranged to take charge of the pulpit of the First Baptist church in Cincinnati. Rev. Andrews was greatly liked in this quarter and the congregation regretted his severance of the very pleasant relation that existed between them in his ministerial capacity but he carries with him their good wishes for success in his work and a most congenial location. Prof. H. C. Wayman, principal of the Walton High School, was ordained to preach the gospel on Sunday and he will have charge of the church as its pastor. Prof. Wayman is a very bright man with all of the characteristics to make him a splendid pastor.

While digging post holes, yesterday, on what was once the James Calvert property in Burlington, Jack and Boss Eddins unearthed an iron kettle that was about two feet below the surface of the ground, and had evidently been buried for many years. When the boys discovered they had struck an iron vessel they became very much excited, believing that they were about to exhume a pot of gold. The pot, which is about a three gallon capacity, being brought to the surface the boys examined it closely to see if they could find any trace of a buried treasury, and while there were plenty of the "yellow stuff" present, it was not of the legal tender variety, and being clay they returned to their normal condition and continued their pursuit of wealth by the use of muscle, saw and hammer.

The weather does not warm up very fast, consequently the growth of vegetation is slow.

LAWRENCEBURG FERRY

Becomes the Property of Our Merchants, Who Will Equip and Operate Same.

(From Lawrenceburg Register.)

Harris Fitch and Attorney Thomas S. Cravens, on Thursday last, succeed in closing a deal with Senator S. W. Tolin, of Burlington, Ky., who, by the ferry boat plying between the Kentucky and Indiana shores at this place together with appurtenances, rights and privileges become the property of Lawrenceburg merchants. The purchase price was $2,500. An organization will be effected known as the Lawrenceburg Ferry Company, incorporated under the laws of Kentucky, for the control and management of the same. The boat will continue to be run by horse power until the citizens of Boone county have improved the public highways leading thereto. The lessee of the ferry will then install improved motor power.

The Lawrenceburg ferry is the oldest public utility in this section, having been established in 1820 by Moses Tousey, a prominent figure in Ohio Valley mercantile of that early day. It was sold by him to Capt. Thomas Porter, father of Albert G. Porter, formerly governor of Indiana, whose boyhood was passed about the river in the capacity of ferryboy. It was next owned by Gen. A. S. Piatt, of West Liberty, O. He disposed of it to his brother, Judge J. W. Piatt, of Cincinnati, who sold it in 1845 to Abram S. Piatt, of Boone county, Ky. Later on the property was purchased by Peter Hartman, who sold it to Robt. Terrill, who was succeeded by Hon. George W. Terrill, who sold to Capt. Wm. Huff, afterwards re-buying. Subsequently it was owned by George W. Terrill, jr., who sold it to Senator S. W. Tolin, of Burlington.

The early facilities of the ferry consisted of a rowboat for passengers and a barge for livestock, vehicles and heavy freight, which was drawn upstream several hundred yards by means of a rope in the hands of the ferrymen and then propelled and controlled in crossing by means of sweeps and poles. Captain Porter installed a horse-power boat, using five horses moving in a circle, the power being transmitted by a shaft to the wheel. General Piatt introduced a horse-power boat of the present treadmill pattern. This was followed by a steam ferry boat, launched while Abraham S. Piatt owned the ferry. This was destroyed by ice in the winter of 1845, and the treadmill style of horse-power submitted.

There is a tragic side to the ferry's history. John Kizer, a ferryman, was stabbed to death by George Fulcher, a one-armed soldier, whom he attempted to murder in a fit of drunken rage. This occurred in 1861. Five years later Robert Terrill was killed by his ferryman, Maurice McNeely, on the ferryboat in a pistol duel over a financial difficulty. A number of years afterward two negroes named Parker were drowned by the capsizing of the ferry skiff.

PUBLIC SALE—We will on the 7th day of June 1909, that being the regular county court day, offer for sale at public auction at the court house door at Burlington, Ky., the Woolper Heights farm near Ashby's Fork in Boone and known as the Younger Johnson farm, containing 229 acres. The farm is well watered and has a house with five rooms, barns and outbuildings. Forty acres in pasture and nearly all of it will grow tobacco. Possession will be given on Feb. 1st, 1910. Terms of sale will be made known on the day of sale. We reserve the right to reject any and all bids that may be made on said land.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions adopted by the Ladies Mite Society on the death of their President, Mrs. Mary Ann McKim:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father has called to her final rest our sister and president, Mary Ann McKim; and, whereas, we realize our society has lost a faithful member and friend, therefore, be it resolved.

1. That by the death of sister McKim we have lost one of our best members.

2. That her life has been one of patience and denial.

3. That while we shall miss her our loss is her gain.

4. That we tender our sympathy to her loved ones in their bereavement, and that we each strive to consecrate ourselves anew to the work for the Master.

Com't.—ALICE SNYDER, SUSAN E. CLUTTERBUCK.

The patrons of rural mail route No. 8 at Greensburg decided to give their faithful carrier an Easter treat in recognition of his uniform courtesy and kindness. Those generous hearted Decatur county farmers didn't try to square off the deal by mailing their trusty carrier a penny post card containing the portrait of a newly-hatched chick, either—not they. When the carrier rounded in on Saturday evening before Easter to the only town in the world that has a real tree growing on its court-house dome, he made an invoice of receipts, which showed nineteen dozen eggs, ten pounds of butter, six fat hens and many other substantial remembrances. It's a safe bet that there was an Easter carol in that carrier's heart.—Lawrenceburg Press.

The information comes from the State Capital that a bill will be presented to the next General Assembly providing for a State primary election for the nomination of all candidates to be voted for at the succeeding November election. The bill urges a uniform date for the nomination of officers by both parties. The measure seeks to hold the primary elections on the same date of holding registrations. If under the present law more than two parties desire to participate the election officers may be equally divided, the power of registration officers to be clothed also with the power of primary election officers. It is argued that such a law will prove economical all around.

The Erlanger ball team defeated the Norwood Grays last Sunday on the former's ground 2 to 0.

Allie Winston is sporting a new buggy, purchased of agent Crouch, of Petersburg. That girlie at Petersburg will get a buggy ride now.

The horse which Fletcher Clore was riding a few days since, stepped in a hole and fell, throwing Mr. Clore over his head, hurting him considerably but not seriously.

We were surprised and grieved to hear of the death of Wm. Maurer, of Newport. We extend to the grief-stricken parents, brothers and sister and wife our heartfelt sympathy.

We feel safe in saying that Albert Gray has the largest, nicest and greatest variety of garden truck of any man in the county, except it be some one gardening for the market.

John Cropper and Harry Stephens returned from the Southern Baptist Convention at Louisville, Tuesday evening, and report a pleasant time. Miss Alberta Gaines and brother will return Wednesday.

Strayed—From the premises of W. L. Cropper two ewes and one lamb. Anyone knowing anything of their whereabouts will please report to W. L. Cropper, near Bullittsburg church, R. R. 1, Burlington, Ky.

Farmer Jones, of Pushburg, finished planting corn last Saturday just before the rain, the first to finish in this neighborhood that we have heard of. Albert Gray would have finished by noon but for the rain.

An Ashbyite passed through a few days since and said, "we are mum on Ashby. You may as well keep your pall parrot at home. If it gets any more news on Ashby it will have to roost down there and sleep with one eye open."

They are still laughing at Idlewild over Farmer and John Jones' experience with the nozzle of Pfalzgraf's sprayer. The Farmer laughs as hearty and has as much fun as any, but John can't see where the laugh and fun comes in.

Buster Gaines was fishing down on Woolper, one day last week. "Hello, Buster! What luck? Anything doin'?" Said a passerby. "If I get the one that's been nibbling, and four more, I will have five—that's not doin' so bad," said Buster.

Wm. W. Gaines and wife entertained as follows last Sunday: E. C. Gaines, wife and daughter, Virginia; W. L. Cropper and family; Clay Duncan and wife; Wm. Gaines, wife and Mrs. Fannie Kirtley, and Mrs. Anna Gaines and son, Milton. A good dinner and a pleasant time.

Albert Gray has received two letters from his wife since she went to their daughter's at Versailles, where she was called because of the sickness of one of the children. The first stated the child was very low and its recovery thought doubtful, but the second said it had taken a turn for the better.

Johnson & Son, the sawmill men, passed through Tuesday on their way to Idlewild to set up their mill. Mr. Johnson says he intends to treat the people here white. We assured him he would be treated white in return. The son will move to Idlewild for the summer, if he can get a house convenient.

Farmer Jones and B. C. Graddy do considerable in the line of veterinary work among their neighbors, and are well posted for men who never attended veterinary school. They met at Andrew Gaines', a few days since, where Mr. Graddy performed an operation on one of Mr. Gaines' horses. Jones found fault with his method but he got there all the same.

Put the razors out of reach of the kids. Lloyd, little son of Jas. Day, got hold of Fletcher Clore's razor and was taking his first shave. Fletcher happened to go into the room and noticed him and asked, "what are you doing?" "I am shaving," said Lloyd. He had drawed blood in two places and if Fletcher hadn't gone into the room he would have had his face skinned in two minutes more.

Cool, wet weather prevails, weeds are growing and the farmers are getting behind with their work.

Uncle Arthur Marshall, of Aurora, was down last Wednesday, looking after his farm below McVille.

Forest Brown and wife and Miss Lizzie Rogers, attended Barnum & Bailey's show in the city last Tuesday.

The rain is discouraging the farmers to some extent. Can neither finish planting their corn nor plow that which is up.

W. E. Vest was down a couple of days last week establishing a line between the farms of Jas. Rogers and J. H. Moody.

It is with profound grief we chronicle the death of Fredrick William Maurer, who was born Feb. 4, 1874; united in marriage with Miss Nannie Goodridge June 6, 1907; departed this life at his home in Newport, at 8 o'clock p. m., May 18, 1909, after a couple of weeks' intense suffering. He was highly respected in his own community, and was held as an example morally and socially. He was esteemed, loved and trusted fully by the Mail Line Company as a pilot of one of their best boats. He endeared himself to his parents for his love and obedience; to his wife, as a devoted husband; to his little daughter for parental indulgence, and to his brothers and sister for his brotherly love and kindness. His remains were brought to his father's home, and on the 20th inst., his funeral was preached in the Belleview Christian church by Bro. Edgar C. Riley in the presence of a large assembly of sorrowing friends, at 2 o'clock, p. m. After the services the remains were taken in charge by the Masons and laid to rest in the new cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

The widow, parents, brothers and sister of William Maurer ask his and their many friends here, and in Newport and those on the river to accept their thanks and appreciation for the kindness shown him and them during his late illness, and to all who donated such beautiful flowers, and Bro. Riley for the comforting words spoken by him, and to H. G. Blanton, the undertaker, and the Masons for their love shown towards their deceased brother. THE FAMILY.

Capt. John Maurer, who is pilot on the Sprague, the largest towboat in the U. S., lowered the record for time out with a tow from Louisville to New Orleans, on his last trip. He made the trip in a day and 3 hours less than any one ever before made.

The members of Belleview Masonic Lodge take this method of thanking the four visiting brothers from Rising Sun, who were present and rendered such valuable assistance, and also wish to thank Bro. Riley for his consoling words at the church; also undertaker H. G. Blanton for the efficient way he discharged his duties.

The funeral of Wm. Maurer, who died May 18th at his home at Newport, was held at the Christian church here last Thursday at 2:30 p. m. Belleview Lodge F. & A. M. of which he was a member, performed the last sad rites for their deceased brother, and the remains were laid to rest in the new cemetery here. The floral offerings were many and beautiful, and especially fine was a large pilot wheel made of flowers, and was presented by the officers and pilots of the White Collar line steamers. The deceased left a widow, one daughter a year old, father and mother, three brothers, one sister and a host of friends here and on the river, who sincerely mourn his death. Wm. Maurer was in his 36th year.

A large balloon passed over here late last Sunday afternoon, traveling in a westerly direction. It is generally supposed that it was occupied by some professional aeronaut, who was making a long distance trip. At times it came so near the earth that the trappings beneath could be distinguished by the naked eye, then it would gradually ascend until it looked like a large foot ball in the sky. When nearest to the earth a coarse toned horn could be plainly heard, supposed to have been blown by the occupant.

THE STORY OF THE DAY

Memorial Day

SIR WALTER BESANT once pointed out the superior significance, interest and character of our national holidays. An Englishwoman last year discovered the beauty of our Memorial day. She was a guest in an old New England town, and missed nothing, either of preparation or observance.

She helped gather flowers for the children, who came begging them all day, and listened to their confidences: "My grandfather, he was a soldier. There's flowers and a flag on his grave, anyway, but we bring flowers, too." "This basketful's going to the ladies of the post; they're making up bouquets at the hall." "No'm, these ain't for the soldiers; they're for our baby. I've got enough to most cover the mound, it's so little." "My, them laylocks'll look fine on teacher's desk! Yes'm, we decorate for the exercises, and take 'em up to the cemetery afterward."

On Memorial day she attended the exercises; saw the rows of young faces turned attentively toward the fine old man in faded uniform, who spoke well and simply of the duties of a citizen in war and peace; heard the children sing; saw them salute the flag.

Then came the procession—the old soldiers, most in carriages, a sturdy few on foot; the town officials; the militiamen; the boys' brigade; the fire company. With the crowd she followed to the ancient burying-ground.

She saw blossoms and little waving flags placed where lay men who had served in the Spanish war, the civil war, the Mexican war, the revolution, and under a quaint stone, lichened and aslant, a soldier of King Philip's war; not one forgotten, not one neglected. She observed how everywhere, in every burial-plot, there were more flowers; how, naturally and simply, the day was coming to be one of remembrance, not of soldiers, only, but of all the honored and beloved dead; how friends, meeting among the fragrant paths, talked quietly of those gone, or of the great historic days; or noted with appreciation the grace of memorial garlands or the beauty of clustered flowers.

It happened that she was a woman who had seen parades and pageants and state solemnities in many lands. She had kept very silent, and her friend, fearing that, to her too-experienced eye, the dignity of the occasion might have been impaired by occasional crudities and rusticities, and a decoration here and there in obtrusive ill taste, expressed her doubts.

"No," said the Englishwoman. 'Where all take part, there must be flaws like that. They are nothing. When I think that every year, everywhere in your great country, there are scenes like this, in a spirit like this—I believe I have never in my life seen anything so beautiful."—Youth's Companion.

Grow Too Old for Parades.

As a day celebrated only by veterans of the union army, Memorial day is rapidly slipping into the past. The veterans are growing too old for the parades which, until within a few years, were its most conspicuous feature. In the south, where Decoration day was formerly observed on different dates in different states, the custom has grown of celebrating May 30, which until recently was an exclusive anniversary of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The Meaning of the Day

FOR forty-one years the north and the south—though on different days—have decorated the graves of their soldier dead of the mightiest war of modern times and the greatest war of all time in the cause for which it was fought. In the beginning the south, honestly and sincerely believing that it had a right to withdraw from the union, proposed to exercise this right peacefully if it could, forcibly if it must. Its complaint was that the north would not in good faith keep the national laws made to protect the domestic institution of the southern states—slavery—and was continually encroaching on it with new laws, and the south wished a separate government in which such laws would be supreme. The north insisted that the union was indissoluble; that once having entered it, states could not withdraw. As a question of law, this could never be settled.

It is pitiful to see how our fathers for years argued and demonstrated and quibbled over an interpretation while in the background loomed the real question, dimly discerned, never wholly confessed, and ignored, as much as possible; while as if to drown consciousness the talk about "interpretation of the constitution" grew ever louder, until the south struck. It ordained the dissolution of this union and fired on its flag. Then rose the curtain on the red drama that cost a million lives before the curtain fell.

Confused in the beginning, the theme gradually unfolded, the background became clear and the protagonists were disclosed in deadly strife, not over a petty text, but over the question of human freedom versus human slavery. The fathers had eaten the sour grapes and the children's teeth were set on edge. There could be no compromise. As long as this country was to be the heritage of those that made it, the one idea or the other must prevail. Freedom won—in a blaze of glory, with a trail of reflected light, seen clearer this day every year, as the diminishing ranks of the boys in blue march to lay flowers—the rue of sacrifice and rosemary for remembrance — on the graves of "Those that have died already."

This is the personal possession of the union soldier—that he fought for the cause of human freedom. And Memorial day has this wider and unique significance that it is not merely in memory of brave men who "gave the last full measure of devotion" for a cause they believed was right, but that that cause was human freedom! It abides. We that come after them have a like battle to fight, and the same old foe with a new face. All slaves are not black. All slavery has not the outward and visible signs of dungeon and the lash. We are still, as Lincoln said on the field of Gettysburg, "engaged in a great civil war testing whether a nation—conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal—can long endure." And in this war north and south clasp hands and stand shoulder to shoulder.

Common to All Americans.

In many parts of the south Memorial day is now jointly celebrated by survivors of the blue and the gray, and the custom is growing. As the country comes more and more to cherish as a common inheritance the valor, fortitude and self-sacrifice of that conflict, it will become universal.

CLOSE TO $150,000

SUM BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN SECURED BY BANDITS WHO ROBBED OMAHA TRAIN.

HOLD-UP WAS WELL PLANNED

Robbers Used Express Wagon To Carry Away Registered Pouches—$5,000 Offered for Capture of Each of the Men Dead or Alive.

Omaha, Neb., May 24.—Although it is not known positively just how much booty was secured by the four bandits who held up and robbed the Union Pacific Overland train, near the city, Saturday night, estimates place the amount as close to $150,000.

The bandits have succeeded in covering their flight, and up to late Sunday night they had not been captured. However, it is known that, instead of using an automobile in which to carry away the registered pouches, the robbers used an express wagon and immediately after the robbery made their way to South Dakota.

Three belated pedestrians, homeward bound, passed this wagon going at a furious rate, but are unable to describe the horses. Union Pacific detectives have positive information that three of the robbers boarded the train at Fremont, the last stop out of Omaha.

These men ran from a saloon and caught the train as it pulled out.

The empty mail pouches taken from the train were found some distance from the point where the robbery occurred. They had been cut and their contents removed, the outlaws overlooking only one package.

The empty mail pouches were found near Forty-third and Jackson streets, which strengthens the belief that the robbers came toward the city after holding up the train. All four men wore long rain coats and their features were masked.

The police are working on the theory that the outlaws went to a rendezvous already selected, either in Omaha or South Omaha, and that they spent their Sunday examining and dividing their loot.

The spot where the hold-up took place is only two blocks from where Eddie Cudahy was kept a prisoner after being kidnaped several years ago.

Joined by the secret service of the Union Pacific railroad, United States Marshall Warner, Postoffice Inspectors Perkins and Thompson and all the sheriffs of Nebraska, Western Iowa and Northern Kansas, the Omaha police are carrying on a man hunt for the four bandits.

Incited to work and urged on by the offer of $5,000 reward by the Union Pacific Co for the capture of each of the four robbers dead or alive, a complete cordon of officials has been thrown around Nebraska, and it seems almost impossible for the men to escape.

The greatest difficulty that now seems to be in the way is the matter of identification, in the event the men should be captured. At this time there is but one man who is known to be able to identify any of the robbers.

This is M. C. Rush, a mail clerk on the train. He says as the robbers were at work about the car the mask dropped partially from the face of one man and remained down for an instant.

FATHERS GRIFFIN AND O'SHEA,

Aroused From Sleep By Crash of Glass, Had Pistol Duel With Church Thieves.

Chicago, May 24.—Awakened by the clash of glass in the basement of the Holy Angels' Roman Catholic church, Oakwood boulevard and Vincennes avenue, early Sunday morning, Fathers William Griffin and Timothy O'Shea went from their beds to encounter burglars.

One of the priests snatched a revolver that lay on top of his dresser and in the chase after the thieves fired several shots.

On searching the passageway where the burglars were discovered the police found a lot of silverware wrapped up in a table cloth.

It had been stolen half an hour before from the Maryland hotel, 159 Oakwood boulevard. A gold chalice, two gold candlesticks, a crucifix and other articles were also found with the silverware. The holy service had been stolen from the altar.

Fell Through Floor.

Hamburg, Pa., May 24.—Three women and a boy plunged through the floor of a second-story room in the home of William Kauffman, in Centre township, and fell on the dining-room table below at a time when the table was surrounded with guests. One of the diners, Mrs. Elias Balthaser, was bending over the table at the time and one of the women fell on her neck, causing probably fatal injuries.

Bullet Lodged in Neck.

Chicago, May 24.—As Humphrey O'Neill, of Worthville, Ky., was passing through the gates at the Union station here a revolver dropped from his pocket and was discharged. The bullet lodged in the neck of Frank Frame. Frame is in a serious condition.

Alleged Fugitive Arrested.

Chicago, May 24.—Geo. White, who is said to be an employe of the National Valley bank of Staunton, Va., was arrested by the Evanston police. The police say he is wanted in Staunton on a charge of embezzlement.

Not a Petrified Leg.

In one of the leading cities of the middle west a high church dignitary is obsessed with the monomania that one of his legs is gradually becoming petrified. To test its condition he pinches it at frequent intervals. At a dinner party of men and women he made the usual test after the soup and became greatly excited to find that he felt no sensation from a most vigorous pinch. "It has come, it has come!" he cried in alarm; "at last my leg is completely petrified!" The matron sitting next to him whispered hoarsely: "Excuse me; it is not petrified and it is not yours!"—New York Press.

320 ACRES INSTEAD OF 160 ACRES

160 ACRES FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

"Maud!" exclaimed mamma in a shocked voice. "How often have I told you to say stomach?"—Success Magazine.

THINK HARD

It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead often causes trouble and sickness, illustrated in the experience of a lady in Fond Du Lac, Wis.

"About four years ago I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestible qualities. This indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could not walk up a flight of stairs without sitting down once or twice to regain breath and strength.

"I became alarmed and tried dieting, wore my clothes very loose, and many other remedies, but found no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes, or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of sour stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions naturally and I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and my skin became clear and I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum for I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use. "There's a Reason."

"I like the delicious flavour of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum according to directions, it tastes similar to mild high grade coffee."

Romance of Tobias and Sara

God Sends His Angel to Give Help.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1909, by the Author, W. A. Mason.)

Based on the Apocryphal Book of Tobit, chapters 4 to 10.

The Book of Tobit.—Period of the Book.—The scene of the Book of Tobit is placed in Assyria, whither Tobit, a Jew, after whom the book takes its name, had been carried as a captive by Shalmaneser. The book closes with the reported fall of Nineveh (Tob. 14:15) the date of which was B. C. 606, and the story in the main was probably written some time before this. (Tob. 12:20.) But in the opinion of Bible scholars, the whole tone of the narrative bespeaks a later age. This is particularly marked by the way in which the doctrine of the good and evil spirits is elaborated and which belongs to a period considerably posterior to the Babylonian captivity.

SERMONETTE.

The Book of Tobias gives us a picture of a true love affair ordered after the will of God.

If more marriages to-day were thus of Divine ordaining, and God's law ruled in the home set up we should hear less of ill-matched couples and the divorce courts would have little to do.

There is no question but that the matter of marriage is too lightly considered. Motives other than those which God purposed when he gave man and woman to each other now prevail, and as a result disagreements and divisions take place and the sacred relationship into which the two lives have entered is cast aside. Such manner of living can bring only disaster, not only upon the immediate members of the family involved, but upon the nation as well.

The bulwark of any nation must be the purity of its family life, and when loose living and divorce stalk through the land wrecking the lives of the principals and cursing the children, if hapless in such cases there be children, it offers one of the most serious menaces to the national life.

There is but one ground of divorce laid down in God's law, and at least two of the great denominations recognize only this one basis of divorce, namely, the Catholic and the Episcopal churches. That there are violations of this law of these two churches is only additional evidence how this social decay is eating its way into the very vitals of the nation.

And just as God's law declares that there is but one cause for divorce, so it also sets forth clearly and positively the one rule which governs in making marriage alliances.

The New Testament warning is "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communication hath light with darkness?"

This is the law for the Christian, and many a life is shipwrecked because it is disobeyed.

In the romance before us of Tobias and Sara we find striking illustration of this loyalty to God's law, and of the blessing which followed.

THE STORY.

IN THE days of long ago when the Jews were suffering deportation from their land there lived an exile in the great city of Nineveh named Tobit. Poverty and blindness had come to this devout Jew. Poverty through change of rulers in the land, which prevented him from going into Media to obtain there a large sum of money which was held by a trusted friend. Blind because of exposure incurred in burying one of his brethren who had been ruthlessly murdered and cast outside the walls of the city.

The household of Tobit consisted of his devoted wife Anna and his son Tobias. Owing to the blindness of the father the mother was forced to make the living for the family. Bowed with his affliction and the grief of their unfortunate condition, the father looked for death as a relief. But as he thought on death and remembered his son, now quite grown to manhood's estate, his heart was stricken with remorse that he should leave him so ill prepared to face the hard conditions which were the lot of the poor Jew in Nineveh. He knew that he would be unable to care for his mother in her old age.

The grief and dejection of Tobit cast a gloom over the home, and the wife Anna and the son Tobias watched with anxious eye from day to day Tobit's weakening frame, and tried by every means possible to cheer him.

"Ah, but how can I do aright but mourn," Tobit declared in response to the gentle chiding of his wife, "when my blindness puts the burden of bread winning upon you and the boy, and what will become of you in this great and wicked city of Nineveh when I am gone?"

"Is not the God of our father Abraham still God of heaven and earth?" ventured Anna, with faltering voice as she renewed her efforts to finish the task upon which she was engaged.

Silence filled the room, and a little later Anna glanced in the direction of Tobit and as she noted his bowed form she whispered to herself:

"It is well. He sleeps."

A short while later she was startled by a glad cry from her husband, and turned to see that he was standing, and gesticulating wildly, while at the same time he cried:

"Send for Tobias! Send for Tobias!"

And when the young man had come in the old man told his vision, or dream, or whatever it was in which there had been brought to his remembrance a debt of the long ago. How years before when wealth was in his possession he had placed a goodly sum in the hands of a certain trusted friend named Gabael of the city of Rages in Media.

"And now, my son Tobias, thou shalt depart for that distant city and bring hither those ten talents of silver."

So it was arranged that the young man should depart, and with many misgivings they bade him good-by.

"My son, be mindful of the Lord our God, and take not a strange woman to wife, but a daughter of thy father's tribe."

"That I can remember the Lord and serve only him I am certain," thought Tobias to himself after he had departed, "but whither shall I look for such a wife as my father hath spoken of?"

He was roused from his reverie by the appearance of a stranger before him with whom he fell into conversation, and finding that he knew the way to Rages, he besought him that he would go with him, and was much cheered when he gave his consent.

Now Tobias knew not that it was God's angel who had come to guide him on his journey, but as they proceeded Tobias and his companion, Raphael, conversed together, and the former unburdened his heart to Raphael and told him of his perplexity in obeying the admonition of his father regarding the seeking of a wife.

"But is not God, who would thus have you remember his law, able to guide thy feet and bring thee to the one whom thou shalt wed?" questioned Raphael.

"Yea, verily," exclaimed Tobias, reverently, and that night as they made camp by the side of the Tigris river his mind was absorbed with this new thought. He had gone to the river to wash and as he bent over the river's brink a great fish leaped forth, and he was upon the point of fleeing, when the voice of Raphael sounded out sharp and clear:

"Flee not! Capture the fish and bring it thither."

This Tobias was able to do after a fierce struggle. Raphael cut open the fish and took therefrom the heart, the liver and the gall, and placing them securely in a wrapping, gave them to Tobias and cautioned him with many solemn words not to let them leave his possession, "for," said he, "the heart and the liver shall give deliverance from the evil spirit, and the gall is good to anoint a man's eyes that he see."

Tobias' heart gave a great leap as he thought of his father's affliction. What joy he would bring with him upon his return. The gall should not go from his possession, but of the liver and the heart he knew not what need he had therefor.

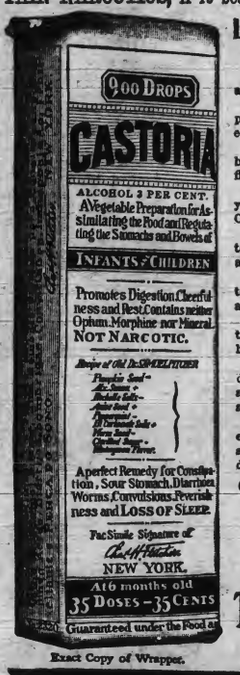
"Yea, let the strangers abide under our roof to-night. They be weary with the long journey," exclaimed Raguel, a prominent Jew of Ectabane, in response to his wife's query regarding two strangers who had appeared ot the door. And as the words were spoken Raguel came forward and greeted the men.

"Why," he exclaimed, excitedly, as he looked closely into the face of Tobias, "thou lookest much like my cousin Tobit."

"And Tobias is my father," exclaimed Tobias, now equally surprised.

Sara, the daughter, came running into the room at that moment. Young and beautiful she was, and as the eyes of Tobias fell upon her he loved her. But as her eyes met his a look of anguish and sorrow spread over her countenance.

As the days passed and Tobias pressed his suit, for, said he, "Is not Sara such an one as my father would have me wed being of my family?" he became conscious of some mystery surrounding the beautiful girl. He knew she loved him, and yet often as they were together a shudder would pass over her as her eyes would meet his. On the day in which he asked for the daughter's hand in marriage, the father unfolded to him the awful truth that an evil spirit rested upon his house and had claimed already seven young men to whom the beautiful Sara had been wedded. And in every case this had happened upon the wedding eve.



"The heart and the liver of the fish," like a flash came the thought into Tobias' heart. "Surely, God hath preserved Sara for me against my coming."

And so it was that when they were wedded, and the evil spirit reached forth to touch Tobias, he made a smoke of the heart and liver, and thus escaped, and next to the joy of the homecoming of the son, Tobias with his bride and the money for which he had gone in quest, was the joy of the restoration of sight to the blind Tobit.

The moderate drinker, whose mild craving led him to drink more, little thought that he was daily adding fuel to the fire which was to consume him body and soul. The only safe course is total abstinence.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. J. S. Alexander, of Omaha, Neb., says: "A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria is, deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boarman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

ONE of the new plans for tariff revision is thus stated: Let the duty on every article imported be reduced to 5 per cent at once. Let a further reduction of 5 per cent be made each year thereafter, so long as each reduction shall increase the amount of revenue obtained from any article. When the revenue point is reached and the proceeds show a decrease, let the duty again be raised 5 per cent, and be what it was the last preceding year, and let it so remain for three years, and then let the automatic 5 per cent reduction again commence. It is claimed for this plan that when once enacted the tariff is out of politics forever. It will automatically reduce itself each year without material injury to anyone, and will finally be left at the point where it produces the most revenue at the least cost to the taxpayers.

The Contest is Olosed.

The teachers' popularity contest closed yesterday at noon, Miss Jennie Aylor daughter of James H. Aylor, of Hathaway neighborhood, coming under the wire a winner by a big vote. Miss Jennie has been gradually increasing the gap between her and Miss Sadie Crisler, who comes second. It will be seen by reference to the table at the head of this article that Miss Jennie Aylor's vote is 15,000 in excess of her nearest competitor, and shows that she and her friends did some hustling, especially in the last ten days of the contest. To win the prize in a popularity contest requires considerable hustling, and in this instance Miss Jennie Aylor and Miss Sadie Crisler have proven the hustlers. The watch, of course, goes to Miss Aylor, the Dictionary to Miss Crisler and the fountain pen to Miss Carpenter.

THE RECORDER desires to thank all the ladies in the contest for the work they did and is sorry it cannot afford to make each present. It also desires to thank Messrs. Renaker and Duncan for services they rendered each week during the contest, in counting the ballots.

He says times have been hard in his neighborhood owing to the to destruction of the crops in 1907 by the hail, and the 1908 crop failure. He is hoping for better results in the crop line this year.

A Free Show.

The biggest free show enjoyed by this part of the country in a long time was the journey of a lage balloon to the west, last Sunday afternoon. It was sighted about six o'clock in the northeast, was traveling at a considerable altitude, and seemed to be approaching the town but really passed south, going directly over the residence of R. B. Utz about one half a mile out. At that point the balloon appeared to be nearly over the center of the large field in which the base ball park is located, and was descending rapidly. A large crowd started on a run for the ball park to witness the landing, but the aeranout would not have it that way, and when within a few hundred feet of the ground he threw out a lot of ballast, and to the disappointment of the crowd the balloon beganto increase space between it and tera firma and was soon flying high again. This performance was repeated three or four times while the aerial traveler was in sight. The people who occupied the basket were evidently enjoying their dinner when they passed over the residences of Reuben Akin and Edgar Cropper out on the Woolper hills, as indicated by pieces of paper that floated down from the balloon and were picked up. The balloon was a large, new one, and ascended at Ludlow Lagoon, last Sunday afternoon on a test trip that was intended to last until Monday afternoon, but it landed Tuesday morning near Nashville, Brown co., Indiana, about 100 mile swest of Cincinnati

A strawberry and ice cream festival will be given at Big Bone Grange Hall from 4 to 11 p. m. on Saturday, May 29th, by the ladies of the Big Bone Missionary Society. All are invited.

THE Walton correspondence contains an account of a wedding there under difficulties, which, though very great, were overcome by the older heads, whose sympathy the young couple soon enlisted.

A Cough Medicine

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a regular cough medicine, a strong medicine, a doctor's medicine. Good for easy coughs, hard coughs, desperate coughs. If your doctor endorses it for your case, take it. If not, don't take it. Never go contrary to his advice.

We publish our formulas
Ayer's
We banish alcohol from our medicines
We urge you to consult your doctor

The dose of Ayer's Pills is small, only one at bedtime. As a rule, laxative doses are better than cathartic doses. For constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick-headaches, they cannot be excelled. Ask your doctor about this.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co. is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

The Combined Saddle and Harness Stallion,

GRAND CHIEF!

Owned by the Burlington and Waterloo Horse Co.; will stand Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week at B. B. Hume's stable in Burlington, and the other three days at Kite's store, Waterloo, Ky., at $10 to insure a colt to stand up and suck. If a mare is parted with after being bred the money is due.

GRAND CHIEF is a beautiful bay, 16½ handsheavy mane and tail, weighs 1300 pounds, has splendid style and action, is a grand individual, being just the kind of horse the breeders of Boone co. have long desired to patronize. GRAND CHIEF was sired by Senatio 7982, by Red Wilkes, sire of Ralph Wilkes, 2:06¾, Ethurlai, 2:09, &c. First dam by Blood Chief, son of Harrison Chief 3149, sire of the dams of Will Kerr, 2:07, J. H. L. 2:06. For full pedigree and other particulars see bills or address B. B. Hume at Burlington, Ky.

A premium of 510 will be given the best colt, regardless of sex, of Grand Chief's 1909 get, to be shown at Burlington, the first Monday in Sept. 1910.

BURLINGTON & WATERLOO HORSE CO.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20 00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

HIGH VINE, 2733, foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1667; grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730; Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2882, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1365; second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60; third dam, Maxey by Granger; fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse and breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and breeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

Address all communications to W. LEE GAINES, President.
Walton, Ky.

Local News.

Next Monday is county court day.

There is a very heavy locust bloom.

The river has been at high tide all spring.

Corn planted now will need a late fall in which to mature.

About one-fourth of the 1909 crop of tobacco in this county has been pitched.

The colored population had a big fish fry at David Sanders', last Saturday night.

The weather the latter part of last week was not very pleasant to sheep that had been sheared.

Geo. C. Goode, of Covington, hands out, this week, some later information in regard to groceries.

Smith's fish wagon from Bellevieve did a rushing business in Burlington last Friday morning.

Several acres of tobacco have been set in this county, and May is considered early for setting the weed.

William Kirkpatriok has added a pair of computing scales to his already well equipped butcher shop.

The local base ball talent had a rehearsal last Saturday afternoon, and some exciting stunts were pulled off.

If the rain last week was the blackberry drizzle, it is probable that there will be no more cold rains this spring.

Herbert Kirkpatrick, local dealer in copper, scrap iron, &c., was transacting business in Cincinnati, last Thursday.

There have been no new developments in the proposed traction road through this county via Florence to Union and thence to Big Bone.

Boone County Pomona Grange will meet with Greenwood Grange next Saturday, May 29th.
LILLIE HAMMON, Secretary.

This is the last week of the Burlington school, and the pupils who have attended the full term are tired enough to enjoy their vacation of three months.

The young people of Bullittsville Christian church will give an ice cream and strawberry festival at Bullittsville on the night of June 5th. All are invited.

Rolfs & Wachs, Covington clothiers, have a new advertisement in this issue. That firm knows what medium to use to appeal to the people of Boone county.

Deputy Sheriff Cropper journeyed to Florence, last Friday, to post notices of the proposed graded common school election which is to be held there shortly.

The RECORDER wants a correspondents at Big Bone—one who will write the news, playing no favorites. A copy of the paper and stationery will be furnished the correspondent.

The Boone County Base Ball League, comprising the Big Bone, Bellevieve, Hebron and Burlington teams, will open the season next Saturday afternoon. See the schedule in another column.

Not many fields of wheat in the county indicate an average yield on account of there not being enough on the ground, but large, well filled heads may develop and compensate in a measure for this.

Miss Annie Cowen, returned, last Wednesday afternoon, from Rising Sun, where she had been attending her sick brother, Dr. L. C. Cowen, for several weeks. His condition had improved very much before she left him.

Died, April 19th, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Stucky, aged one week and one day. The remains were interred in the cemetery on Mr. D. Bondurant's farm. The parents have the sympathy of all in the loss of their little one.

Those living in the vicinity of the town of Florence can tell whether or not they are in the proposed Florence graded common school district by reference to the order calling the election and published in another column in this paper.

The citizens of Walton and all others who were present are congratulating the Walton Graded School on its very excellent commencement exercises. Walton's graded school is not only the pride of that locality but of the entire county.

Being asked, almost daily, if I can repair a certain article of jewelry, I take this plan of letting my friends know that I am prepared to repair anything that any jewelry store will take for repairs, no matter how difficult. R. W. CLARK, Jeweler.

Otto Crisler, veterinary, has had some very sick patients which he has handled in a most satisfactory manner to their owners. He is working hard that when he graduates next year he will be one of the best equipped veterinaries in the country.

Dr. Peddicord called the attention of the RECORDER to its announcement last week that Mrs. Nichols, who was operated on for appendicitis was up and about, as somewhat premature, adding that she may be able to sit up some this week.

A new wrinkle in trading mules was inaugurated in this county last week, when H. M. Grover purchased ten head from Fred Coffman by weight. The price paid was sixteen cents per pound. The mules averaged 884 pounds—bringing $134 per head. If this new method proves popular with our mule traders the mule market will soon be regularly quoted at so much per pound instead of so much per head.—Georgetown News.

So far this spring every time warm weather seemed about to come to stay, a cool wave has swooped down upon the country and made fires and overcoats good things to have about, at the same time delaying the growth of all kinds of vegetation.

While the dirt roads have not approached the impassible stage this spring, yet there have been very few days that they were in nice condition for travel, as about the time they began to get smooth it has invariable rained, producing a crop of mud.

Perry Conner, colored, and John Carpenter, white, both died of dropsy at the county infirmary, the former, Sunday morning, and the latter, Sunday night. There have been three deaths of dropsy at that institution in the last few weeks, and there is another inmate suffering of it.

Charles Westhay's attending Barnum & Bailey's circus, a few days since, came very nearly resulting in Burlington losing a citizen, as he was so fascinated with the performances he witnessed that it was necessary to watch him several days to prevent him from following the show out of the country.

Farmer G. W. Sandford, of Twin Oak Fruit Farm, was in town, Friday morning, and in fine spirits notwithstanding the wet weather had interfered materially with his farming operation. He is one of those jolly souls who does not allow small things to annoy him, letting other people do the worrying.

Deputy Sheriff W. D. Cropper took Bud Minor, colored, to the Reform School near Lexington, last Thursday. It will be remembered that Minor was the boy who killed his cousin, Bud Coleman, a few weeks since while they were fishing down on Gunpowder creek. The boy was glad to be taken from jail to the school.

It looks like providence is on the side of the tobacco growers this year, and provided them with an excellent season in which to thin out their plant beds by using the large plants. A considerable acreage of tobacco ripening during the heated term will, doubtless, be the result of the early planting, but it will be handled without trouble if good judgment is used in cutting it.

Earl and Russell Smith, who live near town, were on the war path, last Friday, armed with their trusty double barrel shot guns. They were in search of the dogs that had raided their father's flock of sheep that morning, but were not fortunate enough to locate any the guilty curs until in the afternoon, when they were discoved after the sheep again. There were two of the dogs, and they were followed to their respective homes and killed.

The extension of the traction line down the river from Aurora has been as earnestly advocated by the people living along the river below there as has the extension of the traction line from Highland to Florence on this side of the river. It appears strange that in either instance the extension should be delayed when such an inviting field, apparently, could be traversed, but it must be presumed that the traction magnates know what is most to their interest in each case.

Lived 152 Years.

Wm. Parr—England's oldest man—married the third time at 120, worked in the fields till 152 and lived 20 years longer. People should be youthful at 80. James Wright, of Spurlock, Ky., shows how to remain young. "I feel just like a 16 year-old boy," he writes, "after taking six bottles of Electrix Bitters. For thirty years Kidney trouble made life a burden, but the first bottle of this wonderful medicine convinced me I had found the greatest cure on earth." They're a godsend to weak, sickly run down or o'd people. Try them. 50c at Bentler's drug store Erlanger.

At last James Mitchell, who, for the last quarter of a century, has been recognized as the champion fisherman along Gunpowder creek, has surrendered the belt, Albert Sullivan, who resides in the Hathaway neighborhood, being his successor, and acquired his title to the belt by catching, one afternoon, not long since, a string of 10 fish that weighed exactly 50 pounds, a piscatorial fete never before performed with pole and line at one sitting in the history of Gunpowder creek, so far as "white man's" information extends back. Young Sullivan's grandfather, Uncle Ed R. Smith, was known the country over in his day as the most successful angler who visited the creeks in Northern Kentucky, but in his long experience with pole and line he never approached the stunt pulled off by his grandson a few days since.

CURES INDIGESTION.

All Distress From Stomach and Indigestion Vanishes in Five Minutes.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis, or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring: the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Resolutions of Respect.

Hebron Lodge No. 757, F. & A. M., Hebron, Ky., May 1st, 1909.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom and mercy has called from labor to rest our beloved Brother, Holland Goodridge. Bro. Goodridge was born in Boone county, Ky., Feb. 22, 1841, and died April 28th 1909 near the place of his birth. He was made a Master Mason in Good Faith Lodge No. 96 F. & A. M., in August, 1867,—remained a member of this lodge until October 26, 1872, when he was demitted and became a member of North Bend Lodge No. 540 F. & A. M. In 1903 he was demitted from this lodge and became a charter member of Hebron lodge No. 757, F. & A. M., where he remained a consistent and devoted member until his death.

Resolved, That this lodge feels deeply the great blow it has sustained in the death of Bro. Goodridge, and extends its sympathy to the widow and friends; that the community has lost one of its most honored and respected citizens, and the church to which he belonged, one of its faithful and efficient servants. We commend his exemplary life and faithfulness to duty to the whole brotherhood, as worthy of emulating in every detail, and by imitating his good virtues, we may have the satisfaction of knowing that should we prove faithful as he did, we will reach that heavenly home where the Great Grand Master of us all presides. Be it further resolved.

That a copy of these resolutions be spread on a page of our record book, a copy sent to the widow of deceased, and a copy each to the Masonic Home Journal and the Boone County RECORDER for publication.

An Appeal for Homeless Children.

Now that the warm summer days are almost upon us, it is absolutely necessary to find country homes for the babies who are in the receiving home of the Kentucky Children's Home Society. Every parent knows how essential it is that babies should be kept cool and comfortable in the summer and how important it is that they get good, pure milk. Their very lives depend upon it. We have nine babies from two months old to a year and a half, and we earnestly hope to place each one in a good country home within the next few weeks. They are bright, sweet babies and will bring sunshine wherever they go. There are thirteen boys and girls from eighteen months up to five years, attractive happy little people who would be easy to train. They are just at the age when children are most responsive to kindness and affection. We also have two sisters aged ten and four, respectively, and their little brother, aged seven, whom we would like to place in the same home if possible. They are as good children as we have ever had in the home, and are so strongly attached to each other that we would dislike to part them. However, if we cannot find a home for all three together, we would like to find some one willing to take the sisters. We also have larger children.

We only place our children in homes where the moral and social atmosphere is of the best, and good references are always required.

Any one desiring to do good work in the world and at the same time gain the truest pleasure will do well to apply for a child to The Kentucky Children's Home Society, 1086 Baxter Ave., Louisville, Ky.

Wanted Buttons Put On.

Three doctors were operating on a man for appendicitis. After the operation was completed one of the doctors missed a sponge. The patient was reopened, the sponge found within, and the man sewed up again. Immediately the second doctor missed a needle, and again the patient was opened and closed. Then the third doctor missed a pair of scissors. "Gentlemen," faintly said the victim as they were about to open him up again "for heaven's sake, if you are going to keep this up, put buttons on me."

The entertainment given here last Saturday night by the Erlanger Dramatic Co., was attended by a fair sized audience. The plays Tommy's Wife and The Elopement of Ellen were well rendered and enjoyed by all who like the sentimental. The tronpe is composed of prominent young people of Erlanger who are possessed of considerable dramatic talent and their performance

Hall of Belleview Lodge No. 544, F. and A. M., May 20th, 1909.

Death has again visited our Lodge and taken from us our devoted brother, William Maurer, who died on May 18th, 1909, aged 36 years. He was a zealous Mason, devoted to its principles and the teachings of the Order. In the death of our beloved brother this Lodge has met with a sad loss, the Commonwealth an honored and respected citizen.

We extend to his wife and daughter, his father and mother and brothers and sister, our heartfelt sympathy, our love and esteem, and bid them to live such a life that will enable them to meet him in that celestial Lodge above, where grief and sorrow are not known, and where parting never comes.

Resolved, That a Memorial Page be placed upon the Minute Book of this Lodge, a copy sent to his family, and a copy to the Boone County Recorder for publication.

An Old Jail.

Grant county's old log jail which recently burned at Williamstown, was built in 1821 at a cost of $220. It was used for thirty five years, and no prisoner ever escaped from it. Four persons were taken out of it to be hanged. Two white men, Mays and Crouch, were hanged by a mob. Two negroes were hanged legally. One of them, Sam, was accused of having murdered his master's wife. He protested his innocence. Before being hung the negro again declared that he was not guilty and told those present that lightning would strike the two white oak trees in attestation of his innocence. Lightning did strike the trees, and on his deathbed the former master of the negro confessed that he had killed his wife and charged the crime to the negro, who was entirely innocent, as he had claimed to be, says the Williamstown Courier.

PUBLIC SALE—We will on the 7th day of June 1909, that being the regular county court day, offer for sale at public auction at the court house door at Burlington, Ky., the Woolper Heights farm near Ashby's Fork in Boone and known as the Younger Johnson farm, containing 229 acres. The farm is well watered and has a house with five rooms, barns and outbuildings. Forty acres in pasture and nearly all of it will grow tobacco. Possession will be given on Feb. 1st, 1910. Terms of sale will be made known on the day of sale. We reserve the right to reject any and all bids that may be made on said land.

¼ TO ½ BUTTER LOST THIS WAY

WHICH?

NO BUTTER LOST THIS WAY

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

SOUL OF A LITTLE CHILD.

Nearly all women are fond of jewels, and one of the most acceptable gifts they can receive is a valuable piece of jewelry. They take great pleasure in wearing it, or looking at it and showing it to others, and they are very careful not to injure it or to lose it; but far more precious than rubies or the most costly jewels of earth are the souls of the little children committed to their charge—and often so lightly valued by them, says the Charleston News and Courier. Few mothers, no matter how bad they may be in other respects, are indifferent to the health and comfort of their children; and there are few mothers who will not sacrifice a great deal in order to secure these things for their little ones. In the care of this precious trust even a conscientious mother often errs, because she does not realize clearly enough how sensitive a child's mind is, and how quick to note every word and action of those around him. It is not enough for parents to fulfill the promises given at the baptism of their child, that they will see that he is taught "those things necessary for his 'soul's health'" in the form of prayers and his religious duties; for unless the lives they lead in the home agree in every particular with what they teach him, their labor will likely be in vain, so far does the force of example outweigh the spoken word.

Danger of injury is not the strongest objection to sending the Liberty bell across the continent. That is to be considered, but there are reasons enough why the bell should stay at home without imagining impossible perils. It should stay at home because it belongs here, says the Philadelphia Ledger. It derives its significance from its association with the old state house, where it should remain enshrined. People come from all parts of the world to visit Independence hall. They have heard of the old bell and look for it there. The shrine of liberty seems to have lost one of its jewels when the bell is not there. To take it away is to desecrate this national sanctuary. There is scarcely more reason for lending out the bell for exhibitions elsewhere than there would be for a similar misuse of the table on which the Declaration was signed or any similar object of patriotic interest. Their interest comes from and belongs to the place.

Mexico went to the gold basis in good season. She has long been noted for her rich silver mines. In fact, she is by far the greatest silver producing country in the world. Her output of gold has also been considerable, though she ranks low in that respect as compared with the United States and several other nations. But she may do better from now on. It is announced that the richest placer gold fields ever found there have been discovered in the state of Oaxaca. The deposits are found in an area of 22,000 acres, and if the proportion of gold reported shall hold out there will be an enormous addition to the world's supply.

There was a birthday party at Pasadena, Cal., which had some rather unusual features. The affair was given in honor of a young lady who had just reached eighteen and who was the junior member of the family. The mother of the five children died several years ago, leaving an estate of $2,000,000 and a will providing for distributing the fortune when the youngest should come of age. So the party was made the occasion of disposing of the money, and the "favors" to the five consisted of their shares of the big estate. It is quite likely the participants in the distribution quite enjoyed the unique addition to ordinary "doings" at such functions.

A Spiritualistic society in Illinois wants to establish a phantom detective bureau in which the aid will be sought of departed noted sleuths to clear up mysteries of crime. It is to be feared, however, that the spirits called upon will not be responsive to the demand, even if the law would not insist on other mediums of learning the truth than Spiritualistic ones. But even theories these days are getting the speed mania and rushing on to the wildest kind of propositions.

If you wish to talk to the people on Mars Prof. Pickering of Harvard says you can do so for $10,000,000. Some citizens may think this is a high price, but the man whose wife is accustomed to call him up on the long-distance telephone and forget the flight of time will not consider it exorbitant.

TAFT IS GUEST OF CHARLOTTE

PRESIDENT ATTENDS MECKLENBURG CELEBRATION.

HE MAKES TWO SPEECHES

Anniversary of "First Declaration of Independence" is Occasion of Three Days of Entertainment in North Carolina.

Charlotte, N. C.—President Taft, by his presence and participation, gave his indorsement to the celebration of to the one hundred and thirty-fourth anniversary of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence, and consequently the entire state is rejoicing. The chief executive came on the last of the three days of celebration, and his address was a main feature of the carnival program.

Military maneuvers and drills, band concerts, athletic and baseball contests and numerous addresses entertained the swarms of visitors from all parts of this and adjoining states. The Charlotte fire companies opened the affair Tuesday noon with an exhibition, and then a troop of regular cavalry drilled and a band concert was given. Baseball followed, and in the evening the Charlotte drum corps and three bands amused the crowds.

Governors' Day Program.

Wednesday was designated as governors' day and the main event was the delivery of addresses by Gov. Kitchin of North Carolina and the chief executive of several other states, at the fair grounds. These were preceded by a big athletic meet and followed by a cavalry drill, military maneuvers and band concerts, with another ball game thrown in for good measure.

Two events made the evening notable. The first was a May musical festival at the Auditorium which enlisted the services of a number of excellent soloists and a large and well trained chorus. The second was an illuminated parade given by the Order of Red Men.

President Taft Arrives.

Just at ten o'clock Wednesday morning the booming of a 21-gun salute by the Charlotte artillery notified the people that President Taft had arrived on his special train. Nearly all the inhabitants and the thousands of visitors were at the station, and as Mr. and Mrs. Taft alighted from their car they were greeted with a mighty roar of applause. A special reception committee took the distinguished guests in charge and conducted them to the Selwyn hotel, where they were welcomed by Gov. Kitchin, Senators Simmons and Overman and the mayor of Charlotte.

After meeting all the committeemen and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Taft, together with Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, the governor and mayor and other distinguished visitors, were escorted by a guard of old soldiers to a reviewing stand and witnessed a grand parade of all the military and civic organizations that could take part in the celebration.

Mr. Taft Speaks Twice.

A second installment of the music festival in the Auditorium was graced by the presence of the city's guests, and then all returned to the reviewing stand, where President Taft delivered an address. His words were listened to with close attention and frequently elicited loud applause.

Later in the afternoon the president made a speech to the colored people and the students of Biddle university.

From 8 to 9:30 in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Taft held a public reception in the parlors of the Selwyn hotel and shook hands with thousands of people.

Military drills, band concerts and other entertainments were provided for the crowds all Wednesday afternoon and evening, and the great celebration closed in a blaze of glory.

Old Controversy Renewed.

The people of North Carolina, whose proudest boast has been that their ancestors were the first Americans to throw off the yoke of British rule, now rejoice in the feeling that President Taft has recognized the justice of their claim, but the century-old controversy has broken out afresh. Many historians refuse to accord to the pioneers of Mecklenburg county the honor that is thus accorded them. These historians allude to the story as "the Mecklenburg myth," and thereby arouse the anger of North Carolinians.

According to those unbiased investigators who have looked most deeply into the matter, the Mecklenburgers did hold a public meeting on May 31, 1775, and did adopt resolutions quite abreast of the public sentiment of that time, but not venturing on the field of independence further than to say that these resolutions were to remain in full force till Great Britain resigned its pretensions. In 1793, or earlier, some of the actors in the proceedings endeavored to supply the record from memory, unconsciously intermingling some of the phraseology of the Declaration of July 4, which gave the resolutions the tone of a pronounced independency. Probably through another dimness of memory, they affixed the date of May 20, 1775, to them

Case for Mecklenburgers.

The case for the Mecklenburgers is set forth as follows: In 1818 there existed a great rivalry between Massachusetts and Virginia as to which com-controversy was brought up in congress. It was at this time that Davidson, a representative in congress from North Carolina, announced that Mecklenburg county had declared her independence 13 months before the promulgation of the document in Philadelphia.

While the statement created some surprise it resulted in an investigation into the facts as to the Mecklenburg declaration. This inquiry was made by Nathaniel Macon, who represented North Carolina in the senate, and through Gen. Joseph Graham and Representative Davidson Senator Macon received from Dr. Joseph McKnitt Alexander a full account of "the event," which Dr. Alexander said he had "copied from papers left by his father." This statement, which included the May 16th declaration, Senator Macon sent to Raleigh, N. C., and it was published in the Register on Friday, April 30, 1819.

Dr. Alexander's Story.

Dr. Alexander related at length how the farmers of Mecklenburg county in the spring of 1775 had called a convention to be composed of two delegates from each settlement in the county to meet May 19 to devise means for the assistance of the "suffering people of Boston and to extricate themselves from the impending storm." "Official news, by express, arrived of the battle of Lexington," according to Dr. Alexander's report to Senator Macon, and the influence of the news from Lexington, he added, resulted in the unanimous adoption of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence.

The declaration as written by Dr. Brevard, and approved by the convention on May 20, 1775, reads:

"1. Resolved, That whosoever directly or indirectly abetted or in any way, form or manner countenanced the unchartered and dangerous invasion of our rights, as claimed by Great Britain, is an enemy to this country—America—and to the inherent and inalienable rights of man.

"2. Resolved, That we, the citizens of Mecklenburg county, do hereby dissolve the political bands which have connected us to the mother country, and hereby absolve ourselves from all allegiance to the British crown and abjure all political connection, contract or association with that nation, who have wantonly trampled on our rights and liberties and inhumanly shed the innocent blood of American patriots at Lexington.

Declared Themselves Free.

"3. Resolved, That we do hereby declare ourselves a free and independent people, are, and of right ought to be, a sovereign and self-governing association under the control of no power other than that of our God and the general government of the congress, to the maintenance of which independence we solemnly pledge to each other our mutual co-operation, our lives, our fortunes and our most sacred honor.

"4. Resolved, That as we now acknowledge the existence and control of no law or legal officer, civil or military, within this country, we do hereby ordain and adopt, as a rule of life, each and every one of our former laws, wherein, nevertheless, the crown of Great Britain never can be considered as holding privileges, immunities or authority therein.

"5. Resolved, That it is also further decreed that all, each and every military officer in this county is hereby reinstated to his former command and authority, he acting conformably to these regulations. And that every member present of this delegation shall henceforth be a civil officer, viz., a justice of the peace, in the character of a 'committeeman,' to issue process, hear and determine all matters of controversy, according to said adopted laws, and to preserve peace and union and harmony in said county, and to use every exertion to spread the love of the country and fire of freedom throughout America, until a more general and organized government be established in this province."

More Light.

By the extraordinary contortions of her neck he concluded that she was trying to get a glimpse of the back of her new blouse; by the tense lines and scintillating flash about her lips he concluded that her mouth was full of pins.

"Umph—goof—suff—wuff—sh — offspog?" she asked.

"Quite so, my dear," he agreed. "It looks very nice."

"Ouff—wun—so—gs—ph — mf—ugh—light?" was her next remark.

"Perhaps it would look better if you did that," he nodded; "but it fits very nicely as it is."

She gasped and emptied the pins into her hands.

"I've asked you twice to raise the blinds so that I can get more light, James," she exclaimed. "Can't you understand plain English?"

Angels on Horseback.

There are many ways of cooking oysters. "Angels on Horseback" are well known, but I should hope not very well liked. It is a barbarous conjunction, that of bacon with oysters; a tremendous compliment to the bacon, it is true, but an insult to the fish.

Nor can I praise the steak and oysters so dear to many. But as an ingredient in a beefsteak pie nothing but praise can be spoken of the bivalve. There are oysters in that most delicious of pies, the one that cooks for 24 hours and keeps a man up all night to see that it does not leave off boiling. Need I say that I refer to the world famous pudding at the Cheshire Cheese?—The Gentle woman.

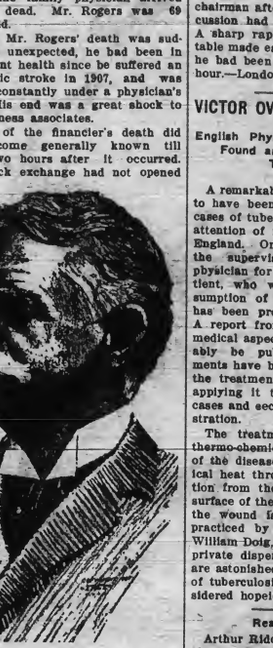
H. H. ROGERS IS DEAD

AMERICAN BUSINESS WORLD LOSES ONE OF ITS GREATEST GENIUSES.

LEAVES $75,000,000 FORTUNE



Successor of John D. Rockefeller as Standard Oil's Chief, King of Copper Industry, Victim of Apoplexy—Funeral Services Friday.

New York.—The American business world lost one of its greatest geniuses when Henry Huddleston Rogers, vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, leader in the Amalgamated Copper Company, director in a score of big concerns, builder of railroads and philanthropist, died Wednesday of apoplexy.

Death came a little more than an hour after Mr. Rogers had risen for the day, mentioning to his wife that he was feeling ill. At seven o'clock he lapsed into unconsciousness and before the family physician arrived he was dead. Mr. Rogers was 69 years old.

While Mr. Rogers' death was sudden and unexpected, he had been in indifferent health since he suffered an apoplectic stroke in 1907, and was almost constantly under a physician's care. His end was a great shock to his business associates.

News of the financier's death did not become generally known till about two hours after it occurred. The stock exchange had not opened when the report reached Wall street, but with the opening there was hardly an appreciable effect on the market.

Henry H. Rogers was a money maker and one of the most successful men of the so-called Standard Oil group. He began life as a poor boy at Fairhaven, Mass., where he was born, and retained his legal residence there until the day of his death. He is variously reported as having commenced life as a newsboy and as a driver of a grocery cart, but whatever his humble start in business he achieved a success attained by only a few men of a generation.

Mr. Rogers was a man of many friends and an enthusiastic yachtsman. Until recently he had held the reins of the Standard Oil Company following the retirement of John D. Rockefeller, although J. B. Archbold attended to the routine management of the great corporation. Just how much money Mr. Rogers leaves is not known. His fortune is variously estimated at from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000, which will make his son, H. H. Rogers, Jr., one of the richest men in the country. Whether the son or Mr. Broughton, son-in-law of Mr. Rogers, will carry on his affairs is a matter of speculation in the financial district.

The widow he leaves is his second wife, his first wife having died 14 years ago, and he is survived in addition by four children, the son mentioned, and the following daughters: Mrs. W. R. Benjamin, Mrs. Urben H. Broughton and Mrs. William R. Coe.

New York.—The funeral services in this city of Henry H. Rogers, vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, president of the Amalgamated Copper Company, took place in the Church of the Messiah Friday morning. Rev. Dr. Robert Collyer delivered a touching eulogy to the famous financier.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Elbert H. Garry, George W. Perkins, James A. Moffett, John D. Archbold, C. A. Peabody, A. S. Paine, William Rockefeller, E. H. Harriman, Edward T. Bedford, James M. Beck, Melville E. Stone, James Jordan, John D. Ryan, Samuel L. Clemens, Dr. C. C. Rice and Raymond Dupuy.

STILL KEEP UP OLD CUSTOM.

Englishmen Meet in Debate To-Day as Did Their Ancestors Generations Ago.

Fifty men sat round a quaint, oak paneled room at the back of a public house near Fleet street on Saturday night. Most of them were smoking long clay pipes. Before them, on round-topped tables, were mugs of ale and glasses of hot toddy. One by one the men arose and with great deference to the chairman, who sat on an ancient chair below a naked gas jet and wielded an ebony hammer, expressed their views on the events of the week.

The gathering was the survival of Cogers Hall, an ancient debating club established more than 150 years ago. Each Coger who addressed the meeting alluded with pride to the fact that 24 years ago Mr. Asquith had on more than one occasion visited that room and rising amid the smoke wreaths held forth upon some topic of the day.

"He was practicing his oratory then," said a gray-haired Coger who had known the hall for 50 years.

"You are free to air any view so long as it is not treason," declared the chairman after the opener of the discussion had spoken for 50 minutes. A sharp rap of the hammer on the table made each orator sit down when he had been on his feet for half an hour.—London Daily News.

VICTOR OVER DREAD DISEASE

English Physician Asserts He Has Found an Absolute Cure for Tuberculosis.

A remarkable series of cures alleged to have been effected in advanced cases of tuberculosis is attracting the attention of medical men in London, England. One case has been under the supervision of a distinguished physician for five months, and the patient, who was suffering from consumption of both lungs and throat, has been pronounced virtually well. A report from the physician on the medical aspects of the case will probably be published soon. Arrangements have been made for subjecting the treatment to a decisive test by applying it to six or eight hospital cases and securing a scientific demonstration.

The treatment is described as a thermo-chemical attraction, the germs of the disease being drawn by chemical heat through a ray of inflammation from the lung or throat to the surface of the skin, and expelled when the wound is washed. It has been practiced by a science investigator, William Doig, for several years at his private dispensary, and medical men are astonished by the results in cases of tuberculosis which they have considered hopeless.

Real Auto Poem.

Arthur Riddle, the old-time philosopher, made a poem out of the automobile, as follows:

"I like the smell of the gas so well,
And the smell of the gasoline, and I like the purr and electric whirr of the buzzmobile machine. What a joy to ride o'er the countryside with a gale tearing by your ears, as you fly through space at a wicked pace with never a thought of fears. Clear out of mind is the town behind, for nothing is real, indeed, but your meteor red, and the road ahead and the dizzy delight of speed—till the sudden shock when a cruel rock destroys your dream with a jerk. The car breaks down and you walk to town, half a day late to work."—Atlanta Constitution.

Not Born to Die by Accident.

James Kreiger, aged 15 years, of Shamokin, Pa., tumbled down a 200-foot mine breach until he struck a projecting post 50 feet from the surface. He clung to it, when a rope was lowered and he was hauled to the surface, with only a few bruises.

During the Unpleasantness.

"I—I—I'd just like you to understand one thing," he lisped.

"Well, if you're the one thing, I don't ever expect to," she replied, calmly.—Yonkers Statesman.

Children Need Acting.

Rev. Perry Grant of New York thinks that acting is a psychological need, and is looking for the rich man who will build a theater for children. The purpose of such a theater, he says, is educational and is in keeping with the discoveries of Froebel, who knew that play is an instinct implanted by nature for educational purposes.

Inspector Thatcher Files Report Saying Certain Officials Were Grossly Ignorant of the Law or Had Mercenary Motives.

Frankfort, Ky.—State Inspector M. H. Thatcher filed with Gov. Willson a report of the investigation made by his department into the conduct of certain officers in Campbell and Kenton counties and turned into the state treasury $3,164.35 as a result of these investigations. The charge is made in the report relative to W. F. Lohstroh, M. J. Hogan and John P. Nagel that "these officers were either grossly ignorant of the law or else intended by means of these erroneous and unlawful assessments and sales of property for taxes to receive from the state compensation to which they were not entitled."

There was also an increase in the finances. Brief addresses were made by some of the old comrades, urging the younger veterans to keep up the patriotic work of their fathers when death carries them off. A spirited election of officers resulted as follows: Commander, R. B. Hewitson, Newport; senior vice commander, S. D. Van Pelt, Danville, Ky.; junior vice commander, J. L. Louisville, Ky.—All opposition to the organization plans in Louisville was frozen when the 180 seats in the republican district convention were given to the same number of delegates representing the Grinstead-Bullitt wing of the party. Mayor Grinstead and nearly every other city and county official were nominated by acclamation for a full term of four years. The convention ground out nominations all day without cessation. Gus Neurath was the one man who emerged with the honor of blocking the plans of the leaders, as his personal popularity made the delegates stampede to him and nominate him for bailiff of the police court over C. L. Otto. George Weissenger, Mayor Grinstead's defeated opponent, remained away, as did friends of Senator Bradley and the anti-Grinstead men.

Has Right to Expel a Member.

The court of appeals in a most exhaustive opinion reversed the Jefferson circuit court in the case of the Louisville Board of Fire Underwriters vs. Charles Thurston Johnson, holding that the board of underwriters has the right to expel a member from the organization where he accepts employment as an agent from an insurance company which is also represented by an agent who is also a member of the underwriters.

Novel Point of Law Decided.

The court of appeals decided a novel point of law in the case of the Philadelphia Casualty Co. vs. the Cannon & Byers Millinery Co., of Louisville, and reversed the judgment of the lower court, in which judgment had been rendered against the casualty company on a "credit bond," which indemnified the millinery company against loss not exceeding $3,000, which it might sustain by reason of credit extended to its customers between July 1, 1903, and July 1, 1904. At the end of the period covered by the policy the millinery company claimed that it had sustained a loss in excess of $3,000, and demanded payment of the full amount of the indemnity provided for in the policy. The insurance company denied liability, and the millinery company brought suit on the bond.

WEDDING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

Last Thursday morning, a handsome young couple, giving their names as A. M. Horne and Miss Mary E. Wilmes, and claiming Newport as their home, came to Walton on the L. & N. Railroad train, and going to the law office of Jno. L. Vest, solicited his aid in making their two happy hearts one at the hymeneal altar, but specified that the ceremony must be performed by a justice of the peace because the bride-elect was a communicant of the Catholic church and objected to a marriage ceremony by a Protestant minister. Squire John H. Watson was willing to officiate in his most affable manner, but under the recent legal enactments concerning marriage ceremonies by magistrates, an order must be entered of record in the county court, but this was duly arranged by calling up County Judge Casey at Burlington, who very obligingly entered the order of record. [illegible] no trouble. [illegible] Clerk [illegible] could be obtained. Deputy Clerk O. S. Whitson at Verona, was called up, but on account of the youth of the parties and the fact of their being strangers, he refused to issue a license. Then W. T. Loomis, Deputy County Clerk of Kenton county, was called up by telephone and he consented to issue the license by the contracting couple going to his office at Independence and making the request in person. The young couple drove over to Independence in post haste and on their return with the required document, repaired to the office of Jno. L. Vest, where Squire Watson was summoned, and in the presence of Mr. Vest and his stenographer, C. Presley Adams, the young couple were united in a very pleasing ceremony, chiefly because it was brief, by Squire Watson. Quite a number of persons requested permission to be present to witness the ceremony, and one young man even went so far as to ask if he could kiss the pretty bride at the conclusion of the ceremony, but the young folks said nay to all entreaties, insisting that they desired privacy, and only sufficient witnesses to meet the requirements of the law. Mr. and Mrs. Horne left for Cincinnati on the Q. & C. train that evening.

A. O. Johnson and Miss Curry and Miss Brown, of Cincinnati, spent Sunday here, guests of Claud Ford and his mother, Mrs. Mollie Ford.

Mr and Mrs. Frank Kemper, Mrs. Julius Fleischman, wife of ex-mayor and Mrs. Fleischman, of Cincinnati, Harry Stephens and George Marshall, all of Cincinnati, were guests at the Atlas hotel, Sunday, making the trip in an automobile.

Judge and Mrs. J. G. Tomlin are enjoying the delights of a visit at Atlantic City, New Jersey, making the trip from Indianapolis. Judge Tomlin writes that the country through which they passed is the picture of beauty, activity and prosperity, adding that Walton looks small at a distance, but becomes dearer as distance increases. Likewise our business and doings look small compared with the great aggregation, but then I always console myself that it is net results that count. A trip from home always does me good by making me appreciate my home and home people all the more; so I shall return ready to help push along the many, many things that need doing in good old Kentucky; the roads, the schools, the town, the land—all need improving.

The pooled wool of Kenton, Campbell and Pendleton counties was sold here Monday to C. W. Stewart, president of the Huntington Produce Co. of Huntington, W. V. Pendleton county was represented by Samuel Rouse; Ernest Durad and Jessie McNay; Campbell county, by George Gosney, and Kenton county, by Eugene L. Mann, L. C. North and Jos. Coleman. These gentlemen representing the pooled wool of these counties, met here Monday and received bids, and Mr. Stewart was the successful bidder, his prices being as follows: 34½ cents per pound for good wool; 28 cents for fleece grown, dead wool, black and light bur wool; 25 cents for heavy bur and Merino wool. The purchase aggregates between 50,000 and 60,000 pounds, and the Kenton county wool pool is to be delivered at Walton, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 8th and 9th.

There has been considerable agitation over the proposed street improvement, the spreading of screenings and the application of liquid asphalt as a surface matter to keep down the dust in dry weather, the opposition claiming that the additional 30 cents advalorem tax to be levied being burdensome, though the entire town tax would be only 50 cts. advalorem. To show what would be accomplished and the value of such a elegant thoroughfare, John L. Vest, leader of the street improvement, proposes to make a section of the street as it would appear when finished. The Lexington Turnpike Co. furnished the stone for the body of the street, and W. S. Beverly, agent of the L. and N. railway, the screenings, and Mr. Vest is now building the section of highway in modern method to convince the skeptical what a real road means.

Pooled Wool Sold.

The pooled wool in this county was sold by sealed bids at Bullittsville, last Thursday, in the presence of a large crowd. Quite a number of bids were in, but S. C. Hicks, of Walton, having the best bid in he became the purchaser. It was the intention of the parties to keep the price a secret, but it has been learned that it is 34 cents a pound, and 25 cents a pound for the rejections. It is believed that the pool carries between 40,000 and 45,000 pounds, and Mr. Hick's purchase is the largest single purchase of wool ever made in this county. Some of the wool had been sold at 25 cents a pound, but it was to remain in the pool. W. Lee Gaines, of Walton, and R. Lee Huey, of Big Bone are interested in the purchase.

Wm. Silbernagle, Taylor Darr and Joe Abell left, Wednesday, for their homes in Louisville, their work at the distillery here being ended for this season.

Misses Mattie Leek, Ethel Sturgeon and Lucille Berkshire came Saturday from Lexington where they have been attending the Hamilton Female College.

The Children's Day exercises at the Methodist Church, Sunday morning, were a success in every particular. The children certainly deserve credit for their singing and recitations, which were enjoyed by the large crowd that was present.

The Str. Pauline will make an extra trip to Aurora, Thursday evening for the benefit of those who wish to attend the Commencement of the Aurora High School. There will be a number of graduates, among them are Johnnie Mae Terrill and Henry Lee Grant, of this place.

The memorial services of the Odd-Fellows' and Knight of Pythias held at the cemetery, Sunday afternoon, was attended by a very large crowd from Aurora, Lawrenceburg, Hebron and other towns. The speaking was grand and everyone enjoyed it and it was a benefit to all. Prof. Willis Tandy was the master of ceremonies. Rev. S. J. Bradley spoke in behalf of the K. of P.'s and Rev. R. H. Carter in behalf of the Odd-Fellows. Mr. John Russe, of Lawrenceburg, and Rev. Noel Galnes, of Frankfort, made interesting talks. The column consisted of about 400 among whom were about 150 visiting brethren of both lodges. They were headed by the Aurora military band which provided excellent music both on the trip to the cemetery and the return.

The people of this place had a genuine love feast, Sunday, when Rev. Noel Gaines, the noted evangelist of Frankfort, who held such a successful meeting here in the fall, was again in our midst. The service in the morning at the Methodist Church was largely attended. His subject was "The World's Monument or the Sign of the Times as I see them," and was as good a sermon as any one would want to hear. In the evening he delivered another excellent sermon at the Christian church entitled "The Unavoidable Christ." All available space was occupied and the evening service was a strong repetition of the morning service, the theme throughout being, "Love Thy Neighbor as Thy Self." The singing was fine and the singers deserve full credit for the excellent music. The christian unity and fellowship is certainly marvelous and we thank God for it.

Everybody was busy with tobacco plants yesterday.

The death angel has visited our community again and taken from our midst Mrs. Julia Ann Elizabeth Utz (nee Rouse), whose death occured the 26th ult. She married Thomas A. Utz April 15, 1866. To them one son was born, Harvey F. Utz. By the death of her husband, a few years since, she was left without a companion and made her home with her son and his wife, who manifested great interest in her welfare and did everything in their power to make her happy in her declining years. She had been a sufferer of a complication of diseases for about two years, but she bore her suffering very patiently and was perfectly reconciled to the master's will, and expressed herself as being willing to go when the summons came. She united with Hopeful church when about 14 years old and was a true and faithful member until death. She was a regular attendant and always found at her post of duty when ever circumstances would permit, possessing many characteristics of a true and devoted christian. In the death of Mrs. Utz the family loses a devoted parent, the community a good neighbor and the church a good and influential member. The funeral services were conducted by Pastor Walterick at Hopeful last Friday, after which the remains were buried in Hopeful cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community. The family extends their heartfelt and sincere thanks to the friends who so kindly assisted during the illness of their mother.

Born, on the 30th ult., to Ransom Ryle and wife, of the Locust Grove neighborhood, a 12 pound girl.

RABBIT HASH.

Mrs. Myra Stephens was quite ill Sunday.

Mrs. Sylvia Hillis is visiting Miss Fannie Bailey.

Miss Bettie Dolph is teaching a small select school.

The funeral of O. Y. Kelly, who died on the 26th inst., was conducted by the K. of P.'s and Rev. Bradley. Quite a large crowd was present.

Mrs. Kate Kelly, widow of the late O. Y. Kelly, will move her household goods to the home of her father, Z. T. Stephens, and make that her future home.

A Thrilling Rescue.

How Bert R. Lean, of Cheny, Wash. was saved from a frightful death is a story to thrill the world. A hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to California, but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Croup and Whooping Cough its supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, Ky.

He Builds Excellent Launches.

A ride in a gasoline launch constructed by Edward Aylor, of Taylorsport, is a convincing proof that he is a master of his trade. His launches have a very graceful appearance on the water, and their construction is such as to reduce to the minimum the rolling motion that is objectionable in many other builds of launches, while their speed always comes up to the requirement. Mr. Aylor finds ready sale for his boats, and has one or two under way all the time.

Gas Struck at Hebron.

At a depth of 125 feet the well that was being driven for the use of the Hebron creamery, developed into a gas well, and further work was abandoned and the well was plugged. Salt water was also obtained. The striking of gas created considerable excitement in the neighborhood, but the strike is not considered anything better than a pocket.

Religious Items.

Rev. C. M. Brooks will preach at Bullittsburg Baptist church on Saturday, June 5th at 2:30 p. m., and on Sunday following at 11 a. m.

Rev. H. J. Holsclaw, of Louisville, will preach in the Burlington Baptist church next Sunday morning and at night. The members are especially requested to attend these services, as are all others.

Elmer Conley and family, Sidney Gaines and son, Cecil, and Edson Riddell spent Monday afternoon on Gunpowder creek, fully equipped with poles, lines, hooks and a generous supply of bait, but they were unable to hook any of the monsters that tradition teaches abide in that stream. The only excitement during the afternoon resulted from Riddell fall in the creek a couple of times, which was not many, considering he was on the creek nearly half a day.

Joners Delph, who resides with his his son, Wilson, about a mile and a half from town, has been at the threshhold of death for several weeks still lingers with very little apparent change in his condition. Considering his advanced age and the very limited quantity of nourishment he has taken in the last five or six weeks, the tenacity with which he clings to life is wonderful. Mr. Delph is one of the oldest men in this part of the county.

The Burlington High school closed its first session last Friday. Rev. Edgar Riley was principal, and Profs. Florence and Huey, teachers. It is hoped that their labors to establish a number one school here will bring forth fruit and that a better patronage will be given the school next fall and winter.

Being asked, almost daily, if I can repair a certain article of jewelry, I take this plan of letting my friends know that I am prepared to repair anything that any jewelry store will take for repairs, no matter how difficult. R. W. CLARK, Jeweler.

Many are not done planting corn.

Games of ball next Saturday—Hebron at Burlington, and Belleview at Big Bone.

Theodore Birkle and wife, of Bullittsville, are rejoicing over the recent arrival of a 12 pound girl at their home.

The young ladies of Bullittsville Christian church will give an ice cream and strawberry festival at the Grange Hall next Friday night.

The Union Creamery Association will hold its annual election of officers at 2 p. m. next Saturday.

L. H. VOSHELL, Secretary.

Many of the farmers instead of observing Monday as a holiday put in the time removing the decorations with which nature had provided their corn fields.

The man who works his land thoroughly and has it in excellent condition is always in the best shape to meet just such weather as has prevailed for several days.

The strawberry and ice cream festival which the ladies of the Big Bone Missionary Society was to have given at Big Bone Grange Hall last Saturday, will be given next Saturday, June 5th, from 4 to 11 p. m. All are invited.

The failure of the three rural carriers to make their rounds, Monday, on account of that being observed as Decoration Day, cut out the contributions of several corrospondents who always send in that day, consequently the supply of neighborhood news is limited this week.

Belleview Graded School district will vote from 8 a. m., to 4 p. m., on the 12th day of this month on a proposition to issue bonds to the amount of $4,000—each bond to be of the denomination of $100—the proceeds of the bonds to be used to provide a suitable building and grounds for the Graded School in that district.

This part of the country could get along with less rain than it has been having for several weeks, but don't kick brother, remember the long dry spell last year, and keep the gutters leading to the cistern in order that you may have a considerable accumulation of aqua in case there should be a repetition of 1908's weather performance.

There were several very close flushes in the Democratic primary election in Kenton county last Saturday. W. A. Price, of Erlanger, won the nomination for representative in the legislature from the county district. Here's to you, Albert, and may your career as a law maker be beneficial to the public and a pleasure to you.

Could Not be Better.

No one has ever made a salve, ointment, lotion or balm to compare with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the one perfect healer, of Cuts, Corns, Burns, Bruises, Sores, Scalds, Boils, Ulcers, Eczema, Salt Rheum. For Sore Eyes, Cold Sores, Chapped Hands its supreme. Infallible for piles. Following is the honor roll of Bullittsburg school, Mrs. Fannie E. Kirtley teacher:

Grade 9.—Wilber Rice, Wallace Rice, Mattie Kreylich.

Grade 6.—Carroll Cropper, Martha Randall, Lallie Rice.

Grade 3.—Kirtley Cropper, Melvin Gaines, Myrtle Hall.

Grade 2.—Alice Walton.

Prof. A. M. Yealy, of Florence, was in town yesterday. He says that nine voters out of every ten in the Florence proposed graded school district will vote in favor of the proposition. Mr. Yealy has been principal of the Florence school for many years and understands the educational pulse of that community pretty thoroughly, therefore his forecast of the result of the election can be depended on as pretty close, to the actual result at the polls.

The RECORDER'S efficient Petersburg correspondent gives a full account of the very impressive memorial exercises conducted at Petersburg last Sunday afternoon by the local lodges of Odd-Fellows and Knights of Pythias. Several members of the two lodges are sleeping their last sleep in the beautiful cemetery near the town, and once every year the brethren decorate their last resting places with beautiful flowers, on which occasion the speeches and ceremonies are of a most impressive character.

Women Who Are Envied.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation or Kidney trouble shows in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Revs. Carter, Riley and Florence are engaged in a very interesting protracted meeting at the Belleview Christian church. Cabble Maurer and Ewing Flick united with the church Sunday night.

T. J. Judge, of Union, was a visitor to Burlington yesterday.

Leopard Hunting Alone in Bechuanaland

By Percy Selous

SOME years ago, I found myself stranded in Bechuanaland, where I had followed a force of irregular cavalry, raised by Col. Methuen, for operating, should the exigency arise, against the Transvaal Boers, whose filibustering raids across the border were getting worse and worse.

To cut my story short, however, and get down to a fast series of single-handed leopard kills, after following the Dragoons up as far as Mafeking to no purpose, I returned to Kimberley and the Orange river. I conceived the idea of constructing a raft and thus transporting my few necessary effects, camping on the banks as inclination led me, or, as I fancied the locality favored sport. I had had too much experience among floating logs whilst lumbering in America not to feel at home at this kind of work; and all in all, though I did not travel far, I spent one of the most exciting trips I ever had. All along either side of this fine river is a wide belt of "wait-a-bit" thorns and bush timber, on which lovely green beetles played in great profusion. I caught numbers, every one of which brought me in 3d in Cape Town, for jewelry purposes. I had seen beetles set up in a similar fashion in Rio de Janeiro and so had an eye to possible business; as also, we used to get alligators' teeth down in Alahama and Florida, but these creatures have got so scarce now that it hardly pays to hunt them.

Having got everything fixed on my raft, and as the river hereabouts was familiar to me, I had no difficulty in making a landing, as I had proposed some 20 miles further down, passing the ford to Hope Town on my way. Among other things I had with me a hammock and a poncho which I had used out in the Banda Orientale, both of which, besides being of the greatest use, went into very small compass. After taking a cup of coffee without milk and a snack or two of spring-hok, I literally turned in, with my carbine beside me and my dog curled up at my feet, to be lulled to sleep by sounds as familiar as those heard on a summer day at home.

Blinded by a Sand Storm.

As the sun rose it speedily dissipated the river mist, and a little way out on the veldt and beyond the timber, it was as suitry as ever. I could spy some small specks away to the southward, and as a fresh bit of venison would be an agreeable change, I started after what I knew would furnish me therewith, if I could manage to circumvent them. This was not particularly difficult, for I could keep myself covered by one ant-hill or another, and I got my buck all right, sending the rest bounding away with tremendous jumps. The ominous darkening of the horizon had not escaped my notice, but almost before I was aware of it the hot sand came stinging like so much small shot against my face. In such cases, the only thing to be done is to throw yourself flat on your chest and hold your breath till the hot blast has blown over. The sand storm did not last many minutes, but the thunderstorm immediately burst in such a way as it only does in South Africa, and I speak from experience both of this, as well as other parts of the world. It was over almost as soon as it came, and for a short space the sandy veldt looked like a sheet of water, which, however, was sucked up in no time, the sun bursting forth in all its splendor and drying me, treached as I was, before I could get my buck back to camp.

After skinning my buck and making the hind portions into ham, and getting a meal of fresh meat, I set out along the bank of the river to see if I could hit upon any leopard spoor. I had not gone far before I came to the remains of a porcupine. Leopards appear to have a great partiality for the flesh of these animals, and as they are common enough along the river, it doubtless accounts for the presence of their persecutors. I passed the rest of the day without finding any more signs, although I felt satisfied that there were some leopards in the neighborhood, so I could only postpone my search until the morrow. In the morning I got afloat once more, and dropped about four miles down to the place I had turned back from the day before. This did not occupy long, and I was soon fast again in a kind of backwater, with my traps once more on dry land. I was eager to follow up the leopard, which I was confident had gone down, not up, the river; indeed, I had hardly proceeded a quarter of a mile before I found pug-marks, and quite fresh ones, too, where he had gone down to drink. This time the heavy rains had not washed all trace of spoor and scent away, and my dog was able to pick it up easily. Seeing that my carbine was all right and everything in its place to my hand, I followed "Snap" with some difficulty, for I did not want him to come to an untimely end, which might not be improbable if I was unable to keep him back somewhere within bounds.

Following the Leopard's Spoor.

The spoor led along the bank for some distance close to the river, at which the leopard had occasionally halted, either to drink, or to watch for a stray fish; for these latter they will scoop out with the dexterity of a raccoon, as I myself once saw. In fact, they will eat almost anything that moves—young birds, and for the matter of that old ones, too, when they can surprise them. A cat which has run wild at home is a fair example of what the leopard is on a very much larger scale.

The dog now came to a point at the foot of a tree, and after some search, for the foliage was very luxuriant, I could distinguish the leopard lying full length along a branch, his head between his paws, his eyes being just discernible, and that was all. I could not get a good shot at him, the angle was too acute to fire with safety at his head, and unless I got directly under him I could not see him at all, whilst the limb he was stretched out upon practically protected him at all vital points. Now and again he would just crane over a little and then draw back before I could get a proper sight, making all the time a snarling, purring noise. Under the circumstances it would have been risky to have attempted a shot, so I was compelled to wait until he gave me some sort of a chance. To have had him come tumbling down wounded was not a bit to my fancy.

First Shot Brings Him Down.

Once or twice I raised my weapon, only to lower it, feeling it was safer to wait. On a sudden he raised his head, as if some sound at a distance had arrested his attention, for he gazed right away into space. This was my opportunity—not a very fine one certainly, for there was quite a network of small branches intervening—but I got a pretty fair sight and let him have it. Down he came almost before I could jump to one side, with a thump that would have stunned him, one would imagine, even if the bullet had not smashed his jaw and gone out through the top of his head, bursting an eye in its course. He was as dead as a door nail, and a beautifully marked full-grown young male, his teeth being perfect. As I was only about a mile from camp, I got his skin off at once, and taking the skull went back and dressed the skin there and then, before it should get covered with flyblows.

I lost no time, however, in getting back to the spot where I had killed him, for it struck me there might be something more than I knew about in his having had his attention diverted from myself and the dog. So I cast about once more, still going along the river, letting "Snap," who was well up to the work, do the hunting, whilst now and again I added a brilliant beetle to my collecting box. Passing two or three gullies without making anything further out, I began to think that it must have been the whistle of an antelope that had attracted the leopard's notice. He showed, however, the same intentness of gaze as I remembered in a jaguar I once killed under somewhat similar circumstances, and whose dying roar brought a second one on my track in less than no time, giving me a stiffish scuffle. It is in cases such as these that the science of woodcraft comes in handy, careful notice of surrounding signs and actions usually enabling one to come to a correct conclusion. I had been keeping fairly close to the river-bank, for I held to my theory that there was another leopard not far from where I shot the last; so I turned about, after a couple of miles, and worked back along the margin of the hush, near the veldt, carefully beating any likely-looking spots. Half way or so back was a dense mass of thorns a fine broadside and I fired, dropping her at once, though she scrambled to her fore feet in an instant. I could see that her hind parts were paralyzed; she was shot through the spine; and as she turned to gnaw the wound I quickly got another cartridge in and hit her through the neck.

Getting the Cubs.

But this time the two cubs had recovered from their surprise, and as the old leopard appeared to be done for I gave one of them a bullet in the chest, the other turning tail and scampering off into the hush with "Snap" (who had got loose) at his heels, whilst I stepped into the open and let the one I had wounded have another ball, catching him in the orifice of the ear and killing him instantly. As I approached them the old one rolled over, and I was about to fire at her again, when I noticed that her eye was already glazed, and it would only be wasting ammunition. After a hasty glance of admiration I left them as they lay and hurried after the yelping terrier, who from the sound appeared to have come to a halt, though I could hear no snarling. Before, however, I could catch up, the leopard must have made another start. The scrub was thick just here, and the everlasting "wait-a-bit" thorns retarded my progress considerably, besides punishing me not a little. Still I pushed on into the open veldt just in time to see the two making across for the timber on the other side of the bend in the river. I was beginning to feet a bit winded, and was not sorry when further angry yelps and growling showed that the cub had again been brought to bay. Getting up as quickly as possible, I found that the dog had been having a rough time of it. He was scored badly down the side, and instead of being a white terrier was a ghastly red one, though for the time being it did not appear to inconvenience him much. He was vigorously barking and jumping around a lot of loose boulders, among which the leopard had evidently taken refuge. I could not, however, induce him to go in, and although I have had several good terriers for this kind of shooting none of them cared to go to ground after such game. I began to fear I should have to give him up, but got together a lot of the driest herbage I could find, and making a couple of squibs by extracting the powder from two cartridges, I went to work to try and make him hoit, as his cover was not very large. Cutting as long a stick as I could find, I took a page out of my pocket diary and rolled the squibs in it, binding them to the thin end of the stick, which I bandaged thickly round with dry grass and leaves for a yard or more, and then pushed it in where the leopard had entered and ignited it well all around, also heaping more dry stuff about the opening so as to make as much smother as possible. The smoke soon began to escape from the crevices, though the leopard did not appear to take any notice of it; but as soon as the fuses began to fizz and sputter, it was more than he could stand, and out he dashed, almost upsetting me in his rush. I had, however, picked up my carbine and fired at him, just as he was disappearing into the cover. I distinctly heard the pat of the bullet and was about to follow, when I saw that the poor dog demanded my attention, so picked him up. The scratches were ugly ones, and I could see that if I did not attend to them at once I might lose him; I therefore carried him back to camp and washed, stitched, and dressed his wounds. I returned afterwards, to try and follow the leopard, but could not find any further trace of him, except blood marks. I therefore went and skinned the other two, and made up my mind to leave the cub I had wounded until the morrow. I tracked him up next day and found him dead, about a quarter of a mile from where I had fired at him.

This reminds me of an escapade I had with one of these creatures some time previously, further south. As is so frequently the case, I had been much disturbed during the night by prowling animals, which I found out were leopards. I was exasperated by the loss of my best dog, and made up my mind, if possible, to get a fine skin and avenge his death at one and the same time; so making a hurried breakfast, and leaving my two Kaffir boys in charge of the skerm, I set out with the only dog I now had left. The spoor, which was plain enough in the sand, led right away towards the river, which on either side is bordered for a quarter of a mile or so with "wait-a-bit" thorns and underbrush. After going a mile or more my dog showed special eagerness, and pulled up at a tree, the bark of which was all scored by the claws of leopards and was evidently used by them continually for stretching their talons. A lot of porcupine quills also lay around, showing that the leopard had recently made a meal, of which I was glad, for I thought I should be more likely to find him lazy and lying up, and hence easier to manage. A little further on I came to a kloof or ravine, which I had to descend and ascend.

Attacked by the Savage Beast.

Before I reached the top, the dog began barking and I hurried on, as well as I could over the loose stones, for I did not want to lose my only remaining dog. He, however, came yelping back, just as I gained the top of the bank, and at the same time I caught sight of the leopard, which was making across the open for a patch of thorns a couple of hundred yards distant. I was somewhat out of breath from scrambling over the uneven ground, but, taking as careful aim as I could, I fired. I knew I had hit him all right, even if he had not stopped and bitten at the wound, but the shot was too far back as well as too low. At the same instant he caught sight of me, whilst I, not relishing his looks, hastily pushed in another cartridge. I had not my trusty "Winchester" then, or the leopard would not have served me as he did. The weapon I was using was a converted Enfield carbine, which, though a splendid shooter, only took one shell and required capping. I could not get the cap on before he was upon me, and over we both went in a heap—I undermost. He got my left arm between his teeth, and I could feel his fangs crunching, but I seized my long hunting knife, and managed to get it under his chin and gave a frantic gash which almost cut his head off.

In the meantime my dog had regained his composure; since he had seen two of his comrades flattened out by leopards he had often turned tail, but he was very useful in tracking them. I had rolled the skin up and was just about starting back for camp, when the dog again attracted my attention, acting as though he had picked up a fresh scent; and although I felt pretty sick, still I could not resist the temptation and followed him first of all hanging up the skin on a thorn bush. The dog held on and I followed as well as I could for perhaps another mile, fortunately along the wooded ground the best part of the time, so that I was shaded to some extent from the burning sunbeams which under ordinary circumstances would have caused me no inconvenience, but now almost prostrated me. I doubtless had lost considerably more blood than I imagined, but the sudden renewed barking of the dog put new life into me and I hurried on. The leopard had hurried on to some rocky ground, where he had evidently located himself. As he would not probably leave his stronghold for any dog, I sat down and rested a while. I also examined the breech of my carbine and arranged things as well as I could, so that no repetition of the last "contretemps" should occur. The dog was working at a crevice in the rocks in which I had calculated the leopard was ensconced, and I cautiously approached to investigate. I could, however, neither hear nor see anything at first, but after a while, as my eyesight got accustomed to the gloom, I made out two balls of fire. They might have been one yard, they might have been 50 yards away, I could not tell—that did not signify—and taking steady aim between them, I let go. The report was so deafening that I could not have heard any other sound had there been one, but the "eyes" had gone out when the smoke cleared away and all was still. After waiting a while, I cut a limb or two as straight as I could find, and splicing them into one long one, pushed the pole up into the recesses of the aperture, and withdrawing it, after twisting it around against some soft substance, found, sure enough, leopard's fur on the end. I now felt no hesitation about going in, though this was more easily said than done. I could with difficulty squeeze myself through the narrow opening, and to do so caused me excruciating pain. Once through, however, I had more room, and soon reached my quarry, which I got at last into the daylight, not a little glad to be out of the business so well. I then had to skin her—a female, and doubtless mate to the one I had killed in the morning. Then returning to where I had left the other skin I made tracks for the wagon.

CRIPPLED WITH SCIATICA

Caused by Disordered Action of the Kidneys.

Samuel D. Ingraham, 2402 E. Main St., Lewiston, Idaho, says: "For two years I was crippled with sciatic rheumatism in my thighs and could not get about without crutches. The kidney secretions became irregular, painful, and showed a heavy sediment. Doctors were not helping me so I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I improved soon, and after a while was entirely free from my suffering. I am in the best of health now and am in debt to Doan's Kidney Pills for saving my life."

As the Boy Saw the Lesson.

Prof. Charles Zeublin of the University of Chicago was discussing at a dinner the greatest paintings of the world.

"The legends that are beautiful and immortal," he said, "have in them turths that we all, according to our kind, take home. This is true in likeness of immortal works of art—pictures, poems, songs. For different people they have different messages. For instance, in my native Pendleton some of the mothers used to cut the children's hair. They did it with shears and a bowl. The operation was often painful, and the result was never elegant.

"In Sunday school a Pendleton teacher once told her pupils the tragic story of Samson and Dellah. Then she turned to a little boy:

"'What do you learn, Joe,' she said, 'from the Samson story?'

"'It don't never pay,' piped Joe, 'to have a woman cut a feller's hair.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Is Tired of Praying.

A little girl in St. Louis the other evening was going through the usual form of prayer: "God bless mamma, and papa and make me a good girl," and so on, when all at once she semed to come to a decision. "Now that is the last time I am going to say that prayer," she said, very gravely, looking at her mother. "You are older than I am and it is your place to ask for all those things and I don't see any use in two people's asking the same thing." Since then she has firmly refused to pray, insisting that it is her mother's place to ask God for blessings.

Quite True.

Marian, a little three-year-old, is very stubborn. One day, when she was fretful, her mother, wishing to engage her mind, attracted her attention to a cow in a vacant lot and asked what it was.

Marian replied, "hoss" (horse) and stubbornly refused to give in. Her mother, wishing to get a correct answer without scolding, asked: "What eats grass besides a horse?" "More hoss," was the quick response.—Delineator.

OVER THE FENCE

Neighbor Says Something.

The front yard fence is a famous council place on pleasant days. Maybe to chat with some one along the street, or for friendly gossip with next door neighbor. Sometimes it is only small talk but other times neighbor has something really good to offer.

An old resident of Baird, Texas, got some mighty good advice this way once.

He says:

"Drinking coffee left me nearly dead with dyspepsia, kidney disease and bowel trouble, with constant pains in my stomach, back and side, and so weak I could scarcely walk.

"One day I was chatting with one of my neighbors about my trouble and told her I believed coffee hurt me. Neighbor said she knew lots of people to whom coffee was poison and she pleaded with me to quit it and give Postum a trial. I did not take her advice right away but tried a change of climate, which did not do me any good. Then I dropped coffee and took up Postum.

"My improvement began immediately and I got better every day I used Postum.

"My bowels became regular in two weeks, all my pains were gone. Now I am well and strong and can eat anything I want to without distress. All of this is due to my having quit coffee, and to the use of Postum regularly.

"My son who was troubled with indigestion thought that if Postum helped me so, it might help him. It did, too, and he is now well and strong again.

"We like Postum as well as we ever liked the coffee and use it altogether in my family in place of coffee and all keep well." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in Pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

DELIVERED FROM NINEVEH

Tobit's Faith in the Prophet's Word Rewarded.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Edson.)

Based on the Apocryphal Book of Tobit, chapter 14.

The Book of Tobit.—View of the Book.—It is held by Bible students that this Book of Tobit cannot be regarded as a true history. It is a didactic narrative, and the whole point of the story lies in the moral lessons which it conveys, and not in the supposed historical incidents which are mentioned. In fact, like the Book of Judith, which follows Tobit in the collection, it is considered as belonging to the earliest specimens of historical fiction. In modern times, the moral excellence of the book has been rated highly except in the heat of controversy. Nowhere else is there preserved so complete and beautiful a picture of the domestic life of the Jews after the return from captivity to Jerusalem. There are 14 chapters composing the book.

SERMONETTE

"And now, my son, depart out of Nineveh, because that those things which the prophet Jonah spake shall surely come to pass."

God's words never fail.

As man counts time there seems an endless period between prophecy and fulfillment, but at last the judgment falls and Scripture is fulfilled.

Here we find a devout Jew of Nineveh certain of a great city's doom because hundreds and hundreds of years before God's prophet had declared that ultimately the city should be destroyed.

All around him was gayety and life, a great city, with massive walls and strong ruler. Could such place meet destruction?

Such might have been the question which reasonably could have arisen in Tobit's heart.

But when it came to a choice between what appeared to his outward vision and the express declaration of God's word, he believed God, even though he could not understand or tell how those things were to come to pass.

It was the old story of Noah and the flood. No sign of the approaching deluge, but God said it would come and it did. But even though Noah preached a hundred years to warn the people of the judgment of God, they turned a deaf ear to the prophet's words and—perished in the flood.

So probably Tobit sought to warn at least the people of his own race in Nineveh, but just as there were many Jews in Jerusalem who heeded not the warning to flee and perished miserably in the doomed city, so in Nineveh many perished who might, like Tobias and his family, have found safe refuge in another place.

What lesson for us? This, surely: That just as the warning of God was spoken to the doomed city of Nineveh, so God is speaking his warnings to the souls of men to-day. They may trifle with this word, but it cannot delay or prevent the final fulfillment. The few will heed the warning. The many will remain in their present condition and perish.

THE STORY.

NO HAPPIER or more comfortable home was to be found in all Nineveh than that of Tobias and his wife Sara. To them six sons had been born, and the aged father Tobit had laid his hand of blessing upon each head, and had been permitted to see each boy well started on the road to manhood. The aged Anna was living, too, and no more contented and peaceful family circle could be found than was made up of this aged and godly man Tobit, his wife, their son Tobias, his wife Sara, and their six sons.

Many was the time that the old man ran back in memory to the day years before when with tears streaming from the eyes which saw naught he had bade farewell to his son as he had started off on that long journey after the wealth he had left in Media. How good the years had been since then. At that time he had never expected to live to embrace his son again, and now, lo and behold, with recovered sight he had seen his son established in his own home and grandchildren about his knee. Those had been prosperous years. The goodly portion of wealth with which Tobias had returned to the city and had placed in his father's hands had multiplied abundantly, and not only had they been able to help the Jews in distress, but had accumulated a comfortable competence, so that Tobit and his son Tobias were among those of the city of Nineveh possessed of wealth.

But the great prosperity of the later years had not turned the heart of father or son away from the God of Israel, and Tobit, the father, found new and fresh delight in going over and over the parchments of the sacred writings which he had in his possession, for he was a man of learning and could read and write like a scribe.

"My son," he exclaimed one day, after he had called Tobias to his side, "the day approaches when I shall depart, for I am very old. Tarry not in Nineveh, for the day approacheth when it shall be destroyed."

"Why, father, how can that be?" exclaimed Tobias in wonder; "has some tidings come to thee of threatened danger? Why, as I passed through the city this morning the thought came to me of the security of the great city, and I felt glad that we dwelt here and not in some of the unsheltered towns of the borderland where life and property are in constant jeopardy."

"Nay, my son, you misunderstand. No tidings have come to me from without, but here," and he drew from the folds of his garment a scroll, "is the warning."

"Ah, the sacred scroll," exclaimed Tobias, reverently, as he bent over his father's knee and listened while the old man with trembling fingers traced the words which his lips read from the manuscript in his hand.

"Go into Media, my son, for surely I believe these things which Jonah the prophet spake concerning Nineveh, that it shall be overthrown. But peace shall prevail in Media."

"And what of our brethren who dwell here?"

"Take the message to them, that they perish not," earnestly spoke Tobit.

Thus admonished Tobias went forth among his brethren in the great city of Nineveh, but they laughed him to scorn, saying:

"This cannot be, for no greater city hath been built than Nineveh."

"But it is the word of the prophet Jonah," urged Tobias, "and we know that God's word through his prophet will be fulfilled even though apparent safety is on every hand."

But his brethren would not heed his words, but did with the greater intensity make light of his warnings, declaring that it was time to flee when danger threatened.

Disheartened and saddened Tobias returned home and related all that had taken place, saying, as he continued:

"Father, I know that thou hast long been familiar with this prophecy of Jonah, for it is thy favorite reading. Thou art certain that thou hast understood him aright?"

"Yea, my son, and not only does the prophet speak of the doom of this great Gentile city, but also of the returning greatness of our beloved Jerusalem."

"Say on, father, for I am listening," said Tobias in a low voice, as his father paused and sat with a yearning, far-away look in his eyes.

"I was thinking, son, how glorious that day would be. I shall not see it. But if thou obey my voice and find refuge in Media, it may come to thee," and again the far-away, yearning look came into his eyes, for to the devout Jew there was no greater longing than that of seeing Jerusalem restored, and the Jews again gathered there.

"No," again spoke up the father, "it will not be for me or thy mother, but perhaps for thee. Bury me decently, and thy mother with me here in Nineveh. Then thou shalt not tarry longer here, but shall go hence into Media. And now, my son, show thou thyself kind and merciful, for remember what alms doeth. I do recall the case of Aman and how he did repay the kindness of Achiacharus who brought him up with unkindly deeds and withheld alms in the time of his need. But now both are departed this life, and Achiacharus hath gone to his reward and Aman to his punishment. Let it not be so with thee. Let righteousness rule in thy life, for it bringeth its sure reward."

The days sped on and the aged Tobias grew more and more feeble, until at last one day like a tired child he fell into that sleep which had its awakening upon the other side of death's vale. And the devoted Anna was not long in following her husband and joining him on the other side. As Tobias laid her away beside the remains of his father, he remembered the words of his father, and prepared to depart from Nineveh.

But ere he went he must go and make one more appeal to his brethren to go with him. Perhaps now they would heed his warning. But no. There were multitudes of excuses why they could not go and why they did not want to go. They did not believe the prophet really meant just what Tobias understood him to say, anyway.

And Tobias could not explain to them or prove to them that he was right, but the memory of his devout father and his implicit trust in the word of God as given by Jonah reassured his heart and he sold his possessions and departed with his wife and children to Ecbatane, to Raguel his father-in-law, where he became old with honor, and he buried his father and mother-in-law honorably, and he inherited their substance, and his father Tobit's. And he himself died in Media, but before he died he heard tidings of the destruction of Nineveh.

Duty-Doing.

The great duty of life is to serve God and men, to render personal service, to give personal sympathy, to be kind and generous and unselfish, to control ourselves and to help others to control themselves; to be faithful with duty-doing wherever we are and at any cost, to set God first in our lives and to get for him the first place in other lives. Our material task is the shell. The motives and purposes and spirit of the soul within are the life. Enfolded in the material tasks to which we are called is a higher, more enduring work—the love and service of the truth of God

NOT A MATTER OF LOYALTY.

Simple But Insuperable Reason Why Subject Could Not Kneel Before His King.

One fancies that few types of men, can, from time to time, have afforded royalty more amusement of a quiet sort than provincial mayors of England. "From the Foreland to Penzance," by Clive Holland, contains the story of a mayor of Weymouth who, during one of the visits of King George to the town, was destined to afford "comic relief" to a ceremony of some importance.

The occasion was the presentation of an address of welcome to the king, and we are told that the mayor, on approaching to present it, to the astonishment and dismay of all, instead of kneeling, as he had been told to do, seized the queen's hand to shake it as he might that of any other lady.

Col. Gwynne, the master of the ceremonies, hurriedly told him of the faux pas, saying: "You should have kneeled, sir."

"Sir, I cannot," was the reply.

"Everybody does, sir," hotly asserted the colonel.

The mayor grew red, and evidently much upset, exclaimed: "Confound it, sir, but I've got a wooden leg!"

History records that "a smile suffused the face of her majesty, and the king laughed outright."—Youth's Companion.

TORE HIS SKIN OFF

In Shreds—Itching Was Intense—Sleep Was Often Impossible.

Cured by Cuticura in Three Weeks.

"At first an eruption of small pustules commenced on my hands. These spread later to other parts of my body, and the itching at times was intense, so much so that I literally tore the skin off in shreds in seeking relief. The awful itching interfered with my work considerably, and also kept me awake nights. I tried several doctors and used a number of different ointments and lotions but received practically no benefit. Finally I settled down to the use of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, with the result that in a few days all itching had ceased and in about three weeks' time all traces of my eruption had disappeared. I have had no trouble of this kind since. H. A. Krutskoff, 5714 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., November 18 and 23, 1907."

The Young Dream.

The light was soft in the conservatory.

"But," said the young girl, nervously plucking to pieces a mauve orchid, "but there are microbes in kisses."

The plashing of the fountain mingled with the low, deep voice of the youth.

"My microbes," he murmured, passionately, "are so lonely!"

A Plea for Bachelors.

There are few people in the community more generous, according to their means, more unselfish, and more self-denying than the much-maligned bachelor class. Why, then, should it be taxed? If a tax is required, let it be levied on the pampered, petted, over-indulged, usually ungrateful married man.—London Daily Graphic.

A $5000 farm that didn't cost a cent

W. B. Northrup, went to the Gulf Coast Country of Texas, last December, to contract for a lot of cabbages. One cabbage crop of 20 acres, on a 41-acre farm, near Brownsville, looked so good to him that he bought the entire farm, including the crop. He paid $125 an acre, the man who sold it agreeing to bring the crop to maturity, gather and deliver it on the cars.

The crop has been shipped; the yield averaged 24,000 pounds to the acre, and brought from $1.75 to $2.00 per hundred—over $8,000 for the crop.

As Mr. Northrup only paid $5,125 for the farm, he now has the farm, his original capital, and a handsome bonus besides. Mr. Northrup was fortunate. It isn't often one finds a man who is willing to sell his farm, after he has it under cultivation, for the crop usually brings more than the land. But there is plenty of similar land in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas, not under cultivation, that you can buy for a trifle, compared with its earning capacity. Why don't you go there and make an investigation while the land is within your reach? Next year it will cost more.

A trip of investigation will be inexpensive. It is your opportunity. Don't wait.

Burlington 12—Bellevue 6.

The Boone County Base Ball League opened the season last Saturday with games at Belleview and Hebron.

Belleview's battery was in a badly crippled condition, Sandford having to be succeeded in the box at the end of the third inning by Wingate, McCarty had a very bad hand, but was game and caught the nine innings. Conner pitched and Slayback caught a fine game, but did not get perfect support at all times by considerable. Following is the score:

Burlington	1	0	1	0	1	4	3	2	0	—12
Hits	0	2	2	0	2	2	4	0	0	—12
Belleview	3	0	0	0	0	1	0	2	0	—6
Hits	1	0	0	1	0	1	2	0	0	—5

Base hits—Slayback 2, Tolin, Craig 2, White 2, Conner, Souther 3, Clore, Stucky, Berkshire 2, Smith 2; 2 two base hits—Slayback, Conner; Struck out by Conner 12, by Sandford 3, by Wingate 7; base on balls off of Conner 2, off of Wingate 2; left on bases, Burlington 5, Belleview 4; umpires, Rogers and Smith.

Big Bone 8—Hebron 0.

The Big Bone team did not allow Hebron a look-in, the score being 8 to 0 in favor of the imbibers of sulphur water. Following is the score by innings:

Hebron	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—0
Hits	1	0	1	1	1	0	1	1	0	—6
Big Bone	0	0	3	0	4	0	1	0	0	—8
Hits	0	1	3	0	4	0	1	0	0	—9

Two base hits—Munts, Luck 2; left on bases—Hebron 14, Big Bone 7; struck out by Houston 1 by Shinkle 3, by Woods 13; hit by pitcher—by Houston 1, by Woods 3; base hits—off of Houston 4, off of Shinkle 5; batteries—Houston, Shinkles and Graves, Ernst; Woods and Lostotter; umpires—Souther and Tanner.

The rain last Monday afternoon revived the tobacco season that was nearing the frazzle stage, and Tuesday morning there was a rush all along the line for the tobacco plant beds, and the work of transplanting was again under way at an early hour. All the land that was ready is now planted, but a considerable acreage remains to be prepared, some of which may not be planted this year.

A Skeleton Uncovered.

When plowing a few days since Charles Saddler, who lives on the river a short distance below the mouth of Garrison creek, uncovered a perfect and well preserved skeleton of an adult. It must have been lying where found for many, many years as Mr. Saddler, who has lived in the immediate vicinity for many years is certain that there has been no interment at that point within his time, and none of the old persons in the neighborhood can call to mind the burying of anyone on the land owned by Mr. Saddler. It is probable that no information in regard to the skelton will ever be obtained

A Hair Dressing

If you wish a high-class hair dressing, we are sure Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will greatly please you. It keeps the hair soft and smooth, makes it look rich and luxuriant, prevents splitting at the ends. And it keeps the scalp free from dandruff.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Ayer's

Formula with each bottle
Show it to your doctor
Ask him about it, then do as he says

At the same time the new Ayer's Hair Vigor is a strong hair tonic, promoting the growth of the hair, keeping all the tissues of the hair and scalp in a healthy condition. The hair stops falling, dandruff disappears. A splendid dressing.

In re Petition
for } Order.
Florence Graded Common School.

At the last regular term of this court a petition having been filed, signed by Ben Stephens and more than ten (10) others, to-wit: Fifty-two (52) others asking that a Graded Common School District be organized with the following boundary, viz: Beginning at Ben Stephen's, including him; thence straight to the Kenton county line; thence with said line to Thos. Dorsey, including him; thence to Martin Michael's, including him; thence to Charles Krouse's, including him; thence to Joe Graves', including him; thence to John Miller's, including him; thence straight to the Jack Marquis residence, including the same; thence to G. A. Snyder's on the Burlington and Florence pike, including him; thence to John Craven's, including him; thence to the Hopeful church; thence to the Geo. Utz place leaving him out; thence to the Henry Ingram place, including him; thence on a line to the Henry Rouse place on Gunpowder creek; thence up said creek to Wm. Norman's leaving him out; thence to Noah Surface's leaving him out; thence to the Banning farm, including the same; thence straight to the G. N. Buffington farm leaving him out; thence to the beginning. The foregoing boundary embraces Common School District number (8) eight and part of number (9) nine.

It further appearing that the site for the school house of said proposed district is in the town of Florence and is the present site if that the school house of said proposed district, and it appearing also that said petitioners are tax-payers, legal voters and residents of the proposed Graded Common School District and of Justice District No. 6 of this county, and, it further appearing that the County Superintendent has endorsed on said petition his approval of same and that a majority of the Trustees of the Common School Districts that will be enhanced either in whole or in part in said proposed Graded Common School District, have endorsed their approval on said petitions as provided by law, and the court being sufficiently advised, it is ordered by the court that M. F. Wingate, Sheriff of this county, be and he is hereby directed to cause a poll to be opened and an election to be held at the town of Florence on the 21st day of June, 1909, the same being more than forty (40) days after the entry of this order, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal white voters residing within the boundary of the said Graded Common School District whether there shall be levied and collected an annual tax of twenty-five (25) cents on each one hundred dollars of property value therein subject to state or county taxation owned by white persons and corporations, and 50cts poll tax on each white male citizen therein over 21 years old, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a Graded Common School therein as provided by law.

The officers of said election will also cause the legal voters of said proposed Graded Common School District to vote for five persons to be trustees of same in case said tax shall be approved. The officers of said election will make returns in due form of the results of same at the earliest day practicable.

The clerk of this court will certify a copy of this order to the Sheriff of this county inside of ten (10) days form this date.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter season when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co. is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without impairing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm. 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—it will cost you nothing.

The Great Imported German Coach Stallion,

Plutarch 3183

Will make the season of 1909 at T. E. Randall's stable, one mile west of Idlewild, Boone County, Ky., on the Burlington and Petersburg Turnpike at

$12 to insure a colt to stand up and suck,

money due when colt is foaled, or if mare is parted with after being bred.

Any one party owning and breeding two mares and getting two colts from this horse shall be entitled to $4.00 discount on the two seasons—paying only $20 for the two colts, but should only one of the mares get in foal the regular full season $12 will be collected.

This stallion is a Mahogany bay, 16½ hands high, weighs 1400 pounds, and needs no introduction to the people of Boone county as his colts speak for themselves.

I will give a return season for the best colt, the 1908 get of this stallion, regardless of sex, to be shown at the Boone County Harvest Home this fall.

For pedigree and particulars call on or address the undersigned, owner.

Care will be taken but I will not be responsible for accidents. No business done on Sunday. Parties breeding to either of the above animals must follow up the season.

BURLINGTON & WATERLOO HORSE CO.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733.

Property of the High Vine Horse Co., Walton, Ky., in the stud at the stable of W. Lee Gaines, Richwood, Ky., at $20 00 to insure a live colt, season money due if mare is parted with.

HIGH VINE, 2733, foaled in spring of 1904, by Highland Gaines, No. 1067; grand sire, Highland Denmark, No. 730; Dam, Bessie Sable, No. 2832, by Shropshire Kentucky Squirrel, No. 1365; second dam, Ida May by Fayette Denmark, No. 60; third dam, Maxey by Granger; fourth dam, Mare by Expert, No. 77.

HIGH VINE, No. 2733, Chestnut Stallion, coming 5 years old, weighs 1100 pounds, stands 16 hands high, and is a picture of symmetry and beauty.

A number of prominent citizens of the vicinity of Walton, realizing the need of a fine saddle horse for breeding purposes, and desiring to maintain the reputation of Kentucky for raising fine horses, associated themselves together as a live stock company, and bought the best saddle horse they could find, and High Vine, No. 2733, proved to be their choice. The horse was bought from Georgetown parties for $1,500 cash, and his services will be offered to a limited number of good mares at $20 to insure a live foal. Inspect the horse and you will be pleased with him. It will be well to make engagements ahead, as his services will be limited.

For the accommodation of those at a distance, W. L. Gaines has agreed to pasture mares at $2.50 per month, and has the best of facilities for their care and feeding.

A premium of $20 (the season) will be given the best colt foaled from the breeding of 1909 the time and place of the show to be announced later.

Local News.

This is the month for brides and roses.

Next Monday is county court day, sure.

There were numerous tobacco season's last week.

Mrs. Annie Kirkpatrick has built a summer kitchen.

Dirt roads are rounding into good condition for the summer.

No warm weather to speak of as yet, but June, before it is gone, will give you to understand that good, old summer time is here.

Some of the Boone county boys who put their money up on the bang tails at Latonia, last week, are said to have made killings.

It looks like those who planted their tobacco early, stand the best chance for a crop, as the frenching of plants in the beds may cut some figure in the latter setting.

The Burlington and Hebron base ball teams will hook up at Burlington next Saturday afternoon, while the Belleview and Big Bone teams will do battle at Big Bone.

Wet weather the latter part of May ruined hundreds of tobacco plant beds, the plants frenching, in which condition they cannot be induced to grow to do any good.

Many young people are looking forward to the opening of the picnic season by the Harvest Home Association at its grounds near Limaburg, next Saturday afternoon.

Atty. D. E. Castleman has sold to G. T. Gaines 35 acres of his land out on the Belleview pike at $35 per acre. The land sold lies next to Mr. Gaines' land and the county infirmary farm.

Farmer Chas. Clore, from out on the East Bend road, was in town, last Friday, with his team of extra farm mules and a wagon, apparently stocking up with merchandise to last for a considerable season.

The program for the commencement exercises of the Petersburg High School on the 14th inst. appears in this issue. It will be one of the most interesting educational events in the history of the town.

The shearing of sheep was in full blast last week, and a very large portion of the wool crop was prepared for market. The price for which wool is selling will bring a large amount of money into the county—not less than $15,000.

Charles White and wife, who live three miles out on the East Bend road, gave a dance last Friday night that was attended and enjoyed by young people from far and near in every direction. Their commodious residence is well calculated for such events.

B. B. Hume, the local dealer in horses, bought a horse from John S. Surface, of Gunpowder, last Thursday, paying $225 for it. The animal is a splendid carriage horse and has taken premiums at several county fairs. Mr. Hume was not long in locating a purchaser for the animal, and who should it be but Uncle Scribe. Price $250.

The RECORDER has made arrangements with the management of Chester Park by which all its readers may obtain a free admission to that popular place of amusement between now and July 1st. The coupon published in another column is good for one admission if cut out and presented at the gate before the first of July.

R. S. Crisler, one of the local disciples of Vulcan, says that in the spring of '08 he sowed a tobacco plant bed and not a plant came up, but, to his surprise, from that sowing a fine bed of tobacco plants put in an appearance at the proper time this spring. This fact might be construed as a proof that providence favored cutting out last year's crop of the weed.

One day last week Bert Sullivan was making a wire rope to support a water gate, when the stick with which he was twisting the wires slipped from his hands, and struck him on the side of the head and on the back of one hand, coming very nearly putting him out of business. He believes that had the stick hit him squarely on the head that it would have put him to sleep.

Fifty or sixty years ago it cost very little to keep a steer until it was three or four years old, and if it then weighed one thousand or eleven hundred pounds the maximum was reached. But now conditions have so changed that if cattle raisers keep up with the procession they must have cattle that they can make marketable at two years old and they must weigh one thousand to twelve hundred pounds at that age.

Booze Factory Closed Down.

Last Thursday the distillery at Petersburg completed its run of between 11,000 and 12,000 barrels of whiskey, and closed down. The bottling department there handles 10 barrels per day, and the probabilty is a new and much larger bottling house will be built in order to increase the room that more goods may be handled, as the increase of local option territory throughout the country is causing a rapid growth in the demand for whisky in bottles.

Off On Both Distance and Course.

Any one in this part of the country who was watching, might have seen a monster balloon far away in the western sky sailing southward last Sunday afternoon. The balloon sailed from the Lagoon at Ludlow, passing in a southward direction, probably passing between here and Owenton. In it were four daring aviators. The balloon landed early Monday morning near Nashville, Tenn., 500 miles from the starting point.—Dry RidgeNews Knows How to Handle It.

It is said that Harry McWethy, of Petersburg, who has been handling whisky at the distillery there for the past 25 years does not know what whisky tastes like, as he never in his life took a drink, and yet he is regarded as a very fine judge of whisky—in fact about the best in this part of the country. His judgment is governed by his sense of smell, which his long experience in handling the "critter" has cultivated to a very high degree. W. N. Alloway, another employe of many, many years at the same distillery, has seen and handles millions of gallons of whisky, but tastes not.

A Veterinary Hospital.

Dr. A. H. McGlasson from Constance, this county, located at Madison, Indiana, fourteen years ago to practice veterinary medicine. At that time very little was known as to the need of a qualified veterinarian to treat animals for their diseases. It is quite different now. People look to a veterinary as they do their family doctor as a man educated to his profession. Dr. McGlasson has erected a veterinary hospital at Madison, and it is one of the most complete buildings of its kind in Indiana. The profession has grown so rapidly since the doctor located in Madison such an institution was badly needed. He was one of four veterinarians to be appointed a few years since by the Governor on the veterinary board of examiners, the first board of the kind Indiana ever had. He is now vice-president of the board.

He Is a Grump.

Some years ago the Black Diamond railroad was built through Eastern Kentucky—on paper. Starting somewhere in the mountains, it was to pass through about forty county seats before it reached the Ohio river, and then was to run north, south, east and west for the benefit of anybody and everybody. It was the most remarkable railroad that was ever talked about or ever hatched in the brain of the most sanguine promoter. The proposed traction line, which originated in the brain of a Boone county banker, and which is to connect Cincinnati, Maysville, Louisville and Lexington, and pass through nearly every county in northern Kentucky brings strongly to mind the Black Diamond enterprise. Georgetown is "in it" and don't you forget it, but it is not determined yet whether it will come from White Sulphur, Long Lick, Oxford or Turkeyfoot. Let the enterprise proceed.—Georgetown Times.

John M. Carter Dead.

John M. Carter died at his home in Carrollton, Mo., Sunday, May 16. He was a son of John Stephen and Eleanor Morris Carter, being one of twelve children—six boys and six girls. Of this large family only two survive, Mrs. Frances E. Raines, of Lewis county, Mo., and Mrs. Ann Gill, of this State. He was born in this county January 5th, 1824, and moved to Missouri in 1844 and settled on a farm near Carrollton, to which city he moved in 1870. March 12, 1850, he was married to Permelia Ann Berry. To them five daughters were born, four of whom are still living. Mrs. Carter died May 13, 1882. Mr. Carter united with the Middle creek church in 1857, and was a member of that denomination when he died. His health began to fail early in the winter, but he was confined to his bed only three weeks. Of him the Carrollton, Mo., Democrat says: "In the death of Mr. Carter Carroll county not only loses one of her early landmarks, but one of her best citizens as well. He was of a retiring disposition, but when a question of right or wrong was at issue he was always found in the right place. He was a man of few words, but these words were of wisdom. He was a man of strong character and strict integrity, and he was esteemed most highly by those who knew him best."

GOOD ROADS

LAWRENCEBURG, IND., May 24.

"If there is anything that Boone county needs more than a change in politics, it is good roads," said Colonel T. B. Mathews at the Third Annual Banquet of the Commercial Club, Friday night, thereby evoking prolonged applause, due, undoubtedly, more to an appreciation of a crying need in public utilities than of the perverted political sentiment expressed. Colonel Mathews spoke for several minutes, the principal burden of his remarks being a plea to the Boone county gentlemen who were present, to establish and maintain public highways of such a character as to render the thoroughfares leading to Lawrenceburg ferry no longer hard roads to travel. It cannot be said that his seeds of logic fell upon sterile soil, and the Commercial Club is to be congratulated upon securing so able an exponent of the good roads doctrine.

The Hon. John W. Berkshire made a few remarks, under pressure, which might be construed into a pledge to father, in the next session of the Kentucky Legislature, a bill for improved highways in the bluegrass country.

Lawrenceburg merchants are much gratified over securing this tacit promise, as it is a great concession on Mr. Berkshire's part, he being in business in Petersburg, and, naturally, not vitally concerned about the commercial activities of Lawrenceburg as regards Kentucky trade.

Other speeches were made by Mayor Bielby, Harris Fitch, W. H. O'Brien and M. J. Givan.

The banquet, aside from being a brilliant social success, did much toward cementing good fellowship between Lawrenceburg merchants and their Kentucky neighbors, Harry Stevens, Pink Rice, Ben Berkshire and J. W. Berkshire, being among those present.

The new members of the ferry company are very sanguine regarding the good roads movement in Boone county. They feel that the farmers on the other side of the river will no longer side-step the issue.

There is no heritage like progressiveness. When God said, "Let there be light and there was light," where the first ray of the newly created sun struck the earth the Kentucky bluegrass grew. It is scarcely probable that Kentuckians will longer barter such a birthright for impassable roads.

A KENTUCKIAN.

Teacher' Salaries Fixed.

In the matter of teachers' salaries the county board of education has decided that they shall be as follows: $35, $40, $45 or $50 per month, to be determined by the grade of the certificate and the number of pupils in a district, as shown by the census.

Teachers Must File Applications.

Applications for teaching public schools in Kentucky must be filed with the secretary of the board of the county educational division in which it is desired to teach, before the first of July. Those who desire to teach in the common schools the coming year must bear in mind this little matter of red tape.

Poor Prospects for a Crop of Honey

Prospects for a crop of honey this year are not very flattering, as the locust bloom will be the principal material on which the bees will have to work, as the indications are there will be very little white clover, and then the continued cold, wet weather in May retarted the bees' work very materially.

The School Census.

The school census of this county show that there was a decrease of 15 white pupils within the school age this year when compared with the census of last year. There has been a very considerable decrease in the number of colored pupils in the last few years, quite a number of colored parents with large families having moved out of the county.

Railroad Excitement in Oowen Co.

Owen county people, and especially the citizens of Owenton, are considerably excited over the prospects of having a railroad to pass through the land of sweet Owen. The county lies in the line or one of Mr. W. T. S. Blackburn's proposed traction lines, on which he desires to begin work at an early date. Money for pushing the project along is being subscribed liberally by men of means.

Eeerything Looks Lovely in Boone.

Boone county is looking at its best now, the forests being robed in a beautiful and inviting growth of green, while the pastures are covered with a luxuriant growth of lovely bluegrass, the result being a scene that challenges the admiration of everyone, who indulges in an across-the-country trip. Everything is full of life, and in harmony with the sweet singing of the birds that are inspired by the entrancing surroundings.

DO NOT OVERPLANT.

Henry S. Berry, President of the Green River District, has issued a warning to tobacco growers against overproduction. He says:

"I tell you frankly that no organization can live in the face of the contemplated crop and the surplus. Surplus, that great bugaboo of low prices, who is to carry it? The buyers will, if they can get the price low enough. Certainly our present plan of selling is an admirable one, but the plan that we had in the beginning of our organization was an unpopular one, for it made us carry our own surplus (or at least a part of us had to carry it), and we could not today get people to pledge to a plan other than for full pay on delivery. The sentiment for 10,000 hills, less tobacco and a profitable price is overwhelming in the Green River District. The little farmer back on the hills may not be as smart on every proposition as his brother farmer on the rich level lands, but he has tasted more keenly the effect of low prices and is smart enough to know that a big crop by everybody will also mean a small price for everybody.

"You, on your rich level farms, do not have to depend on tobacco, but can compete with the great West in the growing of wheat, corn, grass, hogs and cattle. The man on the hill farm can get a modest living out of a small patch of tobacco, but if he had to compete with the West in the growing of wheat, corn and other crops he would soon be driven to starvation.

"The little farmer is not asking that the big farmer quit entirely growing tobacco, but he is begging his more fortunate brother to limit his crop and do his share of keeping down the crop so that the price will remain profitable.

"Looking over the price of farm crops, we see that all are good with the exception of tobacco. They promise to remain good, because there is no extraordinary effort to overplant any crop but tobacco."

The New Ferry at Lawrenceburg.

The purchase of the Lawrenceburg ferry by the business men of that city, followed by a proposition to very greatly improve the ferry facilities, has put the people in that part of this county tributary to that city to considering means for improving the public roads leading to the ferry, and before the agitation ceases there may be another very important road opened up in the Garrison neighborhood that will be of great advantage to the ferry and the people along the road. At Lawrenceburg the farmers find a market for anything and in any quantity they have to sell, and they are certainly interested in having good roads leading to the ferry. Other sections of the county are pushing along the good roads movement with less inducements than those which should inspire the people of a very large section of Boone county that would do the principal part of its buying and selling in Lawrenceburg, were the roads and ferry in a condition to make a trip to that city less laborious and more comfortable. The question as to whether there shall be an improvement in the roads leading to the ferry is up to the people who are interested.

A total eclipse of the sun is booked by the makers of almanacs for the seventeenth inst., to begin about 6 a. m., soon after which the degree of darkness will be sufficient to cause chickens to go to roost. The moon fulls on that day, consequently there will be something doing in the upper regions on the 17th of June.

Notwithstanding the late, wet spring the crop of Indian corn this year is 2 per cent higher and the value 43 per cent higher than last year. Year by year since the discovery of America and this greatest of cereals, the importance of this crop has increased in acreage, in quantity, in quality, in variety, in usefulness, and in value.

Had the vote on the graded school proposition at Union been a week or ten days later those who were pushing it along would have made the vote in favor of it unanimous. It was practically unanimous any way. The people at Union are manifesting a greater spirit of enterprise than anyother community in the county. Lay on, McDuff, &c.

In a circular letter to county assessor, M. C. Rankin, State Commissioner of Agriculture, urges that close attention be paid to separation of the woodland from the cleared land. The State and U. S. Government are both anxious to obtain reliable information as to the area of timber in Kentucky, hence the necessity of complying with the commissioner's request.

Very little work other than planting tobacco was done on the farms last week, a time at which every day counted against the tillers of the soil.

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. DOCTORS AND LAWYERS.

Recently Mr. Bernard Shaw delivered an address before the London Medico-Legal society in which he advocated the "socialization" of the medical profession, so that it would be possible for the doctor when not paid by the patient, hut by the state, to follow the practice of the art of medicine with honesty and truth, things at present impossible on account of the insistence of patients to receive treatment when treatment is unnecessary, and, especially inopportune, because a doctor to-day is of no higher rank than a tradesman, says the Interstate Medical Journal. In connection with these timely remarks we would say that were lawyers employed and paid by the state, instead of by their clients, there would take place many gratifying changes; for the state could prevent the present attitude of law to the science of medicine hy making compulsory an instructive course in its many ramifications and could institute, by these enlightened means, a better phase in all legal tilts than obtains today, when the irresistible plea made hy money creates so great a bias for a client that no other course would seem to have any justification. Only when this happier state from a modern conception of socialism is evolved will there be the proper rapproachement between doctors and lawyers to effect a medico-legal society of far-reaching benefits.

Japan is fast taking on the ways of modern civilization. Nine members of their house of representatives have just heen arrested for heing "grafters." At this rate, Japan will soon be in the front rank of modern, progressive nations. Civilization's vices always accompany civilization's henefits. Only 55 years ago Commodore Perry opened the ports of Japan; but in this half century that island empire has made gigantic strides toward civilization. Her people are "the Yankees of the east." Dishonesty and immorality are characteristics of barharous and semi-barharous people, hut the crimes of civilization are more difficult to handle hecause covered and protected by the cloak of respectability. The prompt arrest of Japan's civilized grafters augurs well for the future of that ambitious government. The authorities will mete out summary punishment to these offenders, and teach a salutary lesson to future would-be grafters. Thus the nation may escape the scandal of corrupt politics.

Women of Washington are taking it upon themselves to see that the streets are kept clean; that waste paper, blowing this way and that, is disposed of; in fact, that it is not permitted to get upon the streets at all. These Washington women are meeting with much success. We could wish that the women of Philadelphia would assume the same duties, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. And their duties would be light, after all. If, as individuals, they would see to it that waste paper is not thrown loosely into ash cans and put out on their own sidewalks for the ashmen to take away, they would quickly discover that the greatest source of untidiness had been eliminated. A combination between the women and the police would eradicate what is now a most pronounced and disgusting evil.

The Los Angeles report that scores of persons in that city have been made ill by strawberries from Japanese gardens near Gardena, upon which a powerful solution was used to destroy worms that appeared on the vines early in the season, should warn gardeners everywhere to refrain from using poisons on fruits or on vegetables that are eaten in a raw state, as salads. The dusting of potato vines with poisonous powder that destroys the potato beetle is harmless because the tubers are under the soil, but the use of poisons on tomatoes and small fruits is dangerous, as has heen conspicuously shown in the Los Angeles poisoning.

It is going to be a strenuous season for the "skeeter." New Jersey, which is the home of some of the most dreadful of the species, has already begun war on the pests. The authorities are trying to kill off the mosquitoes by draining the swamps and destroying the eggs. Still, it is likely to be some time before life will be one glad, sweet song in which the hateful note of the mosquito does not take an inharmonious part.

TAFT HONORS DEAD

PRESIDENT DELIVERS ORATION ON GETTYSBURG FIELD.

MONUMENT IS DEDICATED

Daughter of the Chief Executive Unveils the Shaft Erected in Memory of Regulars—Lincoln Statue at Hodgenville.

Gettysburg, Pa.—Seldom has historic Gettysburg battlefield witnessed more impressive Memorial day exercises than those of Monday. The chief feature of the ceremonies was the dedication of the fine monument erected hy act of congress to commemorate the services of the regular army of the United States in the Gettysburg campaign of June and July, 1863, and President Taft was the central figure in the day's doings.

The president arrived early in the morning from Pittsburg, and was met hy a committee of prominent citizens and an escort of United States regulars. After luncheon a great concourse of people gathered on the hattlefield, and the exercises began. Secretary of War Dickinson delivered an address and formally transferred the monument to the Gettyshurg National Park commission, the chairman of which, Lieut. Col. John P. Nicholson, made the speech of acceptance.

Unveiled by Miss Taft.

The shaft was then unveiled by Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the president. Laurel wreaths were placed at the base of the monument hy the oldest regimental and battery commanders of the Gettyshurg campaign, and the ceremonies ended with a review of the troops on the field by President Taft.

The monument is a heautiful shaft 85 feet high surrounded at the base hy a broad granite terrace. It stands on Hancock avenue a short distance south of the high-water mark of the battle of Gettysburg. The monument represents all of the 42 cavalry, artillery, infantry and engineer organizations of the regular army that participated in the campaign. In addition there has been erected a small monument seven feet high for each of the commands at the location it occupied during the battle.

Lincoln Statue Dedicated.

Hodgenville, Ky.—For the second time within a few months this little town was Monday the scene of a notahle ceremony. This was the unveiling of the Lincoln memorial statue erected at the hirthplace of the martyred president.

Henry Watterson, the famous Louisville journalist, was the chief orator, and was followed by E. J. McDermott, also of Louisville. The statue was then unveiled by Mrs. Ben Hardin Helm. Next came addresses of acceptance by former Appellate Court Justice George Du Relle for the Lincoln monument commission, Gov. Augustus E. Willson for Kentucky, and David Highbaugh Smith for LaRue county.

STRIKE GROWS SERIOUS.

Mails Still Held Up and Food Is Getting Scarce Along the Georgia Railroad.

Atlanta, Ga. — The tension in Georgia railway firemen's strike is increasing with every hours' delay in settling the race question involved. United States mails held up since the beginning of the week, a dozen counties facing demoralization of business and the race issue brought continually into unwholesome prominence, were the factors which spurred the negotiations through hours of discussion.

Various towns in the strike district took inventory of the visible supply of food. Madison reported at least 15 days of plenty in prospect. Washington reported a shortage in yeast and prices rising. There are 11 cars of provisions at Lithonia and ice has been supplied to maintain the perishable portion of their contents.

MANY CITIES FEEL QUAKE

TOWNS IN MIDDLE WESTERN STATES TREMBLE.

No Loss of Life Reported, but Several Slightly Injured—Some Property Damage.

Chicago.—Reports continued to come in Thursday of the earthquake which shook the middle west Wednesday. In this city the tremor lasted from two seconds to three minutes and in cities in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Missouri it was just as severe.

So far no loss of life has been reported, although there has been slight property damage and a great deal of fright. The most severe shocks were felt in Chicago and Dubuque, Ia.

Following is a list of towns where the earthquake was felt: Janesville, Wis.; Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Sterling, Ill.; Rockford, Ill.; Moline, Ill.; Joliet, Ill.; Streator, Ill.; Dixon, Ill.; Dubuque, Ia.; Burlington, Ia.; Galena, Ill.; Bloomington, Ill.; Freeport, Ill.; El Paso, Ill.; Fairbury, Ill.; Springfield, Ill.; Mount Carroll, Ill.; Springfield, Mich.; Peoria, Ill.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Madison, Wis.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Benton Harhor, Mich.; Aurora, Ill.; Kewanee, Ill.; Hanihal, Mo.; Beloit, Wis.; Michigan City, Ind., and Grand Rapids, Mich.

The last previous earthquake shock recorded in the Chicago weather hureau was on October 31, 1895.

One of the reports at the weather bureau came from Dubuque, Ia., where it was said that the Bank and Insurance building, a seven-story structure, was nearly thrown to the ground by the violence of the shock. Clerks, stenographers and hundreds who were employed in the various offices ran in panic from the building. Two seismic disturbances were reported there.

In Chicago chimneys were thrown down on the West and North sides, and several women were thrown from their feet as a result of the shock. Large flat buildings were shaken and families ran out, fearing the walls would collapse. Many were reminded of the disasters recently in Messina and San Francisco, and were in fear for hours after the shock had passed.

Two hundred Italians working on the track elevation in Evanston were terror-stricken hy the shock and fell on their knees in prayer.

At the weather bureau Prof. Cox said there were no instruments for recording quake shocks, hut that he had noticed the swaying of chandeliers and lamp cords.

LORIMER ELECTED SENATOR.

Chicago Man Selected to Succeed Albert J. Hopkins by Illinois Legislators.

Springfield, Ill. — Congressman William Lorimer of the Sixth congressional district was elected United States senator on the ninety-fifth ballot taken by the joint session of the general assembly. He had 108 votes.

The election of a junior senator to represent Illinois in the upper house at Washington came about through a coalition of Democratic assemblymen and the anti-Hopkins Republicans, breaking the deadlock which had lasted since January 20.

William Lorimer was born at Manchester, England, April 27, 1861. When he was five years of age he came to America with his parents, and in 1870 located in Chicago.

At the age of ten years his father died and he became a sign-painter's apprentice and later worked for the Chicago packing houses and for a street railroad company, being a conductor when he quit that vocation to work for himself.

He entered the real estate business in 1886, and later became a member of the firm of Murphy & Lorimer in the building and brick manufacturing business.

In 1892 he ran for the office of clerk of the superior court, but was defeated. Three years later he became a member of congress and served the Sixth Illinois congressional district and was again elected for the congressional seat last spring. For a decade he has been a leader of the Republican party in Illinois.

Islanders Ask Citizenship.

Washington. — A committee of Porto Ricans has come to Washington, representing the Republican party of Porto Rico, to urge that the United States government grant citizenship to the islanders.

It is their intention to see President Taft and enlist his sympathies, if possible, as well as those of various senators and representatives, and to get congress to take up the Porto Rican citizenship plank contained in the last Republican national platform.

GEORGIA STRIKERS BREAK UP TRAIN

First Violence to Railroad Property Occurs When Engine With Negro Fireman Is Sent To Move Cars.

Atlanta, Ga., May 29.—First violence to railroad property in the Georgia railroad firemen's strike was offered Friday night to a moving freight at Lithonia, Ga. In consequence the race situation looms more sharply than ever in the trouble, notwithstanding a day of much apparent progress toward settlement. A negro fireman apparently was the cause of the trouble. He was rushed to Atlanta on an engine to save him from violence. The trouble started with the throwing of one or two stones and the boarding of the freight by men who set the brakes and broke the train in three sections. The train now blocks the main line and the progress of the mails.

The railroad officers declared Friday night that the incident was the work of sympathizers, while a county official wired the governor's office that it was merely an accident.

An engine left here late Friday night for Lithonia to bring a train load of perishable provisions from the siding at Lithonia into Atlanta. Assurances have been given for several days that in the interest of local shippers whose valuable cars were tied up no demonstration would he made against hauling these cars to Atlanta.

When the engine reached the Lithonia siding about dusk, it was seen that it carried a negro fireman, as did the mail trains which passed through Lithonia earlier in the day, exciting unfavorable comment.

About 200 people gathered at the station, and just as the train was getting under headway it is said a stone flew in the cab window and hit Engineer Downing. Next, according to the officials, several men boarded the cars, set the brakes and cut off the air, causing the last car to break loose from the train. They also uncoupled the engine, leaving its load stalled. According to the railroad's statement no attempt was made by local authorities to interfere with the attack. It is believed the railroad officials will attempt to clear the track at Lithonia for the mail trains early Saturday and that deputies will be used to protect the train crews in the work.

Friday brought forth almost simultaneously the possibilities of speedy state or federal intervention, believed by many persons of wide acquaintance with local conditions to be heavy with danger of race trouhle.

It is admitted that either federal or state authorities can run the trains and with armed forces preserve order, but if the railroad insists on its rights to hire negro firemen it is feared racial enmity and reprisals on negroes will be stirred up in regions remote from the railroad tracks. The state is a stockholder in the road.

An ultimatum which may stop the mail trains on the Georgia road Saturday was delivered Friday night by Assistant Chief Burgess of the engineers to General Manager Scott of the railroad.

Engineer Downing was seriously injured in the riot at Lithonia Friday night. Burgess says he has forbidden the engineers to take out any more trains until complete protection is guaranteed.

HIGHWAYMEN ROBBED BANK,

But Threw Away Their Loot When Posse Pursued—Two Captured—One May Die.

Merrill, Wis., May 29.—Four highwaymen, in broad daylight Friday, robbed the German-American State bank. Three of the men covered the cashier, R. C. Ballstadt, while the fourth went through a vault and secured upward of $1,000, overlooking $20,000 in another vault. They then fled, but were pursued by a posse of citizens. Two men were captured in a swamp after a hot exchange of shots, which will probably result in the death of one of them. The other was uninjured.

The captured robbers are both young, one a mere boy of 17, the other about 20 years old. They are strangers here, and apparently had no experience as yeggmen. They had automatic ten-shot Mauser rifles.

Bank Cashier Robbed.

St. Louis, Mo., May 29.—An unmasked man, with a revolver, held up Cashier Stephen Moore in the People's bank at Benbow City, Ill., Friday afternoon. Moore was counting out an express shipment of 24 $100 hills and 50 $1 bills when the robber seized the money, fled toward the river with an unmasked confederate, who had stood guard at the bank's front door and escaped. No one else saw the hold up. "The tall man said he wanted a check cashed, and held me up when I started to look at it. I was so unnerved that I could not arise and give the alarm," Moore said in recounting the affair.

Burned To Death.

Big Stone Gap, Va., May 29.—Mrs. Robert Johnson was burned to death Friday at her home near Ewing, Lee county. She was sitting near the fire and fell asleep. Her clothing became enveloped in flames. When help arrived it was too late to be of service.

Killed His Daughter.

Paris, May 29.—An American, whose name is given as Henderson, and who is believed to have been from New York, shot his daughter dead and then committed suicide in a cafe near the Central market.

Whole Nation Is Aroused.

According to the fifth annual report of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, at its convention held in Washington, May 13-15, there were in the United States on May 1 over 230 associations whose special objects are the prevention and relief of tuberculosis. Three hundred sanatoria and hospitals are devoted to the treatment of tuberculosis. Besides these, there are 225 special tuberculosis clinics and dispensaries, where tuberculosis patients may receive medical advice and home treatment.

Athleticism Extraordinary.

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from a female weakness and disease, and I could not stand more than a minute at a time. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. One day I was reading how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it. Before I had taken one bottle I was better, and now I am completely cured."—LENA V. HENRY, Route No. 3, Adrian, Ga.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

Salaries of New Republican Officials Raised by Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners—Tobacco Plant Beds Scraped.

Louisville, Ky.—At a meeting of the board of sinking fund commissioners they raised the salary of the new republican president, George T. Wood, from $1,500 to $1,800 a year. Judge A. E. Richards, formerly democratic city attorney and a celebrated confederate, resigned as the attorney for the board and Percy N. Booth, a young republican attorney, was named to succeed him. The salary of the attorney was $600 a year, but the board raised it to $1,000 for Booth.

TWO DIVISIONS

Of Southern Railroad to Be Consolidated and Superintendent's Office Moved to Danville.

Lexington, Ky.—The Lexington and Cincinnati division of the Cincinnati Southern railroad will be consolidated with the Danville and Chattanooga division on June 1, and the superintendent's office will be moved to Danville. This move means that there will be only one division between Cincinnati and Chattanooga. The consolidation means a great deal to Danville, as it will make it one of the most important cities on the line. A clerical crew of 50 men will be taken from Lexington and located in Danville, in addition to the present office force of the Danville and Chattanooga division. Plans for a $20,000 office building are now being prepared for the officials of the road, and its erection will be completed during the summer months.

SOUTHERN RAILROAD SUED

For Alleged Overcharges on Eight Different Shipments of Whisky.

Louisville, Ky.—Alleging that large overcharges in freight rates in excess of the schedule filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission have been imposed upon shippers by the Southern railroad in Kentucky, Julius Kessler sued to recover alleged overcharges on eight different shipments of whisky made in the last four years to points in the south. The largest claim among the number is $175.21, an excess in freight said to have been levied by the Southern upon a shipment of 149 barrels of whisky sent to Los Angeles February 14, 1905. Six other similar claims are for small amounts.

Louisville, Ky.—Sons and daughters of Canada attended a banquet at the Maple Leaf club in honor of "British Empire day." W. H. Montague, former minister of railways, responded to the toast, "Canada." "Seven thousand farmers from the United States," said he, "homesteaded 1,250,000 acres of Canadian soil, now worth $20,000,000 or over."

Kuttawa, Ky.—Plant beds of Mrs. Sallie Catlett were scraped. The plants were sufficient in number to cultivate 25 acres of tobacco. Mrs. Catlett is a member of the association, and has pooled her crops here in accordance with her pledge. This is the first tobacco trouble in Lyon county this year.

Lexington, Ky.—A mass meeting of the faculty, students, alumni and friends of the State university has been called for June 1 to felicitate President James K. Patterson, who will have completed 40 years of continuous service as the head of the institution on that date.

Louisville, Ky.—A setback in the work upon Rud Hynicka's Galety theater building was occasioned when Judge Gordon granted a temporary injunction, pending argument on the motion for a mandamus, requiring the building inspector to stop the work on the theater.

Louisville, Ky.—For the purpose of hearing the contest case of L. T. Neat against Lilburn Phelps over the nomination for state senator in the Sixteenth district, the republican state central committee has been called to meet here June 12.

Frankfort, Ky.—Henry Robinson, who was bitten by a mad dog on the farm of Dick Baker a few days ago, was hurried to the Chicago Pasteur institute. He was requested to rush to that city by a telegram from the institute.

Latonia, Ky.—Olambala, carrying the sky-blue jacket and white sleeves of Johnny Greener, the popular Tennessee turfman, won the Latonia Derby, with T. Rice in the saddle, over a track covered with water. The Peer finished second and Plate Glass third.

Jackson, Ky.—The Breathitt circuit court disposed of 25 cases, most of them being liquor violations. Fifty suits will be tried, the most important being the $25,000 action of Judge Taralbee against Editor Roberts, of the Lexington Leader.

CAPITAL NOTES.

County Attorneys Lose Fees.

Atty. Gen. Breathitt rendered an opinion that the present county attorneys will not be able to collect any fees for prosecuting the claims of delinquent taxes under the law passed in 1906. This will not apply to future county attorneys.

Will Not Interfere With Bookmaking.

Gov. Willson will not interfere with the operation of bookmaking on the Latonia track during the present meeting. The governor takes the position that the matter of interfering with the bookies or with the Latonia Agricultural association for permitting them in the betting shed is a duty of the judicial officers of the district in which the track is located, and that it is not up to him.

POLICE OF FOREIGN CITIES.

Marked Dissimilarity Exists in Costume and Methods in London, Paris and Berlin.

London policemen carry no clubs. Attached to the middle of the belt behind is a dark lantern. The cuffs of their coats have vertical stripes, blue and white, signifying rank and distinguished service. During the frequent showers and rains they wear little waterproof capes. Their silent regulation of street traffic by hand signaling is a realization of perfection. In Paris the ordinary patrolmen wear blue caps and coats, and in summer white duck trousers. They carry short swords, rather as an emblem of authority, but in extreme danger use the flat side as a club. In a downpour of rain the Paris policeman hangs his cap on a hook in the back side of his belt, and draws over his head the hood of a short blue cape of heavy cloth. This hooded cape is called a capochon, and in its longer form, reaching to the knees, in used by civilians as well, in cold or rainy weather. Accordingly, at such times the streets of Paris seem to be alive with cowled monks. Recently the London plan for controlling vehicles has come into vogue successfully on the Paris boulevards. The policemen detailed for such duty wear white gloves, and signal with white clubs. German policemen wear helmets and have a distinctly martial air.—Travel Magazine.

Poets of National Greatness.

Victor Hugo once said in his lordly, generalizing way, that it was Shakespeare who prevented England from being only another Carthage; and it is indeed true that hut for our great poets we should not hold the place we hold in the opinion of Europe. Because of them we do not wince when we are described as a nation of shopkeepers, for they prove that we, like the Florentines and Venetians, are something more than that. M. Bourget has expressed the general wonder of cultivated foreigners that the English nation, which seems so matter of fact, and even dull, should have produced two poets compared with whose works all other poetry seems to be prose; and these poets are the very two who are to be honored today in Rome. It is certainly a fact that more than any other nation we produce men of genius who vary extremely from our normal type, and we never have produced more wonderful poets than Shelley and Keats.—London Times.

An Eye For Business.

The people of Eschweg think Sven Hedin a good business man. The merchants' association of that place invited him to deliver a lecture there, and in reply received a letter from the explorer in which he said he would be delighted to comply with the request, but expected to receive in return 4,500 marks. The secretary of the organization answered that the price was not in keeping with their modest means and that the explorer probably fancied that the invitation emanated from a colony of American gold mine owners.

Japanese Girl's College Honors.

With the degree of bachelor of divinity a Japanese, Miss Ochima Okubo, was graduated from the Pacific Theological seminary with six other students when the commencement exercises of the seminary were held at the First Congregational church.

Miss Okubo is also registered in sophomore work at the University of California and lives in Oakland.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Helped Make History.

Dr. Mary Mills Patrick is at the head of the American College for Girls at Scutari, the Asiatic suburb of Constantinople. It was founded in 1871 as a high school and Dr. Patrick, then little more than a girl herself, became connected with it soon after. Graduates of the college are now helping to shape the history of eastern Europe and the Ottoman Empire. Women of Roumania, Servia, Bulgaria, Persia, Mesopotamia, Egypt and other countries are educated there.

ONE THING THAT WAS CERTAIN

No Doubt in the Baggageman's Mind as to Contents of What Looked Like Coffin.

In an emergency the manufacturer of Limburger cheese was forced to use strategy with a shipment. Ordinarily his product went in special cars, but in this instance no car was available and the order must be filled. Two hundred pounds of the fragrant comestible was put in a rough, oblong box, and taken to the railroad baggageroom. Then the manufacturer bought a ticket for himself and the box, and entered the train. At the first stop he went ahead to the baggage car to see that there was no trouble. He stood by the box in a disconsolate attitude and shaded his eyes with his hand. The baggageman was sympathetic. "A relative?" he asked. "Yes," answered the manufacturer, "it is my brother." "Well," said the railroad man, philosophically, "you have one consolation. He's dead, all right."—San Francisco Argonaut.

TENDER, BUT NOT LOVING.

Waiter (to customer, who had complained that his steak is not tender enough)—Not tender enough! D'you expect it to kiss you!

The Captain's Repartee.

The captain of a trans-Atlantic liner, having become irritable as a result of some minor troubles in the ship's management and the unusually large number of ridiculous inquiries made by tourists, was heading for the "bridge" when a dapper young man halted him to inquire the cause of the commotion off the starboard side of the ship. Being on the port side, the captain politely replied, with some sarcasm, he was not certain, but thought it possible that a cat fish had just had kittens.—What-to-Eat.

Household Hint.

"Do you know how to use a chafing dish?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Sirius Barker. "I have some novel ideas on the subject."

"What are they?"

"The best way I know of to use a chafing dish is to punch a hole in the bottom of it, paint it green and plant flowers in it."—Washington Star.

HE PUZZLED THE BRITISHER

Evidently Doorkeeper Had Never Heard of the Lord That American Minister Served.

Judge George F. Lawton of the Middlesex probate court told me a story the other day of an American minister who was spending his sabbatical year traveling abroad. Arriving in London, he made every effort to get an intimate view of the two branches of parliament in session. Of course no stranger is allowed on the floor of the house of lords, but the minister not knowing this, and with the usual amount of American push, tried to make his way in. There is a rule, however, that servants of the various lords may be admitted to speak to their ministers. Seeing the minister walking boldly in, the doorkeeper asked:

"What lord do you serve?"

"What lord?" repeated the astonished American, "the lord Jehovah!"

For a moment the doorkeeper hesitated and then admitted him. Turning to an assistant standing near, he said:

"He must mean one of those poor Scotch lairds."—Boston Record.

Logical Reasoning.

A certain young man's friends thought he was dead, but he was only in a state of coma. When, in ample time to avoid being burled, he showed signs of life, he was asked how it seemed to be dead.

"Dead?" he exclaimed. "I wasn't dead. I knew all that was going on. And I knew I wasn't dead, too, because my feet were cold and I was hungry."

"But how did that fact make you think you were still alive?" asked one of the curious.

"Well, this way: I knew that if I were in heaven I wouldn't be hungry. And if I was in the other place my feet wouldn't be cold."

Mutual Surprise.

A mission worker in New Orleans was visiting a reformatory near that city not long ago when she observed among the inmates an old acquaintance, a negro lad long thought to be a model of integrity. "Jim!" exclaimed the mission worker. "Is it possible I find you here?" "Yassum," blithely responded the backslider. "I's charged with stealin' a barrel o' sweet pertaters." The visitor sighed. "You, Jim!" she repeated. "I am surprised!" "Yassum," said Jim. "So was I or I wouldn't be here!"

Iron Ore Fields in Finland.

Though Finland has been regarded up to the present time as being extremely poor in iron ores, recent research has proved the existence of ore fields in South Finland (Nyland), and above all in the Ladoga lake district, which seem to be worth the expense of mining. For research purposes a company has been formed.

The game of base ball between the Indians, of Covington, and the Walton club, on the home grounds, Monday, was very exciting. At one time the score stood 6 to 3 in favor of the visitors, but the coaching of Prof. Wayman, Dr. Jones, Dr. Slater and George Rausler so encouraged the boys that they rallied to a point of desperation, and won out by a score of 7 to 6.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Beverly spent Saturday at Glencoe attending the funeral of Mrs. Ophelia Cunning-Beverly, who died at her home at Eagle Hill, Owen county, Thursday from a nervous affection. Mrs. Beverly was about 50 years old and leaves a husband, W. B. Beverly, and seven children. Her remains were interred at her childhood's home Port Royal, Henry county.

Miss Louise Green spent the past week in Covington nursing her aunt, Mrs. B. W. Southgate, who was quite seriously injured in an accident at Covington the Sunday before. Mr. and Mrs. Southgate and little son were driving in a buggy in Covington when the horse became frightened and ran away, upsetting the buggy and bruising all of the occupants, but Mrs. Southgate quite seriously.

Col. Geo. W. Bain, of Lexington, Kentucky's famous orator, will deliver his popular lecture, "The Searchlight of the Twentieth Century," at the Walton school chapel, Thursday night, June 10th, at 7:30 p. m., for the benefit of the school library. Admission 25 cents. This will be one of the most pleasing entertainments ever presented to a Walton audience, and a large attendance is expected.

There was quite an assemblage of the taxpayers of the school district last Wednesday night at the school chapel to listen to the argument asking for an additional levy of ten cents advalorem tax for the purpose of putting in a new furnace in the school building. Of course there will always be a "kick" against the payment of taxes no matter how small or for what purpose, but the reasoning was so plain in this particular case that many who were opposed to the proposition announced that they would favor it because they recognized that it was necessary and right, and a decided majority favored the additional tax. Walton has made a great reputation on its excellent school, and we can not afford to retrograde or lessen the length of term.

The members of the Epworth League at Walton, Erlanger and Verona are arranging for a grand rally day at Walton, Friday, June 4th, and a splendid program has been arranged under the supervision of Rev. J. B. Harris, pastor of the M. E. church, and a splendid time is anticipated. A most cordial invitation is extended to all to attend and enjoy the delights of a grand day together, spiritually and socially. The following is the program of exercises:

7:30.—Sermon by Rev. J. R. Savage, Pastor Scott St., church, Covington.

Hons. John P. Frust, Richard P. Ernst, J. H. Mersman, W. H. Mackoy and R. J. Codey, of Covington, and Fred Utz, of Florence, members of the Board of Directors of the Covington and Lexington Turnpike Company, were here Friday holding their regular meeting and inspecting their turnpike of which Mr. Codey is the superintendent. The above gentlemen met with the citizens of Walton in the opera house relative to a meeting to discuss the matter of improving the road within the corporate limits of Walton by [illegible] and oiling or covering with liquid asphalt, and otherwise making the highway in a first class condition. D. B. Wallace was selected as chairman of the meeting, and the matter was thoroughly discussed in a pleasant way, Jno. L. Vest, town attorney, presenting the town's wishes. The turnpike people not only acceded to every request made of them but did a great deal more. The average cost of keeping the turnpike road in repair within the corporate limits of Walton during the past eight years averaged about $85 per year, and the turnpike company agreed to donate $250 toward the road improvement this year, let them have any stone they had at cost, and arranged to borrow a big road roller for the town people to roll the street, free of charge. What more could they have done to help the improvement? The matter will be formally presented to the town council at the next meeting, Monday, June 7th. The visiting gentlemen enjoyed the day here very much, and all have many friends here who were glad to have the pleasure of meeting them, and trust they will visit Walton again before long.

PAINTING.—First-class job painting of all kinds done promptly and at reasonable rates.

Our poll parrot was up to Bullittsville, last Saturday, and reported that Theodore Birkle, jr., member of the firm of Birkle & Co., general blacksmiths, was seen going home about 10 o'clock. His friends supposed he was having an early dinner for some reason or another, but when he didn't show up after dinner they feared he might have been kicked or hurt in some way by an unruly horse. In the evening he made his appearance on the street, all puffed up and walking on air. When asked by his friends, "what is the matter?" he paid no attention to their questions, but walked on singing, "it's jolly nice to be papa, jolly nice to be the papa of a bouncing baby girl, you bet." This explained the whole thing. A 12 pound baby girl arrived at his house about the hour of his going home. Theodore and the baby girl are doing nicely.

Trouble Makers Ousted.

When a sufferer from stomach trouble takes Dr. King's New Life Pills he's mighty glad to see his Dyspepsia and Indigestion fly, but more—he's tickled over his new, fine appetite, strong nerves, healthy vigor, all because stomach, liver and kidneys now work right. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

The death angel visited our community again and took from our midst Mr. Thomas J. Stephens, who died June 4, 1909. He was born Dec. 23, 1830, and married Nannie Neal in Feb. 1857. To them were born six children, 3 girls, Mrs. Mollie Ryle, Mrs. Wm. Rue, and Mrs. Octavia Ryle, and 3 boys, Lucien, Goodie L., and Cage. He had been a sufferer for several years and had been confined to his bed for about three weeks, but he bore his suffering very patiently and was perfectly submissive to the will of God, and perfectly willing to go when the summons came. He united with Big Bone Baptist church in the year 1886, and has been a faithful member for the past 23 years. In his death the family loses a devoted husband and parent, the community a good neighbor and the church a good member. The funeral services were conducted by the pastor Rev. McMillin, at Big Bone church, Sunday, and the remains were laid to rest in the old cemetery. The family has the sympathy of the entire community.

A CARD OF THANKS.—We desire to thank our many friends and the undertaker for the kindness shown us during the illness and death of our husband and father and want to thank Rev. McMillen for his consoling words. THE FAMILY.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association has been called by the board of directors to be held at 1 o'clock p. m., Saturday the 19th inst., on the fair grounds at Florence for the purpose of considering the proposition to renew the lease on the fair grounds, the present lease expiring on October 1st, 1910; and for the further purpose of taking steps to encourage the construction of a proposed traction road from Florence to Covington. N. E. Riddell, secretary of the association has mailed to each stockholder a notice of the meeting and the time and place of holding it.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for words of sympathy and kindness to us during the illness and death of our husband and father, John H. Ryle; also to the pall bearers and to the undertaker, Mr. Allison, for the manner in which he conducted the funeral. THE WIFE AND CHILDREN.

A Lonely Trek After Gemsbuck and Lions

By Percy Selous

WE had trekked some dozen miles during the cool night, and, having outspanned near the River Molopo, were busy making a skerm—a task always more or less arduous, for "wait-a-bit" thorns are not easy to manage, though they are invaluable as material. The boys had gone down to the river to fetch water, and I, taking a temporary rest, was scanning the veldt with my glass. I could make out some springbuck, also a few hartebeeste; but what riveted my attention was a small bunch of gemsbuck in the far distance. We did not need meat, and there did not appear to be any bushmen just then about to warrant any sheer destruction of game; but gemsbuck, although fairly plentiful away in the interior of the desert, are hard enough to get, and to see them was to want a head. My horse was in hard condition and had had some stiffish gallops recently, so I saddled him up at once and determined to give chase as soon as the "boys"—my two Kaffirs—returned. Telling them to get on with the skerm, I set out at a canter, keeping well to the right to get the advantage of the wind. The veldt was so open that stalking would have been hopeless, whereas, by the aid of my horse as a kind of blind, I might possibly get a shot before the gemsbuck took the alarm, even though they might see us, so long as they did not catch my taint. However, I had to go more directly towards them than I wished, for fear of stampeding the hartebeeste into them.

A Kill at 300 Yards.

Where the gemsbuck were feeding was much rockier ground than that intervening between my camp and them; this was all sandy veldt, studded with the everlasting ant-hills, which, however, got sparser as I neared the game. I therefore slipped off my horse, getting him between myself and them for another 100 yards. The increasing anxiety of the animals, however, warned me that if I wanted to shorten my gallop by crippling one of them, I must lose no more time. Accordingly I halted, though the distance must have been a good 300 yards, and, taking careful aim over my horse's withers at the one with the longest pair of horns, I fired. The horse stood like a rock, and I knew my aim had been good, even if the animal had not stumbled forward at the shot. It quickly recovered, though, and went away with the other four, just as if nothing had happened, at a good pace, heavy animals as they were, taking through and over the rugged boniders as easily as chamois. I knew, however, that the heavy army bullet would tell its tale. Instantly on firing I had vaulted into the saddle, and followed in pursuit. This was more easily attempted than done, and my surefooted horse was not able to negotiate the villainous country. I therefore pulled up, lest we should break both our necks, and as I did so had the satisfaction of seeing the gemsbuck drop in its tracks and remain there; whilst its companions only seemed to scamper the faster. On coming up, I found her, for it was a fine cow, stone dead. The blood was only beginning to trickle from the wound, and I had not noticed a spot anywhere on the ground she had gone over. On examination I found that the bullet had completely torn away the apex of the heart, and yet she had galloped at least a hundred yards at as great a speed as her companions, practically without bleeding a drop—another instance of the extreme vitality of such creatures, which I have found even still stronger in the Cervidae proper than in the antelopes. She had a prettily marked head, with a length of horns of three feet eight inches. It was out of the question thinking of bagging any of the rest of the herd, so I threw the carcass across my horse and started back to camp.

A few days afterwards, as I was perched on the wagon box scraping at the skull of the gemsbuck, I hardly paid any attention to a pair of secretary birds which were sailing right overhead. Their appearance, however, suggested snakes, and sure enough, there, as I looked around, among a few odds and ends, impervious to the irrepressible ants, was a large puff adder. It had crept through the fence of thorns, and in evident excitement was surveying its novel surroundings with body half raised. I did not like the look of this particular reptile a bit; but I did not intend that he should escape and be in the vicinity, though probably the secretary-birds would have seen to that; neither did I want to spoil his beautiful skin. There was, however, not help for it; I could see no object around sufficiently handy, so was constrained to put a charge of small shot into him, and I felt more comfortable after he had ceased wriggling.

Menaced by Lions in Camp.

One night I was awakened by the dog barking and the uneasiness of the oxen. I grabbed my carbine hastily and endeavored to make out what caused the disturbance. By the meager light diffused by the new moon I could just distinguish the forms of three large animals on the ridge above the camp. I could see that they were lions, and shook up already awakening Kaffirs to make up the fire. I had half a mind to shoot, but thought it safer not to do so, the distance being too great; so I waited until morning, and as the flames began to shoot up and brighten the surroundings the lions became less plain to view. I distinctly saw them, however, move away over the ridge. The remainder of the night I sat up in case of any emergency arising, for the animals kept snorting and shifting restlessly, whilst every now and again came that rumbling roar, once heard as natural never to be forgotten. I was conscious of some creature prowling close around. The roar of the lions kept all the while sounding more and more distant, and as dawn began to break it ceased altogether. As soon as it was light enough to see to any purpose, I stepped out, and as I did so, a large hyena jumped up from some bones lying near by and made off. I fired at him and rolled him over, and before he could recover or the dogs get up, luckily got another bullet into him, this time right into the head.

On examining the ground, I discovered that the lions had not approached any nearer than the ridge on which I had seen them. After having breakfasted, I returned again with the dogs and followed the spoor as far as the sand lasted; but, when the ground became rockier, I could no longer hold it, and the sun getting higher, burnt up all the scent, so that the dogs could make nothing of it, and I therefore reluctantly gave up further pursuit. Away to the east some antelope were visible, nearly against the bush belt lining the river, but as I had left my glass in the wagon, I could not make out just what they were. I thought I would try and get one, however, in order to use it as a bait in a good position, considerably nearer the wagon, in hopes that the lion might return and give me a chance of a shot under more favorable conditions. So I went back for my horse, and leaving the dogs behind set out towards the herd which I had now made out to be hartebeeste. The shimmer of the heat on the veldt is the most trying to the sight and often misleads even the experienced eye. Objects assume quite different aspects and coloring. It is a fact well known to hunters, but has no reference to "mirage." For instance, anyone would imagine that so brightly-marked an animal as the zebra would always be discernible on the sand; that the black stripes would be obvious. Nothing of the sort. It is at times almost impossible to distinguish this animal at all, even though you know for certain it is there, so cunningly does all merge itself into a whole.

A Lucky Shot.

Noting the exact location of the game, I judged that by careful maneuvering I might keep out of their line of vision, especially as the wind was in my favor. By threading in and out the clumps of thorns—not always an easy matter on horseback—I eventually got to within a couple of hundred yards, and by a lucky shot bowled over one with a bullet through the neck, killing it instantly, and saving my horse the stiff gallop I had anticipated, for these creatures are as swift as any of the genus. Throwing the carcass just as it was, without opening, across the saddle, I took it to a spot which would give me a chance of a telling shot, if a lion should make its appearance. But although I watched the best part of the night, nothing came of my vigil, the jackals reaping the benefit of all my careful preparations. The fact was, as I subsequently found out, that they were lions in their prime, and it is not often that such can be decoyed by a carcass which they have not themselves destroyed.

Next morning I was, of course, about looking for signs; but could make nothing out as to lions. On going down toward the river some half mile from camp, my attention was attracted by the unusual conduct of a leopard. He was cutting all sorts of capers; at one time ploughing along the ground with his head; at another rearing upright and tearing at his throat with his fore paws. All this was curious, it was also my opportunity, and I lost no time in putting a couple of bullets into him, the second of which laid him out nicely, without giving me the trouble which usually falls to my lot when tackling these great cats. On proceeding to investigate the reason for such a strange performance, my wonder ceased. Having tackled a porcupine, with more gusto than discretion, one of the latter's quills had got inserted under the root of the leopard's tongue, and was working deeper and deeper. The torture the poor animal endured must have been awful, and I do not imagine it could have survived. No dead "porky" appeared to be around, so, thanking him in his absence, I took the beautiful spotted skin. Next day I was laid up with an attack of fever which kept me idle for some time. My two boys, however, attended assiduously to my needs, and in due course I got about again. The lions had, during my sickness, once more appeared in the neighborhood, and seemed to hang around indefinitely, but there being plenty of game about they did not molest us in any way.

Well, I said that I got one of these lions after all, though he took quite a lot of getting, escaping me altogether on one occasion. I was not over strong bodily, but was pretty much so in purpose, and it annoyed me to hear the roaring night after night and not render an account of it; then again our animals were getting almost beyond control, from the incessant tension on their nerves. Strolling away towards the hills one morning I came suddenly on a lion lying on a rock. His muzzle was stretched straight towards me, between his huge paws; his body, position and surroundings adapting themselves so admirably to each other that I was almost up to him before I was aware of his proximity.

Lion-Hunting as a Fine Art.

He was wide awake enough, however, and the instant he knew I had seen him he started up and bounded away, giving me no time, in my nervous condition, to get a good shot; I fired, but as soon as I touched the trigger I knew I had missed him—perhaps it was all the better for me that I did so—and the next moment he was out of sight among the rocks.

Walking on a little farther, I came upon the half-consumed carcass of a hartebeeste, evidently killed the night before, the trail by which the lion had dragged it pointing towards the veldt. Here, then, was a chance too good to be lost; better than laying out shot game, though I confess I would just as soon the spot had been a little nearer to the wagon, which was, in fact, more than a mile away. But I made up my mind at once to take advantage of this piece of luck and return at dusk and lie up. Now, my experience goes to show that it is far too easy a matter to miss with a bullet in uncertain light, and that at short range buckshot is quite effective enough with most game. I therefore made several little paper shells to fit my ten-gauge gun, and, chambering the buckshot nicely therein, filled up the interstices with eland grease; no lion can withstand such a battery at a fair range, and your aim is much more likely to be accurate. Of course, I took the carbine with 480 grain ball, and telling my boys to stay by the wagon—for I could place no dependence upon either of them on such expeditions—evening found me duly esconced among the boulders this side the half eaten body, at a distance of about 20 paces and looking directly towards the route taken by the lion when I had previously disturbed.

For a couple of hours I had waited, occasionally changing position to ease the cramping of my limbs. "Everything comes to him who waits," and at last, over a rock beyond, appeared the lion, gradually rising into full view. In the dim light he appeared monstrous as he stood, chest full on; and then, as he gave vent to a sonorous roar, which echoed and re-echoed from rock to rock, the effect was grand, and beyond any power of expression, it is under such circumstances as these that one sees the lion at his best. Night-time is his day, and in the sunlight he is more or less at a disadvantage. He must have stood a full minute like this; a sore temptation to me to fire, and I believe I should have killed him stone dead had I done so. Having apparently satisfied himself that things were all right, he walked leisurely down to his prey, and, again uttering a roar, stood facing me. This time I did not hesitate, but pulling both barrels nearly simultaneously put both charges into his chest, and the lion fell forward almost without a sound.

Tammany Man's Double-Barreled Compliment Did Away with Thought of Hostilities.

The orchestra was playing loudly in one of the restaurants in Denver, Col., during the Democratic national convention, and the diners were talking loudly so they might hear and be heard. At one table sat a beautiful woman and her escort and at the next table a number of Tammany men.

Suddenly the orchestra stopped, bing! and a Tammany man's voice rang out: "By George, that's a good looking woman! I'd like to meet her."

The man at the next table, who was with the lady came over, tapped the Tammany man on the shoulder and said frigidly: "Sir, that lady is my wife."

"Shake," said the Tammany man; "I am glad to meet you. You certainly are a good picker."

Has Left Grave for Grave of Man Who Was Best Kind to Him Many Years Ago.

Rev. John Henri Sattig, pastor of St. Philip's church, Dyker Heights, Brooklyn, tells this beautiful story:

"In Milford, Pa., there is an old graveyard, neglected, weed-grown and unkempt. Of all the mounds in that village of the dead only one is cared for. On that the grass is neatly trimmed, flowers bloom and never a weed appears. The visitor who looks upon this evidence of love and devotion amid so many examples of forgetfulness usually asks whose grave it is, and the sexton answers: 'The man whose body rests there had neither chick nor child. Nearly every day for the six years since the man died a boy comes here to 'tend to the grave. Winter and summer he comes. The lad is the butcher boy. The man was the only human being who ever was kind to the boy.'"

Facts About the Texas Gulf Coast From One Who Knows

In a recent letter to the President of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico R. R., Robert H. Kern, Esq., 922 Missouri Trust Building, St. Louis, writes:

"Mr. Randolph has shown me your letter in which reference is made to my farming in Missouri. Presuming that you would like to know a little of my success in that line, I will say that I have been actively farming under my own supervision for seven years 2,000 acres of fine farming land in Macon County, Mo. You may judge of the quality of this land when I tell you that I have in favorable seasons raised 75 bushels of corn to the acre, 30 bushels of wheat and 2 tons of hay. I have also studied farming conditions in the high priced lands of Illinois and Iowa. My own experience and this observation leads me to believe that if the best farms in any of those States for any five years average 50 bushels of corn to the acre, and that the farmer realizes therefrom $20 or $25 an acre, he is doing the best possible, and out of this, expense, etc., of raising crops must be deducted.

"A year ago I went to the lower Rio Grande Valley in the Gulf Coast Country of Texas and spent some time studying farming conditions there; I found my 20 years' experience on a farm in Bourbon Co., Ky., and my long experience in Missouri of great service. So much impressed was I with the vast superiority of farming in the Brownsville, Texas, region, that I bought 160 acres of land near Santa Maria, Texas, and put my son (a college boy) in charge. The result of practically a year is far better than I anticipated. He has cut alfalfa sown in January, 1908, 9 times, and realized therefrom 8 tons to the acre, worth $21.50 a ton at Mercedes, Texas, in February. He is now shipping cabbage planted in December, realizing between $200 and $300 an acre, and writes me that from the cabbage, cucumber, melon and bean crop of 40 acres, he will realize over $7,000. He has a fine fig orchard of over 7,000 trees set out in February, 1907, which raised from 10 acres in July and August, 1908, over $100 worth of figs to the acre and the entire crop this year should realize over $150 per acre. Orange trees set out two years ago, then two years old, are bearing now. One old lemon tree has borne over 2,000 fine lemons since July, and bananas are growing all the time. In my roamings in Europe and America I have neither seen a country nor a climate that compares with it."

Many others are making similar successes. Building fortunes.

Judith's Bold Venture

She Determines to Save Her Beloved Jerusalem.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1905, by the author, W. A. Eckes.)

Based on Apocryphal Book of Judith, Chapters 1-9.

Judith and the Book of Judith.—The heroine, or Judith of the story related in the Apocryphal book bearing her name appears as an ideal type of piety (Judith 8:6), of beauty (11:21), of courage and chastity (16:22). Her supposed descent from Simeon (9:2), and the manner in which she refers to his cruel deed (Gen. 34:25), mark the conception of the character, which evidently belongs to a period of stern and perilous conflict. The book, like that of Tobit, belongs to the earliest specimens of historical fiction. The narrative of the reign of "Nebuchadnezzar, king of Nineveh," (20, 1:1), of the campaign of Holofernes, and the deliverance of Bethulia, through the stratagem and courage of the Jewish heroine, contains too many and too serious difficulties, both historical and geographical, to allow of the supposition that it is either literally true, or even carefully molded on truth. There are 16 chapters in the book.

SERMONETTE.

True piety finds expression in heroic deeds.

The heart which beats true with God fears not in the presence of the power of wickedness.

A beautiful physique and a beautiful heart form a combination which can work mightily for God among men.

Too often it is true that beauty proves a pitfall and a snare to its possessor.

It is a saying that "She is too pretty to be good," and "She is too good to be pretty."

But the commonest face and form becomes beautiful in the reflected light of the beautiful deeds of heart and life.

However, vanity, frivolity and wickedness are not necessary corollaries of beauty of face and form.

Adown history's pages have come the records of beautiful women who have lived beautifully and wrought magnificently, heroically.

Among such is this fair Jewish widow, Judith.

The grace and beauty of the visible were but the beautiful setting for the purity of heart and lofty ideals of the life within.

She knew God and delighted to serve him, and the beauty and grace with which God had endowed her, instead of turning her heart from him, became the blessed instrument of deliverance to her beloved city.

Whether the story is history or only fiction, this fact remains that womanhood is here exalted, and Judith becomes the expression of all that is purest, most sublime and heroic.

It is such characters as this that the world needs in every age. Judith shines like a rare gem from out a dark background. Blessed is her memory. And blessed is the memory of every true woman who in the hour of great need, whether in the national life or the life of the home, rises heroically and dedicates her all for the help and salvation of others.

Beauty that is only skin deep is perilous. Beauty which reaches to the inner heart and life is the beauty which proves a benediction upon the world.

Truly, the value of a "good woman is far above rubies."

THE STORY.

"WITHIN five days!"

Judith repeated the words over and over again to herself, and with each repetition the terror of the situation grew upon her.

Holofernes, the powerful general of the great king Nebuchadnezzar, had many months before surrounded the city of Bethulia, and had cut off food supplies and water, until now the city is in sore straits, and at last the governor and officials had given their word that if relief did not come within five days the gates of the city would be opened and they would go forth to become a spoil and a prey to Holofernes and his army.

"Within five days!"

"Nay," exclaimed Judith, her dainty sandaled foot coming with a sudden emphasis to the ground. "Nay, it must not be."

Then calling her maid she directed that Ozias, Chabris and Chamis, the men in authority in the city, be summoned to her presence. And with no little wonder on their part they obeyed, for the beauty and virtue of Judith were known to all in the city, and her influence was great, not only among the poor to whom she ministered, but among the rich and powerful as well. Something over three years before her husband had been suddenly stricken while overseeing his workmen during barley harvest, and from that time she had not ceased to mourn for him, and delighted to see the gold and silver and the rich estates which he had left her for the blessing of those about her, for she was a devout woman and sought with all her heart to serve the Lord her God. So when this report had reached her ears that the governor of [illegible] to God [illegible] could deliver. And [illegible] Chabris and Chamis appeared [illegible] she said:

"Who are ye that have tempted God this day, and stand instead of God among the children of men? And now try the Lord Almighty, but ye shall never know anything. For ye cannot find the depth of the heart of man, neither can ye perceive the things that he thinketh. Then how can ye search out God, that hath made all these things, and know his mind, or comprehend his purpose? Nay, my brethren, provoke not our God to anger. For if he will not help us within those five days, he hath power to defend us when he will, even every day, or to destroy us before our enemies. Let us wait for salvation of him, and call upon him to help us."

"All that thou hast spoken with a good heart, and there is none that may gainsay thy words, for this is not the first day wherein thy wisdom is manifested, but from the beginning of thy days all the people have known thy understanding, because the disposition of thine heart is good," responded Ozias, earnestly. "But the people were very thirsty, and compelled us to do unto them as we have spoken. And this oath which we have spoken unto them, saying that if deliverance came not within five days that then we would open the gates of the city and surrender to our enemies—this oath we cannot break. Therefore pray thou for us, because thou art a godly woman, and the Lord will send us rain to fill our cisterns, and we shall faint no more."

"Hear me, ye rulers of the city," exclaimed Judith, as a sudden resolve formed within her heart, "for I will do a thing which shall go throughout all generations to the children of our nation. Ye shall stand this night at the gate and I will go forth with my waiting maid, and within the five days that ye have promised to deliver the city to our enemies, the Lord will visit Israel by mine hand."

"Nay," she exclaimed, raising her hand with an emphatic gesture, "inquire not ye of mine act; for I will not declare it unto you till the thing be finished that I do."

The puzzled looks upon the faces of the men before her gave place to one of confident expectancy as she finished speaking, and Ozias said:

"Go in peace, Judith, and the Lord God be before thee to take vengeance on our enemies."

Having thus spoken he, with the other princes, bowed themselves out and returned to their homes.

Then Judith fell upon her face and put ashes upon her head, and uncovered the sackcloth wherewith she was clothed, and about the time of the evening sacrifice in the temple at Jerusalem and the burning of incense she lifted her voice in prayer and cried:

"Oh, Lord God of my father Simeon, behold the Assyrians are multiplied in their power. They are exalted with horse and man. They glory in the strength of their footmen. They trust in shield and spear, and bow and sling, and know not that thou art the Lord that breakest the battles; the Lord is thy name. Smite by the deceit of my lips. Break down their stateliness by the hand of a woman. Make my speech and deceit to their wound and make every nation and tribe to acknowledge that thou art the God of all power and might, and that there is none other that protecteth the people of Isreal but thou."

The prayer ended, peace and confidence came to her heart, that confidence which comes from inner faith that God has heard and will answer. She arose and, calling her maid, she went down into the house wherein she had abode during the glad season of the feast days. And she put off the sackcloth which she had on and laid aside the garments of her widowhood. And when she had bathed she anointed herself with precious ointment and braided the hair of her head, and put thereon most gorgeous raiment wherewith she was clad during the life of her husband, Manasses. And she put sandals upon her feet and put about her her bracelets and her chains and her rings and her earrings, and all her ornaments, and she decked herself bravely, to allure the eyes of all men that should see her.

Then calling her maid she commanded her that she should bring a bottle of wine, and a cruse of oil, and fill a bag with parched corn, and lumps of figs, and with fine bread.

Thus adorned and accompanied by her maid, laden with the provisions for their journey, they set forth and came to the gate of the city, where according to appointment, she found Ozias and the other princes of the city standing. And when they saw her, that her countenance was altered and her apparel changed, they wondered at her beauty very greatly and said unto her:

"The God of our fathers give thee favor and accomplish thine enterprises to the glory of the children of Israel, and to the exaltation of Jerusalem."

And following this benediction upon this lovely and devout woman they fell upon their faces and worshiped God.

"Command that the gates he opened unto me," she directed, simply.

And when they had done so Judith passed out, and her maid with her. And the men of the city looked after her until she had gone down the mountain. Then, with straining eyes they watched her cross the valley and at last fade from view into the hazy mist of the far side of the deep valley.

"She is gone," they said with reverent upward look. "There is naught we can do but wait."

Last spring a cat on the farm of Albert Fisher, near Waterville, N. Y., had several small kittens. As the farm was overstocked with cats her young were taken from her and drowned. After that the cat seemed very unhappy, and being a house favorite she received considerable sympathy.

One day shortly after her kittens were taken from her a young squirrel which had fallen from its nest in the hollow of a tree was found and taken to the cat with the idea that it would be a dainty morsel to tempt her appetite.

Instead of pouncing upon it cat fashion she took the young squirrel to the box where she had so recently mothered her own young and there bestowed upon the squirrel all the affection she had previously given to her kittens.

Stranger still, says a writer in Country Life in America, in about two hours the old cat had hunted out the squirrel's nest in the tree some distance away and carried the remainder of the young squirrels in her mouth, one at a time, to her box in the house.

Then until the squirrels were nearly full grown the cat watched over them with all the solicitude that is possible for any animal mother to show, even providing nourishment for them in exactly the same manner that she had for her own young. When the squirrels had outgrown a mother's attention they were very tame and were given to friends of the family.

Brussels' Domestic Problem.

A Brussels merchant advertised for a servant. One applicant pleased him. The terms and the outfit were arranged when the girl asked: "Who washes the dishes?" Taken aback, the merchant asked her to repeat her question. The girl did so without turning a hair. "Madame washes the dishes and I dry them," replied the merchant. "Can you play the piano?" he asked. "No," was the reply. "Then I am afraid you will not do," said the merchant. The girl retired with a dignified air. With a politeness which is described as exquisite, she turned, according to the Throne and Country, to the merchant and said: "To-morrow I shall take lessons at the conservatoire, and as soon as I begin to make progress I will call again!" This story is certified as authentic.

The Treaty with Panama.

Under the terms of the treaty which was exchanged between the Republic of Panama and the United States on February 26, 1904, the republic of Panama granted to the United States the perpetual use, occupation and control of a strip of land five miles wide on each side of the central line of the route of the Panama canal.

The treaty also conceded to the United States all of the rights, powers, and authority over this strip of land which this country would have if it were the sovereign of that zone. Under the treaty the canal is to be a neutral waterway.

Was Not in Her Hair.

"Now, Margaret, dear, I'm going to put some vaseline on your hair to take the dandruff out," said mamma to her small hopeful of five. "Then you may run out and play."

"What's in your hair, Margie?" asked her playmate a little later. "It looks all shiny."

"Oh, my mamma put some gasoline in it to take the dandelions out," replied little Margaret, wisely.

Teaching the Blind.

An interesting entertainment, arranged by Miss Winnifred Holt of New York, secretary of the New Association for the Blind, was a hippodrome. A program including swimming races, fancy diving, life-saving, butterfly dancing and all sorts of games, in which blind children took part, was arranged. Miss Helen Keller was very enthusiastic about the entertainment, which she said illustrated so well what a difference in courage and strength a well-developed body makes when a child is blind.

ETHEART TOILET SOAP

Next week there will be published in this paper a coupon which, when properly signed, will be good for a full-sized cake of Sweetheart Toilet Soap absolutely free.

Try It at Our Expense

This is a very unusual offer because "Sweetheart" is an unusual soap. There are hundreds of toilet soaps to-day, yet not one other like this. Get a full-size cake free, then judge if "Sweetheart" isn't unique—decide if you don't like it better.

You cannot know, madam, until you've tried this soap, what you miss when you use other soaps.

We've studied these soaps and know.

Many are good soaps—they please lots of women. But we've studied the good soaps most. We learned how, in this way, to make "Sweetheart" better than all the rest.

We Are Sure of This

Otherwise we couldn't afford to buy a cake of our soap for so many women. For unless all who try our soap buy it again, we lose a large amount of money on this offer.

We can't afford to buy every woman a cake of this soap, so these coupons must be limited. But all readers of next week's issue of this paper can get the gift. Simply cut out the coupon in next week's paper and present it to your grocer.

Absolute Purity

"Sweetheart" Soap is, first of all, a pure soap. It is made from edible products—the very best the market affords—but it is more than a merely pure or neutral soap, as it also contains benzoin, cold cream and glycerine in correct scientific proportions. These last named ingredients are well known for their beneficial effect on the skin—softening, purifying and helping to keep it in a natural condition.

The cream white color of "Sweetheart" is the best proof of its purity. Nothing is added to color it.

Exquisite Perfume

"Sweetheart" Soap is scented with an exquisite rose perfume made from a secret formula of pure essential oils. It is milled five times, making it as smooth and fine as the most expensive French soaps.

Local News.

The weather has been too wet for ducks this spring.

A cloud no larger than ones hand could produce a big rain any time last week.

The voracious potato bug is ready for business. It carries an umbrella and wears rubber boots.

There has been rain enough to make early potatoes, but as yet they have received very little work.

Some of the farmers say cut worms are plentiful while others have failed to discover any in their fields.

Some of the Burlington lovers of dramatic art, took in French's big show at Constance, last Friday night.

For the benefit of the local library there will be feasting on strawberries in Burlington, next Saturday night.

The new owner of Petersburg flour mill will endeavor to create a local market for all the wheat in this part of the county.

There has been plenty of rain this spring to make the early potatoes, which have not received the usual amount of work.

About half a dozen kids make considerable sport nearly every evening for the men by pulling off a series of marathone contests.

Arnett won the nomination for State Senator over Walker Hall, in Kenton county, four votes. That's what you call an eye-lash finish.

The weather so far this spring is very similar to the weather of 1908, which was succeeded by the worst drought ever known in this part of the country.

The weather the past two weeks has been objectionable in printing offices, where atmosphere heavily charged with moisture makes things go wrong.

The growing wheat does not need much more rain, and unless there is favorable weather from now until the crop is harvested, it will not amount to much.

William Kirkpatrick brings manufactured ice from the city in 1,000 pound lots, and puts it in the cellar beneath his store room, where it keeps remarkably well.

Everybody who wanted work last week was able to secure it in the tobacco fields, but as setting out tobacco plants is hard labor not many ran after the job.

Too much amusement in this part of the county last Saturday afternoon—a picnic at Harvest Home grounds and a game of base ball at Burlington ball park.

Harvest Home Grounds were not in as good condition last Saturday afternoon for picnics as they have been seen, on account of the earth being so full of water.

Manager Kirkpatrick had a big force of hands, a team and mower and a land roller at work on the base ball grounds a day or two last week, putting it in condition.

When the land that Attorney D. E. Castleman sold to G. T. Gaines was surveyed it was found to be 41.17. It is a part of what is known as the Baker land west of town.

The RECORDER neglected to mention, last week, the very pleasing manner in which the Boone Literary Society was entertained by Mrs. M. L. Riddell on the Friday evening before.

Burlington and Big Bone ball teams hook up at Big Bone park next Saturday afternoon, and the indications are Burlington will be accompanied by a considerable aggregation of rooters.

Elaborate arrangements are being made for the strawberry festival to be given by the local literary society next Saturday night. Everybody is invited to attend and help along in a good cause.

Almost daily, when the weather is at all favorable, Burlington sends out one or more delegations called fishing parties. Some go to the ponds in the neighborhood, while others take to the creeks.

Wheat harvest will be on hand in a short time now, and many fields, which in the spring, looked worthless, will make a good yield unless weather conditions in the next week or ten days interfere.

William Kirkpatrick made his first shipment of lambs, last week, for which he received very satisfactory prices. He seldom begins to move his purchase before the first of July, but the price induced him to seek the market earlier this year.

Miss Ina Cleo Hedgecock, of Bracken county, is the guest of her cousin, Dr. F. L. Peddicord and wife.

Farmers are not hilarious over the weather conditions this morning. If it does not rain any more, that which fell last night will stop the plows for at least a couple of days.

Elmer Kirkpatrick's horse was sick and got down in the stable, last Thursday night, and injured itself so badly it could not be used to propel the beef wagon on its route last Saturday.

Jailer Sam Adams was busy with his mowing scythe two or three days last week, and made the weeds that were threatening to take possession of the county's premises, look very sick.

Some of the boys say Charlie Westbay was seen coming up town, last Thursday evening, carrying a piece of smoked glass, and when asked what he was going to do with it said: "Look at the eclipse of the moon."

A hen belonging to Mrs. J. P. Tanner produced an egg a few days ago in which there was a perfectly formed small egg inclosed in the regulation shell. The inside egg was about the size of an ordinary egg laid by a bird.

Sheriff's Tax Notices.

The sheriff has had notices printed giving the times and places at which he will meet the taxpayers to receive their taxes. The notices contain other information that is of general interest to the public.

Several very large ricks of stone out on the Belleview pike awaiting the crusher. To one not familiar with the quantity of metal required to build a road, these ricks look like they contain enough to reconstruct the road its entire length.

Mr. Beuchert, who owns the farm on which Thomas Jones lives, sent about 9,000 pounds shelled corn out to Mr. Jones, one day last week. Some of the boys suggested that he was filling a requisition for seed corn that Mr. Jones had made on him.

The citizens of Home City, Ohio, want the name of that beautiful little town changed to "Sayler Park," so that in the event of being annexed to Cincinnati the place will not be lost sight of, and, at the same time, the name of its first mayor will be honored.

A Cincinnati Time Lock Company's workman was in Burlington, last Friday, giving the time lock on the large safe in the Boone County Deposit Bank its annual overhauling. The company has a yearly contract with the bank to keep the lock in order, and a man is sent once a year to look to it.

Irven Rue, a recent acquisition to the ranks of the agriculturalists, was in town, last Friday. Mr. Rue has put out a large crop of tobacco, and the work necessary has reduced his avoirdupoise considerably, bringing him down to his working weight. He reports leaves on the first tobacco he set as large as his hand.

In Memory of Little Ramond Ogden.

The Lord has seen fit to take from our midst the only child of Walter and Helena Ogden, aged 4 years, 8 months and 20 days. He was a bright, intelligent child, loved by all who knew him. He has crossed the river of death and to be with the loved ones gone before and to await our coming.

A Card of Thanks.

I take this means to express my thanks and gratitude to the many friends who so nobly and faithfully aided me in the Teachers' Contest. Words are inadequate to express my appreciation of the beautiful gift I won, and I know that my success was due to your faithful help. Please accept this token of my gratitude. Yours Truly,

JENNIE L. AYLOR.

Ferry Company Elects Directors.

The stockholders of the Lawrenceburg Ferry company met in the ferry house on the Kentucky shore Tuesday afternoon and perfected their organization by electing W. H. O'Brien, Harris Fitch, Victor O'Shaughnessy, Elkanah Barrott and George Kunz directors. The newly elected board will meet shortly and elect officers.—Lawrenceburg Press.

It has been made known to the RECORDER that its heretofore staunch friend, Ransom Ryle, of Locust Grove neighborhood, has been on his ear ever since he read in last week's issue that a twelve pound girl had been born to him and his good wife, and that he is threatening to do all kinds of belligerant stunts the next time he comes to this office, if the announcement is not changed so as to show that the new comer at his home is of the masculine gender, and looks just like his pa.

Dogs raided the flock of sheep belonging to Walter Ryle, of East Bend, a few nights since, and ruined the flock, killing 20 and mangling 25 so as to make them worthless. Mr. Ryle is the heaviest loser of sheep killed by dogs of any person in this county in many years.

Lightning Hits Hard.

The lightning struck a large, dead oak tree out on Albert Conner's land, last Friday, and literally reduced it to kindling wood. Fire flew in every direction from the tree, while the entire neighborhood was shaken up by the concussion.

Educational Rally at Belleview.

There will be an educational rally at Belleview next Friday night, at which State Senator R. B. Brown, of Warsaw, Gallatin county; County Superintendent D. M. Snyder, Rev. Hensley, Rev. Edgar Riley and others, will speak. Any question relative to the new school at Belleview will be answered. All invited.

Boone County's Taxes.

The following shows the amounts on which Boone county people pay taxes:

Land	$4,569,369 00
Town Lots	494,292 00
Personalty	2,584,607 00
Total	$6,648,821 00

Tax collected on above amount of property is as follows:

For State	$33,241 34
For County	26,593 41
Total collection	59,834 75

The above amount does not include the taxes on the banks, railroads and franchises which will increase the above amount considerably.

Joners Delph Dead.

After a lingering illness of many months during which suffering was endured in a most patient manner, Jonas Delph passed away on Wednesday of last week, aged 80 years, 9 months and 7 days. He was a son of Joel Delph, who for many years, resided where Perry Ryle now lives. He leaves a son, Wilson Delph, and a daughter, Mrs. L. A. Tanner, who have the sympathy of all in the loss of their father. After the funeral discourse by Rev. Allie Stith at Gunpowder church, last Friday, the remains were conveyed to an old family cemetery near Pleasant Valley school house and interred. Mr. Delph was a jovial, old time gentleman, honored and respected by all with whom he came in contact during his long journey in life. His wife, who was a daughter of Samuel Delph has been dead for many years.

Sheep and the Wool.

A well-known sheep breeder of Michigan, Mr. L. C. Reynolds, makes a timely suggestion in an article contributed to the Drovers Journal. He says:

Shearing time is an excellent opportunity to study the wool producing side of the flock and determine which individual produce a superior staple of wool. As the wool is being removed from the sheep time should be taken to remove a few fibers of the fleece and note its quality. In every flock there is a wide variation in the quality of the wool from different individuals, despite the fact that they were sired by the same ram and given practically the same care and feed. The average woolproducing sheep of the double-deck type should shear at least twelve lbs. of wool of good length and density. The wool should not be excessively fine nor, on the other hand, too coarse, but should possess something of medium quality. I have a number of individuals in my flock that annually shear twelve to thirteen pounds of wool of the quality that always commands the highest market price. These ewes are on the order of the mutton breed, although they have been bred for a number of years for both wool and mutton production.

I am firmly of the opinion that the most profitable sheep for the average farmer to raise in the future is the animal that will produce a high quality of both wool and mutton. In view of the fact that many of our flocks at the present time have been bred along mutton lines exclusively, I believe flock owners can well afford to give more attention to the wool producing side of their flocks. For the past few years wool has been commanding a very high and uniform price. The mutton market is well established. To insure the greatest profit from the growing of sheep, either on the farm or range, a superior quality of both wool and mutton must be marketed. There has been a decided improvement in the sheep producing industry in the past few years along the line above considered, but I am fully aware that there is plenty of room for considerable more along the line of combining both the wool and mutton qualities.

H. G. Gaines was in town, Sunday morning, enjoying a ride on his fine, black saddle mare.

Last Sunday Benjamin Snyder, of Florence, took his sorrel stallion to Lawrenceburg, where he will have it handled on the track.

The Rising Sun Local of May 29th came in Sunday looking as bright and interesting as could be. It was accompanied by the issue of the 5th inst.

The picnic at Harvest Home grounds, last Saturday afternoon, was not attended by a very large number of young people, but those who were there had a very pleasant time.

Miss Nora, daughter of Benjamin Cason on Middle creek, and who operated on one day last week by Drs. Paul, of Cincinnati, and Peddicord, of Burlington, is said to be doing nicely.

A one legged hobo struck the town a few days ago. He claimed to have been a miner and a cowboy, having lost his limb while laboring in the mines. He entertained some of the boys by narrating some of the exciting incidents in his life.

NOTICE—The members of Burlington local A. S. of E. are requested to meet at the Peoples Deposit Bank at 2 p. m. June 12, 1909. Business of importance is to come before the Union.

D. E. CASTLEMAN, Pres.
L. T. CLORE, Secty

Joseph Givan, a noted fox hunter, of Indiana, came over to Edward Botts' one day last week, bringing his dogs for a chase. That night the entire neighborhood assembled at Everett Walton's and proceeded to scour the Woolper hills and dales until midnight, when the hunt was called off and pronounced a failure because of the absence of foxes.

The Burlington base ball team was defeated on the local grounds, last Saturday afternoon by a score of 9 to 3, a direct result of bad inside playing. Had the boys put up as good a game with their noodles as they did with their sticks the score would not have been so lopsided. The battery, Conner and Slayback, were alright, but Conner acted wisely when he saw the poor support he was getting and saved his wing. The home team put up the poorest game ever witnessed on the local grounds, while the Hebron boys were full of ginger and played fast. Lowden, Hebron's new pitcher did not prove the puzzle he was expected.

An auto party lead by B. W. Campbell of the Campbell-Perkins Co., Cincinnati, came into town Sunday about 11 o'clock, and after the members of the party slaked their thirst by imbibing freely of the pure, cooling contents of the public cistern, they proceeded to the home of Mrs. Chas. A. Gaines, of Bullittsburg, where they enjoyed a good, country dinner. In the afternoon the party returned to Burlington by way of Hebron and Limaburg, again enjoying the invigorating output of the public cistern, after which the graves of Mr. Campbell's parents in the cemetery north of the town were visited, from where the autoists headed for Cincinnati, having had a most delightful tour through the northern part of the county.

Brought Back for Burial.

The remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Gordon, stepmother of W. W. Grimsley, of Big Bone, who died at her home in Muncie, Indiana, were brought to Beaver Lick, where a funeral discourse was delivered by Rev. Edgar Riley, Sunday afternoon, after which she was interred in the cemetery near the church. Mrs. Elizabeth Moore Gordon was born March 28th, 1834, and died June 4th, 1909. She married Matthew Gordon in March, 1852. To them were born five girls and two boys. She joined the church at the age of fourteen, and was a consistent member the remainder of her life.

In Memory of

Mr. Edwin Melvin Gaines, who was born in Burlington, Ky., Jan. 16, 1821. He was the son of Churchhill Gaines, who came from Orange county, Virginia, at an early day, and Mary Rucker Gaines, of Missouri. He spent his life in Boone county, where he had many friends. He married Miss Ann Eliza Watts, when a young man, and raised a fine family of four sons: Alfred Sandford, Jas. Taylor, Charles Anderson and John Sidney, and one daughter, Mary Melvina, who married James A. Duncan. Jas. T., of Idlewild and John S., of Colorado, survive him. He was given to hospitality—his home was always open to his friends. He was an upright man, a fine citizen and highly respected by all who knew him. He united with Bullittsburg Baptist church in middle life and enjoyed her fellowship until his death, which occured April 3, 1909. **

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

FRIENDLY WITH JAPAN.

Two Japanese cruisers have sailed in through the Golden Gate. Their officers and men have been made welcome and given the right hand of fellowship. The reception has been a warm one, and there has not been even the shadow of ill-feeling, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. No outbursts have occurred to mar the visit of our friends from the other side of the Pacific, and not a single voice has been raised to indicate that the Japanese naval representatives are anything but the most agreeable visitors. Possibly this is not a notable fact. But it seems worthy of consideration by reason of the agitation with which California, and, indeed, the whole country, was stirred last winter when the law-makers of that state were contemplating adverse legislation against Japanese who have settled there. Feeling then appeared to be bitter. Very likely this is not wholly dead, but merely temporarily subdued. But these latest manifestations of friendship for the Japanese indicate that while there may be a Japanese problem for future solution, it is not so serious but that it can be settled with perfect amity and understanding. The future holds forth no promise of war with the mikado.

Storms have an important economic relationship to the country. The bad weather of the spring served to retard growth and may have the effect of reducing largely the production of some food articles, although there is still abundant ground for hope that the principal crops will be of normal size. And the florists have had their troubles with the weather. Peculiarly acute is the case of a Cincinnati flower dealer, who has been forced into bankruptcy. A hailstorm visited that section and did such damage to [illegible] greenhouses and flower beds that he was compelled to seek a compromise with creditors. The elements are uncertain quantities when it comes to agriculture and horticulture.

The story from Kingston, St. Vincent, in the British West Indies, that the captain and crew of the New Bedford whaling ship Carrie D. Knowles, which has been missing five years, have since their disappearance been confined in secret Venezuelan dungeons reads like a chapter from yellow covered literature. An American seaman tells the story of his escape from prison and gives the names of the crew of the missing ship. The matter will doubtless be thoroughly sifted by the state department, to ascertain whether the sailor is telling the truth or "reeling off a yarn." It does not seem possible that anything like this could be kept under cover in Venezuela for five years.

The allegation from Young Turk sources that evidence has been found indicating the intention of the revolutionists of April 13 to enter upon a general massacre of foreigners in Constantinople may be regarded with skepticism in some quarters. But the story certainly fits in closely with the doings in Syria and elsewhere in Asia Minor, where the slaughter of Christians followed immediately on the heels of the uprising in the capital city. And there is a widespread belief that there were high officials under the administration of Abdul Hamid who were not at all too good to wink at, if not openly to encourage, such savagery.

Another difficulty in aviation is brought to the front by experience in a balloon competition at Berlin, Germany. Six balloons ascended in a rain, which turned to snow in the upper strata of air, and the flying machines were unable to make any considerable progress, being weighted with snow, and when they landed they were incrusted with snow to the depth of a foot. There are limits to airship usefulness which as yet have not been passed.

Mehmed V., the new sultan of Turkey, makes a most cordial reply to the congratulations of President Taft, in which he expresses most happy appreciation of the courtesy and in return avows his wish for "both your happiness and prosperity and those of the great and noble American people." That seems sincere and friendly. Could any one imagine any such expression issuing from Mehmed's predecessor?

The president of one of the largest woolen concerns in the country says the business is booming, and he expects an increase this year of $20,000,000 over the highest figures ever reported for a similar period. That does not look as though this great American industry is going to smash.

American cruisers are racing [illegible] Turkey to protect their subjects. An American cruiser is a pretty [illegible] even to a hoodlum.

SETTING A NEW PACE.

ROCKEFELLER A GOLFER NOW

GAME MORE INTERESTING THAN FINANCE HE SAYS.

Declares He's Out of Stock Market—Glad There Is More Work for Unemployed.

New York.—John D. Rockefeller, looking unusually fit and wearing a deep coat of tan and a flossy looking golf cap, returned Friday to New York from Hot Springs, Va., where he took Mrs. Rockefeller some time ago for her health. The oil king was accompanied by his wife, his sister-in-law and granddaughter.

"I have had a splendid time," said Mr. Rockefeller. "I've greatly improved in health and spirits. I have golfed and golfed and golfed."

"What do you think of the financial situation and bull markets?" he was asked.

"Do you know," replied the 70-year-old billionaire, "that they have one of the best golf courses in the world down there where we've been? It's a lot more interesting than finance and the stock market. You know I'm out of that sort of thing. I'm a golfer now. Ask me something about golf. I'm way up in the game. See what a tan I've got?

"But I am really glad to get back. I've been away five months, and it seems good to see New York again."

Mr. Rockefeller said the death of H. H. Rogers had been a great blow to him. "It was sad, very sad," he said.

He was curious to know if there was more work for the unemployed than there had been. When told that there was apparently more work than formerly, he said:

"That's fine. I'm awfully glad to hear it."

STREAM POLLUTION PERILS

Epidemic Caused and Waters Made Unfit for Use, Declares Report of Committee.

Washington.—The committee on the "Pollution of Streams," appointed last year, of which Alec H. Seymour, secretary of the New York state department of health is chairman, Friday presented its report to the meeting of the state and provincial boards of health of North America. The other members of the committee are Dr. Charles O. Probst, secretary of the Ohio state board of health, and Dr. H. D. Holton, secretary of the Vermont state board of health.

Studies of conditions all over the United States and reports of state health departments show that there have been many epidemics of typhoid fever directly due to this practice; that in many case public nuisances have been caused, and that many of the waters of the various states are rendered unfit for domestic and manufacturing purposes. Fish life has been destroyed and the waters ruined for boating, bathing and fishing and rendered objectionable and obnoxious in other ways.

The report shows that during the past few years many laws have been passed dealing with this subject, but that the legislative activity has not kept pace with the needs.

CRIME FIGHTERS IN SESSION.

National Conference on Criminal Law and Criminology Draws Many Experts to Chicago.

Chicago.—Leaders in the war on crime from all parts of the country have been attracted to this city by the national conference on criminal law and criminology which opened Friday in the Northwestern University School of Law. The meeting is in a way a celebration of the school's fiftieth anniversary, and scores of lawyers, penologists, prosecuting officers, physicians, wardens, and others were invited to take part in the discussions. There will be no set speeches.

The wide range of the conference is shown by [illegible] being discussed. Some of them are:

The unnecessary multiplication of criminal laws as a cause of disrespect of, and disregard for, the law.

Needed reforms in the use of medical expert testimony, and the feasibility of establishing state commissions of specialists for expert testimony.

The problem of the jury system.

The problem of the simplification of judicial procedure by eliminating certain of the cumbersome and antiquated forms of the common law.

Limitations and restrictions on the right of appeal. To what extent should reversals for errors he permitted?

Measures for the supervision of suspects, especially in such matters as the "Black Hand" crimes.

Is irresponsibility co-extensive with insanity?

The mixed high school as a factor in adolescent criminality.

Whether all technicalities in pleading and practice which do not affect the substantial rights of the accused should be disregarded.

GIRL'S SLAYER TO HANG.

Jury Convicts Negro Who Killed Ottumwa Choir Singer and Barely Escaped Lynching.

Centerville, Ia.—Quickly following the jury's verdict of guilty in the case of John Junkin, a negro who murdered Miss Clara Rosen, a choir singer of Ottumwa, Judge M. A. Roberts sentenced the prisoner to he hanged.

The jury returned its verdict after a deliberation of less than four hours. There was an immense crowd awaiting the result of the trial and as the last words were read by the clerk a shout went up which was taken up by the crowd in the courthouse square.

Attorneys for the defense waived their customary right of three days before sentence of death is passed and agreed that Judge Roberts pass sentence immediately, which the court did. Junkin will hang the last Friday in July, 1910. He was taken to Fort Madison for safe keeping till the day of his execution.

Adj. Gen. Guy Logan of Des Moines was in the court room when the sentence was pronounced. He stated that there would be no need of militia to guard the prisoner as the verdict met with popular favor.

Junkin's crime was one of the most atrocious in Iowa. He confessed killing Clara Rosen with a stone while she was returning from the home of her sister. Later he dragged the girl into an excavation and assaulted her. Her dead body was found by a searching party the next morning.

WHARF, PULLED BY STEAMER,

Collapsed on Shore of Lake Ponchartrain—A Dozen Drowned and Death List May Reach Fifty.

New Orleans, La., June 7.—By the collapse of a pier in Lake Ponchartrain at Mandeville, across the lake, Sunday afternoon a number of excursionists were killed, some by being crushed to death and others by drowning.

Up to midnight ten bodies had been recovered and it is feared that the dead may reach 25 or 50, as many are known to be missing.

All the dead and injured belonged in this city and had gone to Mandeville on the usual Sunday excursion. They were waiting for the excursion steamer Margaret in order to return to this city when the accident happened.

The known dead: Marie Gorten, Catherine Gorten, Laura Ray, Lizzie Lotz, Alice Von Chaffin, Mrs. Eberhardt and 8-year-old child, Mrs. Chas. Bruno and child, Jennie Pabst.

The Margaret, plying between the west end of New Orleans and points on the north coast, stopped there at 6 o'clock on her return to the city, to pick up 100 passengers left in the morning. For some reason she could not land at her regular wharf and attempted to tie up at a small wharf used for fish boats.

A crowd of 200 flocked to this small wharf, but several men who realized the danger tried to order the people off. They ordered the boat away from the wharf, but she had already thrown her lines, and in backing away she pulled the wharf into the water, hurling the crowd into water eight feet deep.

There was a scene of wild panic, which lasted a long time, and many heroic rescues were made. Men dived from the big wharf and dozens jumped from the boat and succeeded in rescuing many. Several of those who were drowned were recovered immediately and physicians worked on them for hours, but without result.

Screaming, hysterically struggling for life, the 200 men, women and children were thrown in a mass into the lake.

The bodies of ten victims were recovered after the crash and brought to New Orleans on the Margaret. Some were horribly crushed.

TORTURED BY MASKED MEN.

Placed Lighted Candles To Women's Bare Feet—Lynching May Result If They Are Caught.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 7.—A brutal outrage, perpetrated by unknown robbers Sunday at Belmont, Pa., near here, has aroused the community and a lynching is threatened in the event the men are captured.

Five men, all masekd, broke into the home of Mrs. Minnie Asbe, aged 90 years, in the outskirts of the mining village, and ransacked the place. With the aged woman were her daughter, Mrs. Mary Ober, 60 years old, and her granddaughter, Miss Minnie Ober, 25 years old.

The men found only $3.50 in the house, and, believing there was more, they bound the three women and subjected them to merciless torture. The men tore wire from the pictures hanging on the walls and fastened the three women to chairs. They then bared their feet and held lighted candles to their feet.

Partially unconscious the women were otherwise abused. Before leaving the house the burglars released Miss Ober, who recovered sufficiently to summon help.

Sunday night the entire mining village is searching for the men, but owing to the fact that all were masked little hope is held that any of them will be captured.

Lynched Negro in Jail Yard.

Tallahassee, Fla., June 7.—Dangling from a limb in the jail yard was seen the remains of Maik Morris, the negro convicted and sentenced to hang for the foul murder committed by him in March. A mob, infuriated at his crime, and fearing that his sudden insanity might cause a stay of execution, called the jailer out at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. With pistols in his face, they took his keys, locked him in a cell and took Morris out. After swinging him to a limb, they fired a volley into his body, leaving it dangling for the gaze of passers-by. In March Morris shot William Langston, late sheriff of Leon county, killing him instantly.

Three Children Killed By Mother.

Corsicana, Tex., June 7.—At the home of J. M. Green, one mile from Richland, three children, the eldest a girl of 12 years, and the mother, 29 years, are dead. Their throats were cut with a razor. Indications are that Mrs. Green killed her three children and herself about 6 o'clock Sunday morning.

Little Rock, Ark., June 7.—Adolph Topf, 28, a prominent contractor and resident of Argenta, who was shot by Policeman Geo. Carr, of the Argenta police force, following a dispute over a dog license, died here. Carr is in jail.

SKIN ROUGH AS BARK.

Baby Boy Had Intense Itching Humor —Scratched Till Blood Ran.

Found a Cure in Cuticura.

"Our son, two years old, was afflicted with a rash. After he suffered with the trouble several weeks I took him to the doctor but it got worse. The rash ran together and made large blisters. The little fellow didn't want to do anything but scratch and we had to wrap his hands up to keep him from tearing the flesh open till the blood would run. The itching was intense. The skin on his back became hard and rough like the bark of a tree. He suffered intensely for about three months. But I found a remedy in Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. The result was almost magical. That was more than two years ago and there has not been the slightest symptom of it since he was cured. J. W. Lauck, Yukon, Okla., Aug. 28 and Sept. 17, 1908."

Prominent Women Aid Good Cause.

A large number of women occupying prominent positions in society, or on the stage, are taking an active interest in the anti-tuberculosis campaign. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt has recently given $1,000,000 for sanitary homes for consumptives. Mrs. Keith Spalding of Chicago has erected a sanitarium for the Chicago Tuberculosis institute at a cost of about $50,000; Mrs. Collis P. Huntington and Mrs. Borden Harriman have given largely to the consumption fight. In Porto Rico, Mrs. Albert Norton Wood, wife of a prominent army officer stationed at San Juan, has stirred the entire island through the anti-tuberculosis crusade she inaugurated. Mme. Emma Calve is a most enthusiastic worker, and has given largely of her talent and money for the relief of tuberculosis sufferers, and Miss Olga Nethersole has even lectured before the public on tuberculosis.

Englishman's Withering Reply.

The best of us sometimes forget the beam in our own eyes while we search for a mote in another's. An American traveling abroad met an Englishman with the rather remarkable name of Pthorne, which was pronounced Thorne.

"What's the good of the 'P?'" the American queried; "you don't pronounce it, do you?"

The Englishman gazed at him with the manner of one who, while he pities, is bored.

"What's the good of 'h' in 'orse?" he questioned, convincingly.—Spare Moments.

Obedience.

Prompt and unquestioning obedience is the corner stone of the foundation of succes in life. No man can give orders properly who has not learned to take them, and "save he serve, no man may rule." It will be found that the men who have won their way to positions of power and responsibility have invariably been the men who did not reason or argue or even "respectfully represent," but who promptly did as they were commanded without questioning. It is the large man, not the little man, who recognizes a superior authority.

MAKING SUNSHINE
It Is Often Found in Pure Food.

The improper selection of food drives many a healthy person into the depths of despairing illness. Indeed, much sickness comes from wrong food and just so surely as that is the case right food will make the sun shine once more.

An old veteran of Newburyport, Mass., says: "In October, I was taken sick and went to bed, losing 47 pounds in about 60 days. I had doctor after doctor, food hurt me and I had to live almost entirely on magnesia and soda. All solid food distressed me so that water would run out of my mouth in little streams.

"I had terrible night sweats, and my doctor finally said I had consumption and must die. My good wife gave up all hope. We were at Old Orchard Me., at that time and my wife saw Grape-Nuts in a grocery there. She bought some and persuaded me to try it.

"I had no faith in it, but took it to please her. To my surprise it did not distress me as all other food had done and before I had taken the fifth package I was well on the mend. The pains left my head, my mind became clearer and I gained weight rapidly.

"I went back to my work again and now after six weeks' use of the food I am better and stronger than ever before in my life. Grape-Nuts surely saved my life and made me a strong hearty man, 15 pounds heavier than before I was taken ill.

"Both my good wife and I are willing to make affidavit to the truth of this."

BURDENS LIFTED

From Bent Backs.

A bad back is a heavy handicap to those of us who have to work every day. Nine times out of ten, backache tells of kidney weakness. The only way to find relief is to cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have given sound strong backs to thousands of men and women. Mrs. Wesley Clemens, 311 Marion St., Manchester, Ia., says: "Constant work at a sewing machine seemed to bring on kidney trouble. The kidney action was irregular and the pains in my back and loins so severe I could hardly endure it. Doan's Kidney Pills made me feel better in a short time, and I took them until entirely free from my trouble."

The Selfish Invalid.

Senator Dixon, discussing a certain tariff proposition, said:

"It is selfishness, pure selfishness. It reminds me of George Cartwright of Missoula.

"George Cartwright took sick and spent a week abed. He carried on dreadfully with his groans and complaints. His wife said to him one night:

"'Well, George, I'd rather have the whole family sick than you!'

"'Huh, so would I,' George answered."

Throwing Kisses Not an Art.

No one needs instructions in the hurtling of kisses. We assume that the ladies and gentlemen clad in abbreviated garments in the stone age needed none. Surely, their successors are none the less enterprising. Throwing kisses and catching them, if we be pardoned for frivolity, are natural and involuntary arts, such as breathing and walking. Expertness doesn't matter; it's all the spirit in which they are projected.—Atlanta Constitution.

MOTHERS WHO HAVE DAUGHTERS

Find Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winchester, Ind. — "Four doctors told me that they could never make me regular, and that I would eventually have dropsy. I would bloat, and suffer from bearing-down pains, cramps and chills, and I could not sleep nights. My mother wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking one and one-half bottles of the Compound, I am all right again, and I recommend it to every suffering woman." — MRS. MAY DEAL, Winchester, Ind.

Hundreds of such letters from girls and mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them have been received by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by its use.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

"All are loud in their praises of the great crops and that wonderful country."—Extract from correspondence National Editorial Association of August, 1903.

It is now possible to secure a homestead of 160 acres free and another 160 acres at $3.00 per acre. Hundreds have paid the cost of their farms (if purchased) and then had a balance of from $10.00 to $12.00 per acre from one crop. Wheat, barley, oats, flax—all do well. Mixed farming is a great success and dairying is highly profitable. Excellent climate, splendid schools and churches, railways bring most every district within easy reach of market. Railway and land companies have lands for sale at low prices and on easy terms.

"Last Best West" pamphlets and maps sent free. For these and information as to how to secure lowest railway rates, apply to Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or the authorized Canadian Government Agent.

Bureau for Distribution of Questions for Examination of Teachers Uncovered by T. W. Vinson, of Department of Education.

Frankfort, Ky.—T. W. Vinson, First Clerk in the Department of Education of the state, has uncovered a bureau for the distribution of questions for common school examination for teachers, and has had arrested Lucy Jackson, of Louisville; Elmira Lang, of Louisville, and Sarah Lee, of Elizabethtown, and other arrests will follow. State Superintendent Crabbe is at a loss to know how the alleged sellers of the questions got hold of them. Examinations for teachers were held in the colored schools on May 28 and 29, and the next day there were complaints from Hardin, Lincoln, Christian and Jefferson counties. The trap that had been set then caused the arrest of those in jail.

GOV. WILLSON WILL EMPLOY

All the Machinery at His Disposal to Bring to Justice the Lynchers of the Negro Maxey.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson, when told of the lynching of the negro Maxey in the shadow of the statehouse, declared that he will employ all the machinery at his disposal to bring to justice the members of the masked band which took him from the jail. Rewards will be offered by the state for the arrest and conviction of any of the men. Little information as to the identity of the men who took part in the affair has been obtained by the police or detectives working on the case. The body was cut down by the coroner after he was notified by policemen attracted to the scene by the sound of shooting, but who arrived after the mob had dispersed.

SAFEBLOWERS ENTER

Newport Postoffice and Blow Open Doors of Two Immense Vaults.

Newport, Ky.—Safeblowers broke into the Newport, Ky., postoffice building, at Eighth street and Washington avenue, and blew open the outer doors of two immense vaults, where thousands of dollars in stamps and money reposed, but abandoned their quest for loot just at a time when a few minutes' more labor would have crowned their efforts with success. The boldness of the attempt has amazed government officers placed on the case. It was exactly 2:15 a. m. that a dull explosion awakened residents in the neighborhood of the post office. It is thought that this explosion was the one that wrecked what is known as the general delivery safe, a large affair that stands near the general delivery window, in the middle of the workroom, and always contains at least $2,000 worth of stock, stamps, etc. It had that much in it when the "yeggs" went to work on it. The explosion blew the immense outside door from its hinges.

JOINT WATER COMMITTEE

Of Lexington City Council Agrees Upon a 25-Year Water Contract.

Lexington, Ky.—The joint water committee of the general council agreed upon a twenty-five-year water contract between the city of Lexington and the Lexington Hydraulic and Manufacturing Co., controlling the local reservoirs and water mains. The company is to furnish the city free of cost for fire and other uses 15,000,000 gallons per annum for the first ten years, 20,000,000 gallons the second ten years, and 25,000,000 gallons for the next five years. In excess of these quantities per annum the city is to pay ten cents per one thousand gallons. Consumers of water, other than the city, are to pay 25 cents per 1,000 gallons, and the company has the privilege of adding 10 per cent to all bills remaining unpaid on the tenth day of each month.

Frankfort, Ky.—Within the next 10 days all of the large distilleries of Frankfort and Franklin county will have closed down for the season, after making, during the running season, which is from November 1 to June 15, some 90,000 barrels or 4,000,000 gallons of whisky.

Lexington, Ky.—Action by the general council on the twenty-five-year contract between the city of Lexington and the Lexington Hydraulic and Manufacturing Co. has been deferred until after September 1.

Lexington, Ky. — The venerable Charles Louis Loos, who for more than 60 years has been identified with institutions of higher learning as professor and president, delivered his valedictory as a teacher to the students of Transylvania University.

Louisville, Ky.—Memorial services in honor of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway will be held in the Methodist Temple, this city, Sunday, June 13. Bishop W. A. Chandler, of the Southern Methodist Church, will make the principal address.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Reward Increased.

Upon the recommendation of officials of Campbell county Gov. Willson increased from $100 to $250 the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of one John DeMoss. DeMoss is a fugitive, charged with murder, and the increase in the amount of the reward is due to the belief of the officers in Campbell county that he has left the United States and considerable difficulty will be met in securing his return.

Sentence Upheld.

Judgment of the Franklin circuit court sentencing M. W. Rowland, of Harrison county, former clerk of the state penitentiary, to one year imprisonment upon conviction of embezzlement, was upheld by the court of appeals.

Inheritance Tax Law Construed.

The court of appeals construed a number of sections and provisions of the Kentucky inheritance tax law in passing upon questions raised in the $2,000,000 case of the commonwealth against J. Will Gaulbert's administrator, on appeal from the Jefferson chancery court. The lower court is reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings. The court rules that the lower court may, upon its own motion, or that of an interested party, have an appraisement of the estate made at any time after 90 days from the death of the decedent; that the tax is due and payable at the death of the decedent; that if paid within nine months a discount of five per cent is allowed, but after 18 months 10 per cent interest is added, and a penalty of 20 per cent can be added for the benefit of the officer collecting after 18 months. The sheriff, collector, county attorney and judge of the county court may institute proceedings to collect the inheritance tax. The revenue agent can not have the property listed, but under direction of the state auditor may proceed to collect an inheritance tax and collect the penalties.

THAW LOSES APPEAL

MUST REMAIN IN MATTEAWAN ASYLUM, DECLARES COURT.

PATRICK LIKEWISE FAILS

Slayers of Stanford White and William Marsh Rice Legally in Custody, Says Supreme Tribunal of New York.

New York.—Harry K. Thaw, fighting incarceration at Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane, and Albert T. Patrick, serving a life imprisonment at Sing Sing, both lost their appeals by adverse decisions of the appellate division of the supreme court Friday.

The appellate division held that Thaw accepted the alternative of confinement as insane when he pleaded insanity as a defense to the crime of slaying Stanford White.

Patrick, the court held, was legally in custody, as there was no doubt of the power of the governor to commute his sentence of death. Both defendants sued out writs of habeas corpus and the proceedings were upon appeals against decisions dismissing the writs.

Opinion in Patrick Case.

The Patrick opinion, which was written by Justice Jenks, and concurred in by the other members of the court, was in part:

"The judgment, as commuted, was attacked. I have no doubt that the governor has the power of commutation in this case. I find no force to the contention that there cannot be a commutation of the punishment of death to that of life imprisonment because commutation implies a less punishment, and life imprisonment is a greater punishment than death. The degree of punishment is not determined by the individual preference of the convict.

"The relator argued that he had never accepted the commutation, but he states in his printed points that commutation does not require his acceptance. Such, I think, is the law. In this the commutation differs from pardon, either absolute or conditional Case to Be Carried Up.

"The whole proposition in effect is that the governor's act, ineffective to change the punishment, nevertheless remitted it. It is hard to see why the exercise of that power that cannot change a punishment in effect remits or abolishes it."

After the decision was rendered William L. McDonald, Patrick's counsel, said:

"We shall promptly take all the legal steps to bring Patrick's case into the higher courts. We have not an appeal by right from the appellate division, but that court can grant us an appeal if so disposed. If this is not done we shall get a writ of error and carry the case to the United States supreme court."

BANK LOOT IS $137,000.

Lewiston, Idaho, Institution Is Systematically Robbed for Five Years—Defalcation Made Good.

Lewiston, Idaho.—That the Lewiston National bank has been robbed of $137,000 is the startling statement made by National Bank Examiner Claude Gatch, who has just completed an investigation.

Beyond the fact that the stockholders have made the alleged shortage good, Mr. Gatch declines to discuss the situation. The embezzlement has, it is stated, extended over a period of the last five years, and it was made possible, it is understood, by manipulation of the adding machine used in computing the daily balances.

Immediately after the condition became known to the bank officials, a meeting of the stockholders was called and the entire defalcation made good by them.

Engineer and Fireman Killed.

Saginaw, Mich.—Engineer John Smith and Fireman Reynolds were killed when a Pere Marquette railway engine ran into a washout and tipped over burying them underneath. The accident happened two miles west of Freeland.

DENTISTRY—I have opened a dental office in the Equitable building at Walton, and will be there Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, prepared to all kinds of dental work in a satisfactory manner. I will be at Verona on Monday, and at Crittenden on Tuesday.
HARRY HAMILTON, D. D.

Died.—George Gray, aged 75 years, died at his home in Kenton county, about two miles from Walton, on the 1st inst, after a lingering illness, and his funeral took place Wednesday from his late home, the remains being interred at Knoxville, Pendleton county. He was the father of ten children, five of whom with their mother survive him.

Chas. Wolfe, blacksmith at Richwood, met with a very painful accident one day last week. While fitting a shoe a red hot scale of iron from under his hammer, struck the ball of his right eye, almost blinding him with the excruciating pain. He came to Walton and Dr. Jones treated the eye, and under his skill the sight will be saved. Mr. Wolf is recovering rapidly.

Dr. W. W. Smith, of Louisville, was here last week enroute to Big Bone Springs to attend the bedside of little Connor Carroll, who is seriously ill. The little boy suffered a severe attack of scarlet fever, and its effect produced complications of a serious nature, but it is hoped that Dr. Smith and careful nursing will pull him through to health and strength.

Prof. Charles S. Chambers, the proficient professor of penmanship in the Covington public schools, is spending part of his vacation here with his parets, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Chambers. Prof. Chambers has been elected principal of the commercial department of the High School, and his salary has been increased $250 per annum for his efficiency and painstaking efforts to improve his department.

Miss Wilella Hance, one of our popular school teachers, left Monday for Richmond, to attend the summer term of the Eastern Kentucky Normal School, where special studies for teachers are given during this session. Miss Hance was granted a teacher's first-class certificate at the last examination of the Boone County Board of Examiners, as were Miss Fannie Mae Buck and Miss Jane Hance.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Violette and three children, who are moving from Napoleon, Gallatin county, to Denver, Colorado, spent part of last week here with his sisters, Miss Nannie Violette and Mrs. Wallace Garrison, leaving for Denver, Friday morning. Mrs. Violette is in poor health and the physicians advised the change of climate. Mr. Violette has the promise of a nice position as soon as they reach Denver.

Geo. P. Nicholson, our enterprising and hustling contractor, has closed a contract for the following: C. H. Poore, a two story residence in Walton, for $2,500; J. R. Chipman, residence in Williamstown, for $4,000; C. C. Adams, residence in Williamstown, for $2,800; Wm. Kinman, residence at Glencoe, for $2,000. Mr. Nicholson is one of the best contractors in this section, giving thorough satisfaction in work and price, and, personally, is a very pleasant gentleman to have business relations with.

The High Vine Horse Company is being considerably enthused by the outcome of the breeding of their fine horse High Vine for the past season, the first he has made since he was purchased by the company at Walton. The percentage of colts foaled is very high and every colt is of a superior quality, said to be the best ever produced in this quarter and being praised by everybody that has seen them. W. Lee Gaines is the president of the company and has charge of the horse. Several offers of $110 for colts at weanling time have been made and refused.

Last Friday quite a number of prominent ladies of Cincinnati enjoyed the pleasure of an automobile ride to and from the city and an excellent dinner at the Phoenix Hotel, prepared especially for them by Mrs. H. C. Diers, the agreeable hostess of that popular hostelry. The party came in two large touring cars, and was chaperoned by Mrs. Julius Flieschman, wife of the ex-mayor of Cincinnati. She other ladies were Mrs. Louis L. Rauh, Mrs. Jesse Lowman, Mrs. Arnold Kaicheri, Mrs. Sol L. Stix, Mrs. Irvin M. Krohn, Miss B. Sinsheimer, Mrs. Mary M. Levy, Mrs. Leopold S. Roth. The ladies enjoyed the trip very much, and promised to make Walton another visit before long.

The Epworth League rally of the organization, at Walton, Verona, Erlanger and Florence at Walton, last Friday, was a great success, there being a large attendance and a delightful program rendered. Rev. E. G. B. Mann, pastor of the First Church, Lexington, preached a splendid sermon in the morning, and Rev. J. R. Savage, pastor of the Scott Street Church, Covington, entertained and instructed the congregation with a thoughtful discourse at night. The services were held at the M. E. church and the house was filled to overflowing during the entire session. The pastor, Rev. J. B. Harris and his members did everything in their power to make the meeting a success, socially and otherwise, and the visitors were very much pleased with the entertainment. About 300 people were in attendance, representing a superior type of citizenship. At the noon hour a basket dinner was spread, consisting of all of the substantials and delicacies calculated to arouse the appetite of the most fastidious, and there was plenty and some to spare so that none went away hungry. There was some excellent papers read before the assemblage, papers containing much thought for fruitful consideration, and special mention is deserving of a well prepared address by the Verona Epworth League on the "Devotional Department," and an address by John McCuilom, of Erlanger, on the "Charity and Help Department," and a paper by Miss Louise Lathrop, of Walton, on the "Social and Literary Department." The meeting was a success throughout and the people of Walton were pleased to be honored by the presence of such a splendid gathering.

HEADACHE AND EYESTRAIN

About one-half the cases who have called on me the past two weeks came because of headache. Although their vision was fairly good, they felt that eyestrain must be at the bottom of the trouble, and came to have the cause removed. GLASSES WILL POSITIVELY CURE HEADACHES, even when long standing, is positively proven by us every day.

Women Who Are Envied.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation of Kidney trouble show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Gas Struck Again.

A force of workmen was engaged drilling a well for Mrs. Amanda Rouse, of Hebron, one day last week, and at a depth of 125 to 140 feet a pocket of gas was struck, from which the flow was quite strong for a day or two, when it began to weaken, demonstrating that as a gas producer the well has no value. Only a few days before striking gas at Mrs. Rouse's the same party of workmen was engaged sinking a well for the Hebron Creamery Association and struck a pocket of gas which was exhausted after a few hours' flow. In the opinion of scientists these small pockets of gas are liable to be struck most anywhere when probing the earth, and, further, that their existence does not establish the presence of natural gas in their neighborhood in paying quantities. Consequently there is no occasion for excitement when natural gas is struck until by a tryout the well indicates it will make good.

A Thrilling Rescue.

How Bert R. Lean, of Cheny, Wash. was saved from a frightful death is a story to thrill the world. A hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to California, but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Croup and Whooping Cough its supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, Ky.

A Neighborly Act.

Wilson Delph got very much behind with his farm work by reason of the illness of his father, and one day last week a working force composed of 18 men and 24 horses assembled at his home for the purpose of assisting him to get out his crop of tobacco for which he had not cleaned the land. When night came the land for the entire crop had been cleaned, broken, harrowed and the tobacco set. This was a neighborly act.

Tobacco Growing Nicely.

Some of the tobacco that was planted in May has made a considerable growth. In fact the rapidity with which it is covering the ground is remarkable, and along about the time very hot weather arrives it will require cutting, which is hard work, especially when the mercury is peeping over the top of the thermometer.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for words of sympathy and kindness to us during the illness and death of our husband and father, John H. Ryle; also to the pall bearers and to the undertaker, Mr. Allison, for the manner in which he conducted the funeral. THE WIFE AND CHILDREN.

Trouble Makers Ousted.

When a sufferer from stomach trouble takes Dr. King's New Life Pills he's mighty glad to see his Dyspepsia and Indigestion fly, but more—he's tickled over his new, fine appetite, strong nerves, healthy vigor, all because stomach, liver and kidneys now work right. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Chipman, residence in Williamstown, for $4,000; C. C. Adams, residence in Williamstown, for $2,800; Wm. Kinman, residence at Glencoe, for $3,000. Mr. Nicholson is one of the best contractors in this section, giving thorough satisfaction in work and price, and personally, is a very pleasant gentleman to have business relations with.

The High Vine Horse Company is being considerably enthused by the outcome of the breeding of their fine horse High Vine for the past season, the first he has made since he was purchased by the company at Walton. The percentage of colts foaled is very high and every colt is of a superior quality, said to be the best ever produced in this quarter and being praised by everybody that has seen them. W. Lee Gaines is the president of the company and has charge of the horse. Several offers of $110 for colts at weanling time have been made and refused.

Last Friday quite a number of prominent ladies of Cincinnati enjoyed the pleasure of an automobile ride to and from the city and an excellent dinner at the Phoenix Hotel, prepared especially for them by Mrs. H. C. Diers, the agreeable hostess of that popular hostelry. The party came in two large touring cars, and was chaperoned by Mrs. Julius Flieschman, wife of the ex-mayor of Cincinnati. She other ladies were Mrs. Louis L. Rauh, Mrs. Jesse Lowman, Mrs. Arnold Kaichen, Mrs. Sol L. Stix, Mrs. Irvin M. Krohn, Miss B. Sinsheimer, Mrs. Mary M. Levy, Mrs. Leopold S. Roth. The ladies enjoyed the trip very much, and promised to make Walton another visit before long.

The Epworth League rally of the organization, at Walton, Verona, Erlanger and Florence at Walton, last Friday, was a great success, there being a large attendance and a delightful program rendered. Rev. E. G. B. Mann, pastor of the First Church, Lexington, preached a splendid sermon in the morning, and Rev. J. R. Savage, pastor of the Scott Street Church, Covington, entertained and instructed the congregation with a thoughtful discourse at night. The services were held at the M. E. church and the house was filled to overflowing during the entire session. The pastor Rev. J. B. Harris and his members did everything in their power to make the meeting a success, socially and otherwise, and the visitors were very much pleased with the entertainment. About 800 people were in attendance, representing a superior type of citizenship. At the noon hour a basket dinner was spread, consisting of all of the substantials and delicacies calculated to arouse the appetite of the most fastidious, and there was plenty and some to spare so that none went away hungry. There was some excellent papers read before the assemblage, papers containing much thought for fruitful consideration, and special mention is deserving of a well prepared address by the Verona Epworth League on the "Devotional Department," and an address by John McCullom, of Erlanger, on the "Charity and Help Department," and a paper by Miss Louise Lathrop, of Walton, on the "Social and Literary Department." The meeting was a success throughout and the people of Walton were pleased to be honored by the presence of such a splendid gathering.

Women Who Are Envied.

Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation of Kidney trouble show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such Electric Bitters work wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to them. 50c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Gas Struck Again.

A force of workmen was engaged drilling a well for Mrs. Amanda Rouse, of Hebron, one day last week, and at a depth of 125 to 140 feet a pocket of gas was struck, from which the flow was quite strong for a day or two, when it began to weaken, demonstrating that as a gas producer the well has no value. Only a few days before striking gas at Mrs. Rouse's the same party of workmen was engaged sinking a well for the Hebron Creamery Association and struck a pocket of gas which was exhausted after a few hours' flow. In the opinion of scientists these small pockets of gas are liable to be struck most anywhere when probing the earth, and, further, that their existence does not establish the presence of natural gas in their neighborhood in paying quantities. Consequently there is no occasion for excitement when natural gas is struck until by a tryout the well indicates it will make good.

A Thrilling Rescue.

How Bert R. Lean, of Cheny, Wash. was saved from a frightful death is a story to thrill the world. A hard cold," he writes, "brought on a desperate lung trouble that baffled an expert doctor here. Then I paid $10 to $15 a visit to a lung specialist in Spokane, who did not help me. Then I went to California, but without benefit. At last I used Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me and now I am as well as ever." For Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Croup and Whooping Cough its supreme. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Bentler's drug store, Erlanger, Ky.

A Neighborly Act.

Wilson Delph got very much behind with his farm work by reason of the illness of his father, and one day last week a working force composed of 18 men and 24 horses assembled at his house for the purpose of assisting him to get out his crop of tobacco for which he had not cleaned the land. When night came the land for the entire crop had been cleaned, broken, harrowed and the tobacco set. This was a neighborly act.

Tobacco Growing Nicely.

Some of the tobacco that was planted in May has made a considerable growth. In fact the rapidity with which it is covering the ground is remarkable, and along about the time very hot weather arrives it will require cutting, which is hard work, especially when the mercury is peeping over the top of the thermometer.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for words of sympathy and kindness to us during the illness and death of our husband and father, John H. Ryle: also to the pall bearers and to the undertaker, Mr. Allison, for the manner in which he conducted the funeral. THE WIFE AND CHILDREN.

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY.

OUR NAVY.

We notice here and there critical and rather querulous comment on the fact that the first aid to the Americans in Asia Minor and the ill-starred native Christians has been given by European warships exclusively, says the Hartford Courant. "It is certainly unfortunate for our prestige," remarks one journal, "that no United States warship is at hand. This absence of any representative of our navy from coasts where its services may be urgently required is due to the virtual abolition of what was called for many years 'the European station.'" In those years we had a great mercantile marine; its sails—in the consecrated phrase—whitened all seas. In those years we did not have the Panama undertaking on our hands, or Hawaii, or the Philippines. At present United States warships are more useful—actually and potentially—in home waters and in Asiatic waters than in European waters.

Whatever sympathy may have been felt with the revolutionists at Tabris, there was no denying that the movement was against the established government of Persia, and the grave impropriety of an outsider taking an active part must be apparent. Homer C. Baskerville, a young American who was killed while leading a sortie of the revolutionists, evidently was a gallant and impulsive youth, but he was an American citizen and a missionary in the service of his church. Leading revolutions was quite apart from his political and religious duties. The disavowal of his acts by the government of the United States and by the church board he served prevented the matter from becoming an international question; but it is pitiful that a young man with so many commendable qualities should fall a victim to grave error of judgment and that thus there should be brought to an untimely end a life full of promise of high usefulness.

It seems that as long as the English suffragettes conduct their meetings in a quiet, peaceful, dignified and ladylike manner the papers refuse to notice them. So to have themselves reported by the public press it is necessary for them to raid ministers' houses, attack parliament, chain themselves to posts of advantage, fight policemen and in other ways lead the strenuous life. This is quite a severe indictment by implication of the chivalry of the British press, and gives the women justification in saying: "It is all the men's fault."

Peace by disarmament receives a notable impetus from the order of the war department discontinuing the sale at auction of obsolete firearms discarded by the United States army. If our friends in Central America are too poor to buy new guns when the notion seizes them to set up a revolution and overthrow a government, they must perforce keep quiet and let the existing government alone if they can no longer buy cheap, but good, old guns from us. Thus does war become more and more a luxury reserved for the wealthy.

The latest fad in the development of luxury on transatlantic steamers is the report that one of the stewards on a certain liner has charge of a garden patch from which strawberries, lettuce, radishes, etc., are picked on order. The crops of this garden bring high prices, the strawberries going at two dollars for a small box. But it is not likely that there will be a general adoption of gardening on shipboard because of the excellence of refrigerator accommodations on the average liner.

The Indiana woman who has been married ten times is held to have had but nine husbands, because she married one of them the second time, a divorce and one or two other husbands having intervened. But if the argument of those who hold that we have had 27 presidents instead of 26, because Cleveland was elected and is counted twice, is sound, then she must on the same line of reasoning have had ten husbands.

From all sides come reports of increased business, notably as regards the railroads and industrial concerns. The May dividends are well up to the average and in several cases are beyond the most sanguine expectations. With a little more springlike weather the outlook is likely to be all that could be desired.

BLOW TO WATERWAY

ENGINEERS DECLARE 14-FOOT CHANNEL WOULD BE TOO COSTLY.

PUT PRICE AT $128,000,000

Board Reports to Congress That Yearly Amount Necessary for Maintenance Would Be $6,000,000—Plan Nine-Foot Project.

Washington.—The proposed 14-foot deep waterway project from St. Louis to the gulf received a blow when the board of engineers reported to congress that such a waterway is not desirable. The waterway would cost $128,000,000 for construction and $6,000,000 annually for maintenance, the engineers say.

The report was based on a survey of the Mississippi river by a special board of engineers, created by act of congress. The conclusions reached by both the special board and the regular board of engineers are practically the same.

In considering the commercial phases of the question, the special board reported that although it had sought to obtain from commercial organizations facts as to the prospective commerce which requires a 14-foot channel, it has received very little definite information. It added that no actual large future developments of commerce are yet in sight.

The position was taken that ocean and lake vessels, such as would require a 14-foot instead of a nine-foot channel, would not be an economic means of transporting products on the river. Due to the necessity of building an ocean vessel of sufficient strength to resist storms, its cost in the United States, was estimated at about $71 for each ton of freight carried. On the great lakes the cost was estimated at $41.50. The Mississippi river steamboats and barges, capable of transporting 10,000 tons of freight on an 8½-foot draft, can be built for about $12 per ton of freight carried, it was estimated. Furthermore the board pointed out, a modern lake freighter is poorly constructed for navigating a tortuous river with a swift current. When a new type of vessel has been designed, the board suggested, there will be an immediate demand for a channel of greater depth than 14 feet.

The report of the regular board that it is not desirable to construct a navigable channel 14 feet deep from St. Louis or from Chicago to the mouth of the Mississippi was based on the conclusion of the special board that only commerce originating from sources that do not at present ship by river would justify the great cost of a 14-foot waterway.

It is claimed that the present demands of commerce between St. Louis and the gulf will be adequately met by an eight-foot channel from St. Louis to the mouth of the Ohio, and a channel of not less than nine feet in depth below the mouth of the Ohio. The board's belief is that an eight-foot channel from Chicago to St. Louis corresponding with the present eight-foot project from St. Louis to Cairo, is the least that would adequately meet the demands of commerce.

It adds that such a waterway would be desirable provided its cost is reasonable. Present and prospective demands of commerce between Chicago and the gulf would be adequately served, the board reports, by a through nine-foot channel to the gulf. Estimates for these channels have not been completed, but are promised to congress by next December.

WAR ON INCOME TAX.

Taft Plan Fails to Bring Republicans Peace—Would Assess the Corporations.

Washington.—After a conference at the White House between President Taft and Senator Aldrich it was stated that the finance committee of the senate would consent to placing in the tariff bill a two per cent. tax upon the net earnings of corporations if the supporters of the income tax amendments would accept it and withdraw their proposition. This suggestion, it is declared, came from President Taft and was designed to prevent a split in the Republican party over the income tax feature.

Senator Aldrich communicated the plan to Senators Cummins and Borah, who are the leaders of the progressive Republicans who have favored the Cummins income tax amendment. These senators consulted with their colleagues and, as a result, the plan was repudiated by them.

MURDER REVEALED BY A DOG

CANINE GIVES GOTHAM POLICE A MYSTERY TO SOLVE.

Fox Terrier Smells Package Given to Boy and Barks Warning—Jealousy May Be Motive.

New York.—The keen scent of a dog led to the discovery of a murder Friday the mystery of which the police are thus far baffled in solving. The victim, Samuel Bersin, a decorator, had been cut to pieces and his head was not found until after canine instinct pointed the way to the discovery of the dismembered body.

Robbery, jealousy or revenge, the latter two suggested motives involving a woman and a love affair, are being worked upon, but only with the usual police formality of investigating all sides of a crime.

An autopsy performed on the victim's dismembered body showed that Bersin had been partly asphyxiated before his throat was slashed and the body mutilated in a manner similar to the famous Guldensuppe case of years ago.

The dismembered body, wrapped in oil cloth, was left by a stranger in the care of a boy in Catherine street. Subsequently the man's head, which was missing, was found lying on a pile of refuse under the Brooklyn bridge.

Not since the Guldensuppe case of a decade ago has a murder so mystified the police. For two hours the boy stood in front of a public school building in Monroe street waiting for the return of the man who had given him two bundles containing the dismembered body. A fox terrier smelled the blood in the packages and barked at them so vigorously and persistently that his owner called a policeman and the discovery resulted.

On the wrapper of each parcel, one of which contained the torso and the other the legs and arms, was boldly written the words, "Black Hand."

Detectives couple this with the recent activity of the secret service among "Black Hand" operators in the middle west and declare that the murdered man was the victim of an Italian blackmailing society.

Bersin had been wearing two handsome diamond rings and these with what ever money he carried were missing when the body was found.

Mrs. Mollie Isaacson, the murdered man's sister, informed the police that Bersin had been greatly depressed for the last month because a young woman with whom he was in love had forbidden him to call upon her. Mrs. Isaacson said that Bersin had a jealous rival for the girl's affection and stood much in fear of the other man.

Stem Torrent in Canal.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. — After a night of hard work the employes of the Canadian ship canal here succeeded in partially shutting off the torrent of water which has been roaring through the canal since the lock gates were torn out by the steamer Perry G. Walker. The pressure against the dam is now so great that the forcing of those four remaining wickets down.

The steamer Assinaboia put into Detour and spent the night. The Perry G. Walker was not so badly injured as first reported.

Flee Flames on a Train.

Smyrna Mills, Me.—The flaming forests of northern Aroostook overwhelmed the little village of Hiliman, a new hamlet on the Ashland branch of the Bangor & Aroostook railroad, seven miles north of Smyrna Mills, Friday, and destroyed every building in the settlement.

The population, consisting of 50 persons, was saved from death by the timely arrival of a special train.

Missing from Ocean Steamer.

Naples.—On the arrival from Genoa of the North German Lloyd steamer Berlin Friday, it was ascertained that Holland Bennett, a lawyer of Boston who was traveling with his bride of one month, was missing from the vessel, and the belief prevailed among the passengers that he fell overboard and was drowned. Mr. Bennett disappeared Thursday night while the steamer was making the run from Genoa to this port, and while his wife was with a number of friends in the saloon

MINNESOTA BANKERS MEET.

Eminent Financiers Address the Annual Convention of Their Association at Lake Minnetonka.

Lake Minnetonka, Minn. — Tonka Bay hotel fairly swarmed with men of money Monday, for the Minnesota Bankers' association is holding its twentieth annual convention there, and members and their families have come from nearly every city and town in the state.

The opening session was held Monday morning and after a prayer by Rev. C. J. Swain of Excelsior President Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National bank of Minneapolis delivered his annual address. The other speakers of the morning and their topic were: William J. Olcott, Duluth, "The development of the mining and transportation of iron ores of the Lake Superior district;" William B. Joyce, New York, "Bonds and Burglary Insurance;" Congressman Frank N. Nye, "The Tariff," and L. O. Thorpe, Willmar, "Recent Bank Legislation."

In the afternoon the bankers enjoyed addresses by two eminent financiers. George E. Roberts, president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago, spoke on "Postal Savings Banks," and Col. Fred F. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers' association, discussed the problems of that organization. Then the bankers and their wives boarded boats for Big Island park, where they were entertained all the evening.

"BLACK HAND" LIKE MAFIA.

Ohio Organization Governed Like the Old Society—Many Branches Are Found.

Cincinnati.—Revelations in the extortion, plotting and murder by the "Black Hand" as uncovered by the post-office inspectors from the Cincinnati office show conclusively that the band in Columbus, Marion, Dennison and Bellefontaine and other Ohio towns, was organized also the same lines as the old Mafia, but, if any thing with a much better system for concealing its movements.

It is now known that the Ohio "Black Hand" or the "Society of the Banana," as its members style themselves, had a branch in Pittsburg, Pa and one in Chicago, and a line that extended to South Dakota. Regular meetings were held and the money obtained sent to Italy.

MEAT PROBE ORDERED.

Secretary Wilson Sends Inspectors to East St. Louis to Investigate Harms' Charges.

Washington.—The department of agriculture promptly accepted the challenge of J. F. Harms, a government meat inspector at East St. Louis, Ill., who, in tendering his resignation to Secretary Wilson, makes serious charges against the meat inspection system at the National stock yards and demands an investigation relative to his allegations.

An immediate and thorough investigation into Harms' charges concerning the East St. Louis packing houses was ordered and two inspectors have gone to East St. Louis.

Diphtheria Closes School.

Watertown, Conn.—Taft school was closed for the school year owing to the reappearance of diphtheria, which was epidemic recently. Knight Crowles of Chicago has been taken ill with the malady.

Charles Taft, son of President Taft, and a student at the school, has not been exposed to the disease, it was stated. The seniors will remain here for their college entrance examinations, but all other students will leave for home immediately.

Novel Vessel is Launched.

New York.—A vessel of remarkable character was launched in Brooklyn Saturday in the presence of a number of scientists. It is the auxiliary yacht Carnegie, built for the Carnegie institution, and it is to be used in carrying on ocean surveys to correct compass data, practically no iron, steel or other magnetic metal enters into its construction. The vessel was christened by Miss Dorothea L. Bauer, daughter of Dr. L. A. Bauer, director of the department of terrestrial magnetism in the Carnegie institution.

SIX KILLED BY BOLT OF LIGHTNING

Enormous Damage Done By Storm in the Mountains of Virginia.

Big Stone Gap, Va., June 14.—Loss of life and property followed in the wake of a cloudburst and electrical storm which swept over this section early Sunday morning, washing out railroad tracks, creating landslides and causing a ten-foot raise in Powell river, a sluggish mountain stream.

The storm's center lay north of Big Stone Gap, along the lines of the Louisville & Nashville and Interstate railroads, where it did greatest damage, the Interstate losing three miles of track between Appalachia and Stonega, leaving a passenger train stranded at Arno, while big slides in deep cuts at Appalachia and Dorchester Junction are reported.

Reports are that Mrs. Michael Fekete, her infant and four other persons were killed near Dorchester in a house struck by lightning, and that a small house with three occupants was swept down the river from near Blackwood.

The armature of a 500-horse-power generating dynamo in the Powell Valley Light and Power Co.'s plant, at this place, which furnishes light for 6,000 people in Big Stone Gap and surrounding towns, was burned out by lightning, the chief electrician narrowly escaping electrocution.

Some people have placed the estimate of damages to crops and property sustained in this section from Saturday night's storm and other bad storms during the past week at $100,000.

TRIBESMEN KILL 5,000 PERSONS

In Raid of Persian District, It Is Reported—Russian Consul Appealed To For Protection.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—A dispatch to the Novoiremya from Astara states that the Shahsevan tribesmen are ravaging the Ardabil district in Azerbijan, the most northwesterly province of Persia.

According to dispatches 5,000 persons have been killed and the leading inhabitants have appealed to the Russian consul for protection.

The news from Persia of the past two weeks shows that a state of anarchy reigns in nearly every district of the shah's domain.

In the larger cities there are incessant clashes between the reactionaries and the constitutionalists, and in the rural districts the nomadic tribes take advantage of the absence of troops to invade and plunder villages, to commit indescribable crimes on women and young girls and to burn the crops of the farmers.

Both Russia and Turkey are rushing troops to the disturbed region, but both governments are accused of mercenary aims, Turkey especially being openly accused of having planned the seizure of the fertile territory.

Lightning Struck Church.

Green Bay, Wis., June 14.—Lightning that struck the steeple of Holy Cross Catholic church during mass at Bay Settlement, near here, Sunday morning, killed one man, shocked and injured 16 others, two of whom may not survive, and partially wrecked the edifice. The worshipers rushed terror-stricken through the church, and during the stampede many were injured.

Reached a Dizzy Height.

Pittsfield, Mass., June 14.—The ascension of the balloon Massachusetts, which started from here at 12:17 a. m. Sunday, with Wm. Van Sleet, of this city, as pilot, and W. C. Bramhall and Edgar I. Robbins, of Boston, as passengers, was ended at 10:32 a. m. Sunday in the town of East Alstead, N. H. The balloonists reached a height of 10,000 feet.

Shot His Father.

Philadelphia, June 14.—When trying to escape from a policeman who had placed him under arrest, charged with the larceny of a peanut stand, William Robinson, 17 years old, early Sunday shot his father, James Robinson, in the body, inflicting a wound which sent him to a hospital in a critical condition.

Family Chloroformed By Robbers.

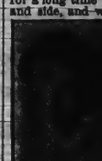
Birmingham, Ala., June 14.—A. E. Crowder and his family at Rutledge Springs, near Bessemer, were chloroformed and the dwelling was ransacked. Something like $200 in money was secured. Dogs followed the trail leading from the house, but without success. The inmates of the house will recover.

Nineteen Die In Battle.

Teheren, June 14.— A report received here from Tabriz says that an altercation between the Turkish consul at Salmas and gendarmerie led to a conflict with Turkish troops, in which 12 Persians and 7 Turks were killed.

Jeweler Dies in Taxicab.

New York, June 14.—While on his way to Philadelphia with a $20,000 diamond necklace for a customer George W. Barrett, manager of Tiffany's shipping department, was stricken with failure of the heart and died in a taxicab.



Hotel Guests Lose All.

El Paso, Tex., June 14.—The Lodge, a summer hotel at Cloudcroft, N. M., burned Sunday morning. The guests fled in night clothing, losing everything, and some were cared for in pa-

YOUR BACKACHE WILL YIELD

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rockland, Maine.—"I was troubled for a long time with pains in my back and side, and was miserable in every way. I doctored until I was discouraged, and thought I should never get well. I read a testimonial about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and thought I would try it. After taking three bottles I was cured, and never felt so well in all my life. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my friends."—Mrs. WILL YOUNG, 6 Columbia Avenue, Rockland, Me.

Backache is a symptom of female weakness or derangement. If you have backache, don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so safely and surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Cure the cause of these distressing aches and pains and you will become well and strong.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has restored health to thousands of women.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge.

Tired Tom (sadly)—Ah, that patch tells me that my old pal, Plodding Pete has been this way. Poor old Pete!

Rabbinical Wit.

An English rabbi was asked if there was any weighty reason against having a clock in the synagogue. "By no means," was the reply. "Have your clock, but put it outside the building, and then you can tell how late you come to the service." Two rabbis were passing the beautiful synagogue in which one of them officiated. "How I envy you!" said the first. "You must be in a paradise." "Hold, friend!" the second explained. "In the original paradise there was only one serpent, but in this congregation are many of them."

The Only Way.

"We all make blunders. I thought once I was a square peg when I was really a round one."

"How did you find out your mistake?"

"I got into a hole!"

"FAITH" ALL THAT WAS LEFT

Symbols of "Hope" and "Charity" Had Get Away from Unfortunate Sunday School Scholar.

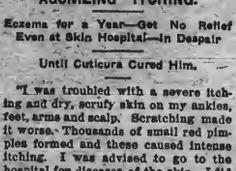
A young Philadelphia Sunday school teacher tells this story of the result of an attempted application of the principles of economics:

For some time she had endeavored to impress upon the minds of one of her charges the names of the three qualities, faith, hope, and charity. One Sunday she presented the pupil of the poor memory with three new shining coins, a penny, a five-cent piece, and a dime.

"The penny," she said, "represents faith, the five-cent piece hope, and the dime charity. Keep these coins and every time you look at them think of what they stand for."

The Sunday following the teacher reviewed the lesson of the week before, and called upon the holder of the coins to produce them and give their names in proper sequence. The youngster shuffled from one leg to the other, stammered, blushed and seemed altogether overcome with mortification. Finally he burst out with:

"Please, Miss Fanny, I ain't got nuthin' left but faith. Baby swallered hope, and mamma took charity and bought ten cents' worth of meat ter make hamburg steak out uv."



AGONIZING ITCHING.

Eczema for a Year—Got No Relief Even at Skin Hospital—In Despair Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I was troubled with a severe itching and dry, scruffy skin on my ankles, feet, arms and scalp. Scratching made it worse. Thousands of small red pimples formed and these caused intense itching. I was advised to go to the hospital for diseases of the skin. I did so, the chief surgeon saying: "I never saw such a bad case of eczema." But I got little or no relief. Then I tried many so-called remedies, but I became so bad that I almost gave up in despair. After suffering agonies for twelve months, I was relieved of the almost unbearable itching after two or three applications of Cuticura Ointment. I continued its use, combined with Cuticura Soap and Pills, and I was completely cured. Henry Searle, Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 8 and 10, 1907."

ASK FATHER.

Clergyman—What would your father say if he saw you digging for worms on Sunday?

Willie—I don't know; but I know what he'd say if I did not dig for them. That's him fishing over there."

Interrupted the Wedding.

The other day, at the Shawnee county Court House, Probate Judge Schoch was about to marry a young couple. He pronounced the preliminary words and told them to join hands, and started on the ceremony.

"Hey, there! Hold up a minute! Wait, I say!" This series of startling exclamations came from the door.

The groom was horrified—the bride badly scared.

"Just a minute. I want to give you each an apple before you are married." said the man who had made the noise. And he calmly walked and handed each of them a Grimes Golden.

It was one man's idea of a joke.—Kansas City Journal.

PRESSED HARD
Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in one of the southern states says:

"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavour of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family were so well pleased with it, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's A Reason."

Special Session of Breathitt County Grand Jury Impansled for Investigation of Shooting of ex-Sheriff Callahan.

Jackson, Ky.—A special session of the Breathitt county grand jury for the investigation of the ambushing and shooting of ex-Sheriff Ed Callahan, was impaneled by Circuit Judge J. H. Adams, whose address to the jury was principally an abuse of the daily press or their representatives for meddling in such matters, and a defense of himself and the local republican organization in their alleged connection with the defense of Smith and Johnson. The court asked the jury to make a complete investigation of the shooting of Callahan, which "might prove to have been an assassination." Blackstone Cardwell, a leader of the "Hogback" organization, which brought about the political downfall of the late Judge James Hargis in the last county election, was appointed foreman.

AUDITOR JAMES SAYS

There Will Not Be a Deficit of $2,000,000 or $2,500,000 When General Assembly Meets.

Frankfort, Ky.—Auditor Frank P. James issued a statement saying that there will not be a deficit in the state treasury of $2,000,000 or $2,500,000 when the next general assembly meets. In this estimate, however, he and Gov. Willson disagree, for in a communication from Gov. Willson to Auditor James about May 1 Gov. Willson asked the latter to give the condition of the state's finances, and said from reports he had received from inspectors he estimated the deficit would be about $2,500,000. The statement of Auditor James will bring fire from the democrats who preceded him, as he claims there were left in round numbers debts amounting to $1,180,000 when he came into office, while the democrats claim that the money left in the treasury free of debt was largely in excess of the amount which Auditor James says the state owed.

TOO SPLENDID FOR A HOME

English Criticism of the Furnishings of Houses of the American Millionaires.

Our bedrooms are marvels. Mine is immense, with two suites of impossible rococo Louis XV. furniture in it; the richest curtains with heaps of arranged draperies and fringe, grand writing table things, a few embroidered cushions; but no new books, or comfy sofas, or look of cozy anywhere. The bathrooms to each room are superb; miles beyond one's ideas of them in general at home. Tom says he can't sleep because the embroidered monograms on the pillows and things scratch his cheek, and the lace frills tickle his nose, while he catches his toes in the Venetian insertion in the sheets. The linen itself is the finest you ever saw, mamma, and would be too exquisite plain. Now one knows where all those marvelously over-worked things in the Paris shops go to, and all the wonderful gold incrusted Carlsbad glass. You meet it here in every house.

There is no room in it where there is any look of what we call "home," and not one shabby thing. Mrs. Spielst has a "boudoir"—and it is a boudoir! It is as if you went into the best shop and said, "I want a boudoir;" just as you would, "I want a hat," and paid for it and brought it home with you. Natalie has a sitting room, and it is just the same. They are not quite far enough up yet on the social ladder to have every corner of the establishment done by Duveen, and the result is truly appalling.—From Elinor Glyn's "Elizabeth Visits America."

MADE A MESSENGER OF LOVE

Governor General of Australia Employed as Cupid's Emissary Between Sweethearts.

Apropos of Lord Northcote's name being mentioned as a probable successor to Earl Grey in Canada, his lordship was once made curious use of while governor general of Australia, says London M. A. P. Strolling one night through an avenue of somber trees to a friend's house to dinner, he was suddenly pounced upon by a maidservant, who kissed him effusively and pressed a little parcel into his hand. "Here's a sausage for you. I can't come out to-night, as master has company," she whispered, and as mysteriously disappeared. When he got to the house, he found one of his servants loitering by the gate. "What are you doing there?" asked Lord Northcote. "I'm waiting for my sweetheart," the man stammered. "Where is she" "In service here." "Ah, then I am right. Here is a sausage from your sweetheart, and she wishes me to tell you that she cannot come out to-night, as her master has company." Seeing that the man looked nervous, he added, kindly: "She also gave me a kiss for you; but perhaps you would rather wait until you see her. Here is five shillings instead."

Which One Owns This Tree?

For sixty years and more a tree has stood on the dividing line between two properties in Germantown, Pa. It is a big tree now, and the base of the trunk extends 22 inches on land owned by R. G. OUR NAVY.

We notice here and there critical and rather querulous comment on the fact that the first aid to the Americans in Asia Minor and the ill-starred native Christians has been given by European warships exclusively, says the Hartford Courant. "It is certainly unfortunate for our prestige," remarks one journal, "that no United States warship is at hand. This absence of any representative of our navy from coasts where its services may be urgently required is due to the virtual abolition of what was called for many years 'the European station.'" In those years we had a great mercantile marine; its sails—in the consecrated phrase—whitened all seas. In those years we did not have the Panama undertaking on our hands, or Hawaii, or the Philippines. At present United States warships are more useful—actually and potentially—in home waters and in Asiatic waters than in European waters.

Whatever sympathy may have been felt with the revolutionists at Tabris, there was no denying that the movement was against the established government of Persia, and the grave impropriety of an outsider taking an active part must be apparent. Homer C. Baskerville, a young American who was killed while leading a sortie of the revolutionists, evidently was a gallant and impulsive youth, but he was an American citizen and a missionary in the service of his church. Leading revolutions was quite apart from his political and religious duties. The disavowal of his acts by the government of the United States and by the church board he served prevented the matter from becoming an international question; but it is pitiful that a young man with so many commendable qualities should fall a victim to grave error of judgment and that thus there should be brought to an untimely end a life full of promise of high usefulness.

It seems that as long as the English suffragettes conduct their meetings in a quiet, peaceful, dignified and ladylike manner the papers refuse to notice them. So to have themselves reported by the public press it is necessary for them to raid ministers' houses, attack parliament, chain themselves to posts of advantage, fight policemen and in other ways lead the strenuous life. This is quite a severe indictment by implication of the chivalry of the British press, and gives the women justification in saying: "It is all the men's fault."

Peace by disarmament receives a notable impetus from the order of the war department discontinuing the sale at auction of obsolete firearms discarded by the United States army. If our friends in Central America are too poor to buy new guns when the notion seizes them to set up a revolution and overthrow a government, they must perforce keep quiet and let the existing government alone if they can no longer buy cheap, but good, old guns from us. Thus does war become more and more a luxury reserved for the wealthy.

The latest fad in the development of luxury on transatlantic steamers is the report that one of the stewards on a certain liner has charge of a garden patch from which strawberries, lettuce, radishes, etc., are picked on order. The crops of this garden bring high prices, the strawberries going at two dollars for a small box. But it is not likely that there will be a general adoption of gardening on shipboard because of the excellence of refrigerator accommodations on the average liner.

The Indiana woman who has been married ten times is held to have had but nine husbands, because she married one of them the second time, a divorce and one or two other husbands having intervened. But if the argument of those who hold that we have had 27 presidents instead of 26, because Cleveland was elected and is counted twice, is sound, then she must on the same line of reasoning have had ten husbands.

From all sides come reports of increased business, notably as regards the railroads and industrial concerns. The May dividends are well up to the average and in several cases are beyond the most sanguine expectations. With a little more springlike weather the outlook is likely to be all that could be desired.

BLOW TO WATERWAY

ENGINEERS DECLARE 14-FOOT CHANNEL WOULD BE TOO COSTLY.

PUT PRICE AT $128,000,000

Board Reports to Congress That Yearly Amount Necessary for Maintenance Would Be $6,000,000—Plan Nine-Foot Project.

Washington.—The proposed 14-foot deep waterway project from St. Louis to the gulf received a blow when the board of engineers reported to congress that such a waterway is not desirable. The waterway would cost $128,000,000 for construction and $6,000,000 annually for maintenance, the engineers say.

The report was based on a survey of the Mississippi river by a special board of engineers, created by act of congress. The conclusions reached by both the special board and the regular board of engineers are practically the same.

In considering the commercial phases of the question, the special board reported that although it had sought to obtain from commercial organizations facts as to the prospective commerce which requires a 14-foot channel, it has received very little definite information. It added that no actual large future developments of commerce are yet in sight.

The position was taken that ocean and lake vessels, such as would require a 14-foot instead of a nine-foot channel, would not be an economic means of transporting products on the river. Due to the necessity of building an ocean vessel of sufficient strength to resist storms, its cost in the United States, was estimated at about $71 for each ton of freight carried. On the great lakes the cost was estimated at $41.50. The Mississippi river steamboats and barges, capable of transporting 10,000 tons of freight on an 8½-foot draft, can be built for about $12 per ton of freight carried, it was estimated. Furthermore the board pointed out, a modern lake freighter is poorly constructed for navigating a tortuous river with a swift current. When a new type of vessel has been designed, the board suggested, there will be an immediate demand for a channel of greater depth than 14 feet.

The report of the regular board that it is not desirable to construct a navigable channel 14 feet deep from St. Louis or from Chicago to the mouth of the Mississippi was based on the conclusion of the special board that only commerce originating from sources that do not at present ship by river would justify the great cost of a 14-foot waterway.

It is claimed that the present demands of commerce between St. Louis and the gulf will be adequately met by an eight-foot channel from St. Louis to the mouth of the Ohio, and a channel of not less than nine feet in depth below the mouth of the Ohio. The board's belief is that an eight-foot channel from Chicago to St. Louis corresponding with the present eight-foot project from St. Louis to Cairo, is the least that would adequately meet the demands of commerce.

It adds that such a waterway would be desirable provided its cost is reasonable. Present and prospective demands of commerce between Chicago and the gulf would be adequately served, the board reports, by a through nine-foot channel to the gulf. Estimates for these channels have not been completed, but are promised to congress by next December.

WAR ON INCOME TAX.

Taft Plan Fails to Bring Republicans Peace—Would Assess the Corporations.

Washington.—After a conference at the White House between President Taft and Senator Aldrich it was stated that the finance committee of the senate would consent to placing in the tariff bill a two per cent. tax upon the net earnings of corporations if the supporters of the income tax amendments would accept it and withdraw their proposition. This suggestion, it is declared, came from President Taft and was designed to prevent a split in the Republican party over the income tax feature.

Senator Aldrich communicated the plan to Senators Cummins and Borah, who are the leaders of the progressive Republicans who have favored the Cummins income tax amendment. These senators consulted with their colleagues and, as a result, the plan was repudiated by them.

MURDER REVEALED BY A DOG

CANINE GIVES GOTHAM POLICE A MYSTERY TO SOLVE.

Fox Terrier Smells Package Given to Boy and Barks Warning—Jealousy May Be Motive.

New York.—The keen scent of a dog led to the discovery of a murder Friday the mystery of which the police are thus far baffled in solving. The victim, Samuel Bersin, a decorator, had been cut to pieces and his head was not found until after canine instinct pointed the way to the discovery of the dismembered body.

Robbery, jealousy or revenge, the latter two suggested motives involving a woman and a love affair, are being worked upon, but only with the usual police formality of investigating all sides of a crime.

An autopsy performed on the victim's dismembered body showed that Bersin had been partly asphyxiated before his throat was slashed and the body mutilated in a manner similar to the famous Guldensuppe case of years ago.

The dismembered body, wrapped in oil cloth, was left by a stranger in the care of a boy in Catherine street. Subsequently the man's head, which was missing, was found lying on a pile of refuse under the Brooklyn bridge.

Not since the Guldensuppe case of a decade ago has a murder so mystified the police. For two hours the boy stood in front of a public school building in Monroe street waiting for the return of the man who had given him two bundles containing the dismembered body. A fox terrier smelled the blood in the packages and barked at them so vigorously and persistently that his owner called a policeman and the discovery resulted.

On the wrapper of each parcel, one of which contained the torso and the other the legs and arms, was boldly written the words, "Black Hand."

Detectives couple this with the recent activity of the secret service among "Black Hand" operators in the middle west and declare that the murdered man was the victim of an Italian blackmailing society.

Bersin had been wearing two handsome diamond rings and these with what ever money he carried were missing when the body was found.

Mrs. Mollie Isaacson, the murdered man's sister, informed the police that Bersin had been greatly depressed for the last month because a young woman with whom he was in love had forbidden him to call upon her. Mrs. Isaacson said that Bersin had a jealous rival for the girl's affection and stood much in fear of the other man.

Stem Torrent in Canal.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. — After a night of hard work the employes of the Canadian ship canal here succeeded in partially shutting off the torrent of water which has been roaring through the canal since the lock gates were torn out by the steamer Perry G. Walker. The pressure against the dam is now so great that the forcing of those four remaining wickets down.

The steamer Assiniboia put into Detour and spent the night. The Perry G. Walker was not so badly injured as first reported.

Flee Flames on a Train.

Smyrna Mills, Me.—The flaming forests of northern Aroostook overwhelmed the little village of Hillman, a new hamlet on the Ashland branch of the Bangor & Aroostook railroad, seven miles north of Smyrna Mills, Friday, and destroyed every building in the settlement.

The population, consisting of 50 persons, was saved from death by the timely arrival of a special train.

Missing from Ocean Steamer.

Naples.—On the arrival from Genoa of the North German Lloyd steamer Berlin Friday, it was ascertained that Holland Bennett, a lawyer of Boston who was traveling with his bride of one month, was missing from the vessel, and the belief prevailed among the passengers that he fell overboard and was drowned. Mr. Bennett disappeared Thursday night while the steamer was making the run from Genoa to this port, and while his wife was with a number of friends in the saloon

MINNESOTA BANKERS MEET.

Eminent Financiers Address the Annual Convention of Their Association at Lake Minnetonka.

Lake Minnetonka, Minn.—Tonka Bay hotel fairly swarmed with men of money Monday, for the Minnesota Bankers' association is holding its twentieth annual convention there, and members and their families have come from nearly every city and town in the state.

The opening session was held Monday morning and after a prayer by Rev. C. J. Swain of Excelsior President Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National bank of Minneapolis delivered his annual address. The other speakers of the morning and their topic were: William J. Olcott, Duluth, "The development of the mining and transportation of iron ores of the Lake Superior district;" William B. Joyce, New York, "Bonds and Burglary Insurance;" Congressman Frank N. Nye, "The Tariff," and L. O. Thorpe, Willmar, "Recent Bank Legislation."

In the afternoon the bankers enjoyed addresses by two eminent financiers. George E. Roberts, president of the Commercial National bank of Chicago, spoke on "Postal Savings Banks," and Col. Fred F. Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers' association, discussed the problems of that organization. Then the bankers and their wives boarded boats for Big Island park, where they were entertained all the evening.

"BLACK HAND" LIKE MAFIA.

Ohio Organization Governed Like the Cid Society—Many Branches Are Found.

Cincinnati.—Revelations in the extortion, plotting and murder by the "Black Hand" as uncovered by the post-office inspectors from the Cincinnati office show conclusively that the band in Columbus, Marion, Dennison and Bellefontaine and other Ohio towns, was organized also the same lines as the old Mafia, but, if any thing with a much better system for concealing its movements.

It is now known that the Ohio "Black Hand" or the "Society of the Banana," as its members style themselves, had a branch in Pittsburg, Pa., and one in Chicago, and a line that extended to South Dakota. Regular meetings were held and the money obtained sent to Italy.

MEAT PROBE ORDERED.

Secretary Wilson Sends Inspectors to East St. Louis to Investigate Harms' Charges.

Washington.—The department of agriculture promptly accepted the challenge of J. F. Harms, a government meat inspector at East St. Louis, Ill., who, in tendering his resignation to Secretary Wilson, makes serious charges against the meat inspection system at the National stock yards and demands an investigation relative to his allegations.

An immediate and thorough investigation into Harms' charges concerning the East St. Louis packing houses was ordered and two inspectors have gone to East St. Louis.

Diphtheria Closes School.

Watertown, Conn.—Taft school was closed for the school year owing to the reappearance of diphtheria, which was epidemic recently. Knight Crowles of Chicago has been taken ill with the malady.

Charles Taft, son of President Taft, and a student at the school, has not been exposed to the disease; it was stated. The seniors will remain here for their college entrance examinations, but all other students will leave for home immediately.

Novel Vessel Is Launched.

New York.—A vessel of remarkable character was launched in Brooklyn Saturday in the presence of a number of scientists. It is the auxiliary yacht Carnegie, built for the Carnegie institution, and it is to be used in carrying on ocean surveys to correct compass data, practically no iron, steel or other magnetic metal enters into its construction. The vessel was christened by Miss Dorothea L. Bauer, daughter of Dr. L. A. Bauer, director of the department of terrestrial magnetism in the Carnegie institution.

SIX KILLED BY BOLT OF LIGHTNING

Enormous Damage Done By Storm in tha Mountains of Virginia.

Big Stone Gap, Va., June 14.—Loss of life and property followed in the wake of a cloudburst and electrical storm which swept over this section early Sunday morning, washing out railroad tracks, creating landslides and causing a ten-foot raise in Powell river, a sluggish mountain stream.

The storm's center lay north of Big Stone Gap, along the lines of the Louisville & Nashville and Interstate railroads, where it did greatest damage, the Interstate losing three miles of track between Appalachia and Stonega, leaving a passenger train stranded at Arno, while big slides in deep cuts at Appalachia and Dorchester Junction are reported.

Reports are that Mrs. Michael Fekete, her infant and four other persons were killed near Dorchester in a house struck by lightning, and that a small house with three occupants was swept down the river from near Blackwood.

The armature of a 500-horse-power generating dynamo in the Powell Valley Light and Power Co.'s plant, at this place, which furnishes light for 6,000 people in Big Stone Gap and surrounding towns, was burned out by lightning, the chief electrician narrowly escaping electrocution.

Some people have placed the estimate of damages to crops and property sustained in this section from Saturday night's storm and other bad storms during the past week at $100,000.

TRIBESMEN KILL 5,000 PERSONS

In Raid of Persian District, It Is Reported—Russian Consul Appealed To For Protection.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—A dispatch to the Noveiremya from Astara states that the Shakhsevan tribesmen are ravaging the Ardabil district in Azerbijan, the most northwesterly province of Persia.

According to dispatches 5,000 persons have been killed and the leading inhabitants have appealed to the Russian consul for protection.

The news from Persia of the past two weeks shows that a state of anarchy reigns in nearly every district of the shah's domain.

In the larger cities there are incessant clashes between the reactionaries and the constitutionalists, and in the rural districts the nomadic tribes take advantage of the absence of troops to invade and plunder villages, to commit indescribable crimes on women and young girls and to burn the crops of the farmers.

Both Russia and Turkey are rushing troops to the disturbed region, but both governments are accused of mercenary aims, Turkey especially being openly accused of having planned the seizure of the fertile territory.

Lightning Struck Church.

Green Bay, Wis., June 14.—Lightning that struck the steeple of Holy Cross Catholic church during mass at Bay Settlement, near here, Sunday morning, killed one man, shocked and injured 16 others, two of whom may not survive, and partially wrecked the edifice. The worshipers rushed terror-stricken through the church, and during the stampede many were injured.

Reached a Dizzy Height.

Pittsfield, Mass., June 14.—The ascension of the balloon Massachusetts, which started from here at 12:17 a. m. Sunday, with Wm. Van Sleet, of this city, as pilot, and W. C. Bramhall and Edgar I. Robbins, of Boston, as passengers, was ended at 10:32 a. m. Sunday in the town of East Alstead, N. H. The balloonists reached a height of 10,000 feet.

Shot His Father.

Philadelphia, June 14.—When trying to escape from a policeman who had placed him under arrest, charged with the larceny of a peanut stand, William Robinson, 17 years old, early Sunday shot his father, James Robinson, in the body, inflicting a wound which sent him to a hospital in a critical condition.

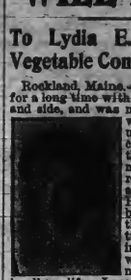
Family Chloroformed By Robbers.

Birmingham, Ala., June 14.—A. E. Crowder and his family at Rutledge Springs, near Bessemer, were chloroformed and the dwelling was ransacked. Something like $200 in money was secured. Dogs followed the trail leading from the house, but without success. The inmates of the house will recover.

Nineteen Die in Battle.

Teheren, June 14.—A report received here from Tabriz says that an altercation between the Turkish consul at Salmas and gendarmerie led to a conflict with Turkish troops, in which 12 Persians and 7 Turks were killed.

Jeweler Dies in Taxicab.



New York, June 14.—While on his way to Philadelphia with a $20,000 diamond necklace for a customer George W. Barrett, manager of Tiffany's shipping department, was stricken with failure of the heart and died in a taxicab.

Hotel Guests Lose All.

El Paso, Tex., June 14.—The Lodge, a summer hotel at Cloudcroft, N. M., burned Sunday morning. The guests fled in night clothing, losing everything, and are being cared for in private homes. The total loss is $60,000.

SHERLOCK HOLMES.

Tired Tom (sadly)—Ah, that patch tells me that my old pal, Plodding Pete has been this way. Poor old Pete!

Rabbinical Wit.

An English rabbi was asked if there was any weighty reason against having a clock in the synagogue. "By no means," was the reply. "Have your clock, but put it outside the building, and then you can tell how late you come to the service." Two rabbis were passing the beautiful synagogue in which one of them officiated. "How I envy you!" said the first. "You must be in a paradise." "Hold, friend!" the second explained. "In the original paradise there was only one serpent, but in this congregation are many of them."

"FAITH" ALL THAT WAS LEFT

Symbols of "Hope" and "Charity" Had Got Away from Unfortunate Sunday School Scholar.

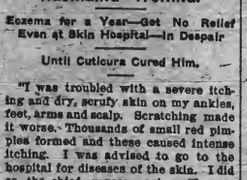
A young Philadelphia Sunday school teacher tells this story of the result of an attempted application of the principles of economics:

For some time she had endeavored to impress upon the minds of one of her charges the names of the three qualities, faith, hope, and charity. One Sunday she presented the pupil of the poor memory with three new shining coins, a penny, a five-cent piece, and a dime.

"The penny," she said, "represents faith, the five-cent piece hope, and the dime charity. Keep these coins and every time you look at them think of what they stand for."

The Sunday following the teacher reviewed the lesson of the week before, and called upon the holder of the coins to produce them and give their names in proper sequence. The youngster shuffled from one leg to the other, stammered, blushed and seemed altogether overcome with mortification. Finally he burst out with:

"Please, Miss Fanny, I ain't got nuthin' left but faith. Baby swallered hope, and mamma took charity and bought ten cents' worth of meat ter make hamburg steak out uv."



AGONIZING ITCHING.

Eczema for a Year—Got No Relief Even at Skin Hospital—In Despair Until Cuticura Cured Him.

"I was troubled with a severe itching and dry, scruffy skin on my ankles, feet, arms and scalp. Scratching made it worse. Thousands of small red pimples formed and these caused intense itching. I was advised to go to the hospital for diseases of the skin. I did so, the chief surgeon saying: "I never saw such a bad case of eczema." But I got little or no relief. Then I tried many so-called remedies, but I became so bad that I almost gave up in despair. After suffering agonies for twelve months, I was relieved of the almost unbearable itching after two or three applications of Cuticura Ointment. I continued its use, combined with Cuticura Soap and Pills, and I was completely cured. Henry Searle, Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 8 and 10, 1907."

ASK FATHER.

Clergyman—What would your father say if he saw you digging for worms on Sunday?

Willie—I don't know; but I know what he'd say if I did not dig for them. That's him fishing over there."

Interrupted the Wedding.

The other day, at the Shawnee county Court House, Probate Judge Schoch was about to marry a young couple. He pronounced the preliminary words and told them to join hands, and started on the ceremony.

"Hey, there! Hold up a minute! Wait, I say!" This series of startling exclamations came from the door.

The groom was horrified—the bride badly scared.

"Just a minute. I want to give you each an apple before you are married." said the man who had made the noise. And in he calmly walked and handed each of them a Grimes Golden.

It was one man's idea of a joke.—Kansas City Journal.

PRESSED HARD

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in one of the southern states says:

"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavour of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family were so well pleased with it, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Special Session of Breathitt County Grand Jury Impansled for Investigation of Shooting of ex-Sheriff Callahan.

Jackson, Ky.—A special session of the Breathitt county grand jury for the investigation of the ambushing and shooting of ex-Sheriff Ed Callahan, was impaneled by Circuit Judge J. H. Adams, whose address to the jury was principally an abuse of the daily press or their representatives for meddling in such matters, and a defense of himself and the local republican organization in their alleged connection with the defense of Smith and Johnson. The court asked the jury to make a complete investigation of the shooting of Callahan, which "might prove to have been an assassination." Blackstone Cardwell, a leader of the "Hogback" organization, which brought about the political downfall of the late Judge James Hargis in the last county election, was appointed foreman.

AUDITOR JAMES SAYS

There Will Not Be a Deficit of $2,000,000, or $2,500,000 When General Assembly Meets.

Frankfort, Ky.—Auditor Frank P. James issued a statement saying that there will not be a deficit in the state treasury of $2,000,000 or $2,500,000 when the next general assembly meets. In this estimate, however, he and Gov. Willson disagree, for in a communication from Gov. Willson to Auditor James about May 1 Gov. Willson asked the latter to give the condition of the state's finances, and said from reports he had received from inspectors he estimated the deficit would be about $2,500,000. The statement of Auditor James will bring fire from the democrats who preceded him, as he claims there were left in round numbers debts amounting to $1,180,000 when he came into office, while the democrats claim that the money left in the treasury free of debt was largely in excess of the amount which Auditor James says the state owed.

TOO SPLENDID FOR A HOME

English Criticism of the Furnishings of Houses of the American Millionaires.

Our bedrooms are marvels. Mine is immense, with two suites of impossible rococo Louis XV. furniture in it; the richest curtains with heaps of arranged draperies and fringe, grand writing table things, a few embroidered cushions; but no new books, no comfy sofas, or look of cozy anywhere. The bathrooms to each room are superb; miles beyond one's ideas of them in general at home. Tom says he can't sleep because the embroidered monograms on the pillows and things scratch his cheek, and the lace frills tickle his nose, while he catches his toes in the Venetian insertion in the sheets. The linen itself is the finest you ever saw, mamma, and would be too exquisite plain. Now one knows where all those marvelously over-worked things in the Paris shops go to, and all the wonderful gold incrusted Car'sbad glass. You meet it here in every house.

There is no room in it where there is any look of what we call "home," and not one shabby thing. Mrs. Spleist has a "boudoir"—and it is a boudoir! It is as if you went into the best shop and said, "I want a boudoir;" just as you would, "I want a hat," and paid for it and brought it home with you. Natalie has a sitting room, and it is just the same. They are not quite far enough up yet on the social ladder to have every corner of the establishment done by Duveen, and the result is truly appalling.—From Elinor Glyn's "Elizabeth Visits America."

Governor General of Australia Employed as Cupid's Emissary Between Sweethearts.

Apropos of Lord Northcote's name being mentioned as a probable successor to Earl Grey in Canada, his lordship was once made curious use of while governor general of Australia, says London M. A. P. Strolling one night through an avenue of somber trees to a friend's house to dinner, he was suddenly pounced upon by a maidservant, who kissed him effusively and pressed a little parcel into his hand. "Here's a sausage for you. I can't come out to-night, as master has company," she whispered, and as mysteriously disappeared. When he got to the house, he found one of his servants loitering by the gate. "What are you doing there?" asked Lord Northcote. "I'm waiting for my sweetheart," the man stammered. "Where is she" "In service here." "Ah, then I am right. Here is a sausage from your sweetheart, and she wishes me to tell you that she cannot come out to-night, as her master has company." Seeing that the man looked nervous, he added, kindly: "She also gave me a kiss for you; but perhaps you would rather wait until you see her. Here is five shillings instead."

Which One Owns This Tree?

For sixty years and more a tree has stood on the dividing line between two properties in Germantown, Pa. It is a big tree now, and the base of the trunk extends 22 inches on land owned by R. G. Beale and 14 inches on the property of Charles Spoerl. The latter, making improvements, arranged to have the tree cut down, but Mr. Beale has obtained a preliminary injunction, and the case will be threshed out in court.—Hartford Courant.

The vote on the income tax amendment to the tariff bill is scheduled for next Friday and will be the feature of the week in Congress.

Senator W. O. Bradley says he is hopeful of getting an amendment agreed to in the committee on the tobacco tax that will give some relief to the grower. Nothing of that kind will happen unless Senator Aldrich be caught napping.

It is said to be the feeling of all factions in the Senate that the tariff bill is approaching the last days of its consideration in Congress. Even Senator Aldrich is hopeful that the end is near, but many other republicans are not so optimistic.

The dead lock in Walton town council on the street improvement question has been broken, and the town assessor is proceeding with his assessment of the town property for town taxation, but not for street improvement, that item having been dropped from the budget.

The Democratic primary election to nominate candidates for county offices to be voted for at next November election will be held in Gallatin county on the 26th inst., and the voters are getting warmed up. For the several nominations there are twenty-six candidates, a considerable array for so small a county.

The Democrats and Republicans of Owensboro have united in a movement for clean primaries, and have about reached the decision that a joint primary is the best solution of the corruption problem. If the plan goes through the expense will be divided, and there will be two sets of officers and two ballot boxes at every poll By this means floaters cannot vote in both primaries and dealing in registration certificates will be stopped.

The farmers are in luck again. Experiments made by scientists in the U. S. Agricultural Department show that an excellent quality of paper can be made from corn stalks, better than that from wood of any sort, and there is every reason to believe that the business of papermaking will within a few years be revolutionized. This discovery will add considerably to the value of the corn crop, as the uses for paper are constantly increasing and the material for making it is rapidly growing scarce.

The Werner Printing Company of Akron, O., has just closed a $14,000,000 printing contract, the details of which are not yet announced, which will be one of the largest publishing ventures ever undertaken. To fill the order 20,000,000 pounds of paper will be used; 5,000,000 cattle must be slaughtered to furnish leather for the binding; 20,000,000 leaves of pure gold will be used in embellishments; 100,000 pounds of ink will be used in printing, and if only one press was used it would take 51 years to complete the work.

The General Association of Kentucky Baptists, composed of seventy-eight district associations, 1,746 churches and 213,498 members, with $655 860.20 contributions, will meet in its seventy-second annual session at Ashland, Ky. June 22, and will be called to order by the Rev. Dr. W. D. Nowlin, moderator. The annual sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Calvin M. Thompson, editor of the Western Recorder. The Rev. Dr. W. D. Powell, State secretary of missions, will read the most successful report ever made to the Kentucky Baptists.

SALARY FIXED.

Lebus Gets $12,000 A Year Out of the Buyers' Fees.

He Will Continue In Office.

Louisville, June 9.—Authoritive information comes from Winchester tonight that at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Society this afternoon Clarence LeBus, of Cythiana, the President of the organization was voted a salary of $12,000 a year for the past two years, 1907 and 1908, and a salary of $15,000 from now until October 1. In all this will give President LeBus a salary of $39,000 for a three years's term. Some time ago Mr. LeBus' salary was fixed at $5,000 a year and the friends of the burley chief made no secret of the fact that he would not hold the office at that figure. In fact he did tender his resignation to take effect just as soon as the business of 1906 and 1907 pools were closed up. As a result the bottom appeared to drop out of the movement to pool this year's crop. Mr. LeBus' position was that his business interests were so extensive that he could not afford to sacrifice them for $5,000 a year. Now it is known that the board has given the handsome compensation and that he is to remain.

The salary of the President will not be paid out of money received by the pooled tobacco, however. It is stated that the $39,000 will be taken from what is known as the "buyers' fees," levied by the Burley Society on all buyers who take tobacco from the pool. According to the rule of the society every buyer of pooled tobacco must pay the Burley Society $3 a hogshead, exclusive of the price of the tobacco. This is known as the "buyers' fee" and is collected by the society to defray the expenses of the organization.

Mr. LeBus' acceptance of the proposition to-day makes it certain that the 1909 crop of Kentucky burley will be pooled, and it is said that President LeBus is expected to begin at once securing the pledges of growers to pool the tobacco. The 1909 crop is expected to be the largest ever grown in Kentucky. Mr. LeBus has been President of the burley growers since 1906 and is the man who forced the sale of 100,000,000 pounds of the 1906 and 1907 pooled tobacco to the American Tobacco Company for a price that approximated $14,000,000.

To play the game at Big Bone, last Saturday, the Burlington team traveled 40 miles.

That Hebron aggregation is growing stronger, and they will give somebody trouble.

Souther at second, Clore at short and Conner at third did numerous sensational performances in the game at Big Bone.

Shinkle pitched nice ball for Hebron last Saturday. Bad support given him in the first inning kept the game from going over time.

The Belleview team pulled off several very rapid ball stunts at Hebron last Saturday. The fact is Belleview is very much in the race for the local penant.

Four good clubs playing in the county every Saturday afternoon ought to furnish the Boone county fans considerable entertainment for the next few months.

Manager Black made the Burlington boys hustle before they could annex the victory, last Saturday, his team putting up a good article of penant winning ball for them to overcome.

Pink Smith's long run and scoop of a fly to right field and which he turned into a double play, and Shinkle's capture of a red hot liner from the bat were the sensations in the game at Hebron.

The Burlington boys were pleased with Westbay's performance in the box last Saturday. He fielded his position well and his pitching improved as the game progressed. Every one in the line-up did fine work, not an error being made. They had to play that way to beat out the Big Bone team.

NOTICE OF GRADED

Common School Election.

Boone County Court.
Regular term 3rd day of May, 1909.
Hon. P. E. Cason, Co. Judge Presiding.

In re Petition
for } Order.
Florence Graded Common School.

At the last regular term of this court a petition having been filed, signed by Ben Stephens and more than ten (10) others, to-wit: Fifty-two (52) others asking that a Graded Common School District be organized with the following boundary, viz: Beginning at Ben Stephen's, including him; thence straight to the Kenton county line; thence with said line to Thos. Dorsey, including him; thence to Martin Michael's, including him; thence to Charles Krouse's, including him; thence to Joe Graves', including him; thence to John Miller's, including him; thence straight to the Jack Marquis residence, including the same; thence to G. A. Snyder's on the Burlington and Florence pike, including him; thence to John Craven's, including him; thence to the Hopeful church; thence to the Goe. Utz place leaving him out; thence to the Henry Ingram place, including him; thence on a time to the Henry Rouse place to Gunpowder creek; thence up said creek to B. F. Norman's leaving him out; thence to Noah Surface's leaving him out; thence to the Banning farm, including the same; thence straight to the G. N. Buffington farm leaving him out; thence to the beginning. The foregoing boundary embraces Common School District number (8) eight and part of number (9) nine.

It further appearing that the site for the school house of said proposed district is in the town of Florence and is the present site of district number 8 which site is certified to be not exceeding two and one-half miles from any part of the boundary of the said proposed district, and it appearing also that said petitioners are tax-payers, legal voters and residents of the proposed Graded Common School District and of Justice District No. 6 of this county, and, it further appearing that the County Superintendent has endorsed on said petition his approval of same and that a majority of the Trustees of the Common School Districts that will be embraced either in whole or in part in said proposed Graded Common School District, have endorsed their approval on said petitions provided by law, and the court being sufficiently advised, it is ordered by the court that M. F. Wingate, Sheriff of this county, be and he is hereby directed to cause a poll to be opened and an election to be held at the town of Florence on the 21st day of June, 1909, the same being more than forty (40) days after the entry of this order, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legal white voters residing within the boundary of the said Graded Common School District whether there shall be levied and collected an annual tax of twenty-five (25) cents on each one hundred dollars of property value therein subject to state or county taxation owned by white persons and corporations, and poll tax on each white male citizen therein over 21 years old, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a Graded Common School therein as provided by law.

The officers of said election will also cause the legal voters of said proposed Graded Common School District to vote for five persons to be trustees of same in case said tax shall be approved. The officers of said election will make returns in due form of the results of same at the earliest day practicable.

The clerk of this court will certify a copy of this order to the Sheriff of this county inside of ten (10) days form this date.

State of Kentucky, } Set
County of Boone. }

I, B. W. Adams, Clerk of the County aforesaid, do certify that the above is a true and correct copy of an order entered in the Boone County Court at its regular term April 5th, 1909, as appears of record in my office.

Given under my hand this 12th day of May, 1909. B. W. ADAMS, Clerk.

Sheriff's Notice.

Ben Stephens and others on petition to establish a Graded Common School District in the common school district No. 8 and in the Justice District No. 6, Boone county, Ky.:—Notice is hereby given, that in obedience to the above order of the County Court of Boone County, Ky., an election will be held at the public school house located in the town of Florence, Boone county, Ky., on Monday, June 21st, 1909, from 6 o'clock A. M., until 4 o'clock P. M., for the purpose set out in said order. Witness my hand, this May 21st, 1909.

THE KALAMAZOO SILO.

The great modern method of storing and preserving green food throughout the year and especially during the winter reason when green food is the most valuable and utilized to the greatest profit.

INVALUABLE to the FARM.

Saving more to live stock owners than any agency that can be employed on the farm Those who have the Silo in use would not part with it for many times its cost.

Supplies Nutritious Green Food Throughout the Wintry Months

at a nominal cost, utilizing what would otherwise go to waste.

Saves Fifty Per Cent of the Feed.

A modern method of preserving the green food with all its nutrients and providing its being fed without waste.

The Silo built by the Kalamazoo Co. is the best in use and is composed of seven kinds of wood. It is a large wooden tank that is designed to be filled with the green food in season, and being closed and air tight the food is preserved in its green state, moist and sweet. The Silo is so arranged that the feed can be taken from it without imparing the quality of the balance. The cost of the Silo is small considering its saving, and it has the earning capacity of any improvement on the farm. 40 per cent of the nutrients of the corn plant is in the stalks, leaves and husks, and where siloed, stock consume all of it in preference to any other feed.

Estimates and full description furnished on application. Write us and we will call and see you, explaining the process—It will cost you nothing.

The indication for plenty of blackberries is good.

G. T. Gaines has been very much indisposed for several days.

So far this spring every time the moon has changed it has rained some more.

A big Sunday school convention will be held at the Gunpowder Baptist church next Sunday.

One of the most interesting sessions of the Grant county circuit court for many years is in progress at Williamstown.

The oldest citizen does not remember of ever having seen the tobacco crop pitched at as early a date as it was this year.

Your attention is called to the advertisement of C. M. Baldon's store in this issue. He is carrying a large stock of well assorted groceries, &c.

A large swarm of bees settled in one of the maple trees in front of Dudley Rouse's residence last Saturday, where they remained several hours.

Nothing would please the farmers better than ten days' without rain. They need that kind of weather to get their corn and tobacco cleaned out before the hay and grain harvest arrive.

Small Crop of Cherries.

The cherry crop in this part of the country does not amount to much, in fact there are not as many trees as there use to be.

Mowing Scythes Busy.

Mowing scythes have been very much in evidence this month owing to the frequent showers of rain and the rapid growth of weeds.

Cheat Crop Fine.

There is an abundant crop of cheat this year. Like the rag weed cheat will be abundant for years and then disappear several years.

Yum, Yum!

Fried chickens are among the delicacies of the season, but the supply is not very large and they come high for those who have to buy.

Sawing Logs.

W. C. Johnson is cutting lumber fast at Idlewild, and the large supply of logs that awaited his coming is fading away. Mr. Johnson is an experienced saw mill man.

Meadows are Good.

Meadows bid fair to make a fine yield of grass. Last year's crop of hay was almost distressingly short until it was cut, when it was found to be more plentiful owing to the fact that everything that would make food, although indifferent, was harvested.

The Tuber Crop a Failure.

There was never a finer growth of potato vines than that of the present season, but it is generally believed that the local crop is a failure. Some potatoes have never been plowed, and while the bloom has appeared, an examination has failed to reveal any young potatoes.

Struck by Lightning.

Lightning struck a shade tree in the front yard of T. G. Willis', near Bullittsburg church, one afternoon last week. Jesse Kirkpatrick was sitting on the porch about 20 feet from the tree, and balls of fire flew about him thick, while he sniffed odors that are supposed to be about the same as those that regail the inhabitants of the infernal regions.

No Boarders at Hotel Adams.

Once more hotel Adams, at which guests are entertained at the expense of the county, is without a boarder, but the popular landlord does not seem to be worried about the slump in his business, and wears a cheerful smile, and keeps his apartments in order to accommodate guests who are liable to register at any time.

White Capping in Indiana.

"White capping," like a good many other diseases, seems to be "catching," and has spread to Ohio county. A man charged with stealing chickens and eggs in the country, was recently taken out at night, severely beaten, and ordered to leave the county. It is said that the "regulated" man returned to Kentucky, where he came from.—Rising Sun Recorder.

It would be well if every boy in the entire country who is given to smoking cigarettes could cut this out, paste it in his hat and read it every morning before breakfast.

"Out of 2,500 boys recently examined in the schools of Kansas, only six cigarette smokers were found to be what would generally be called "bright." Ten of the remainder were average students, while all the rest of the 2,500 were found to be poor at their studies, or worthless."

A Change in Farming.

A few years ago the farmers in Boone county never thought of hauling a load of hay or corn from the city for their use, but in that matter there has been a great change and hundreds of loads of food for stock are hauled annually from the Cincinnati and Covington markets, and many of the country merchants handling hay, corn, bran, &c., in large quantities. This is the result of a change in farming in so far as corn is concerned, the farmers having greatly reduced the acreage while the yield per acre has been curtailed very much by a decline in the fertility of the soil. The yield of a small acreage of wheat has not been satisfactory for many years, while the hay crop is often a failure. The profit yielding crops of twenty five or thirty years ago can no longer be depended on by the farmers.

THAT TRACTION ROAD.

Florence People Greatly Encouraged and are Signing up Liberally.

The citizens of Florence and vicinity are sanguine that Mr. Blackburn, the traction road promoter, is going to deliver the goods, and that in the early future, and they are subscribing liberally to the bonus with the understanding that the money is not to be paid until the road is built and the cars are running thereon to Florence. In order to secure the road, which should make Florence the best town in the county, the property owners who will reap the benefits by way of a ten fold increase in the value of their real estate, are putting their shoulders to the wheel in a most commendable way, and are complying with the demands of Mr. Blackburn that will put the construction of the road up to him and his people.

Harrow Your Wheat.

Geo. Blythe is thoroughly satisfied that it will pay any farmer big to run a harrow over his fields of wheat in the spring. Last fall he sowed a field to wheat and this spring, when the wheat should have been making a good show, the field was as bare as the big road. Desiring to put the field to grass Mr. Blythe ran a harrow over it and sowed the grass seed, and now he has a good field of wheat and a fine stand of grass. He says that immediately after the field was harrowed the wheat began to grow and came on nicely and he is firmly of the opinion that had he not used the harrow his wheat would not have been worth harvesting. He will try the same process on his wheat again next spring.

He Felt Like a Stranger.

A gentleman who was born and raised in this part of the county, but who has been away for some time came to town a few days ago, feeling like a stranger in a strange land. He had been reading the names on the rural mail boxes along the route he traveled and very seldom did he see the name of a person he knew, whereas, fifteen years ago he would have known all of them. He says if W. E. Vest is permitted to continue in the real estate business in a few years he will cause an entire change in the population of the county.

May Buy an Auto.

William Hughes, carrier on rural mail route No. 1, was in the city, one day last week, looking over automobiles with a view to purchasing one in which to carry the mail. He has a route on which he could operate an auto every day in the year, and he figures that a machine would be less expensive than two horses and a buggy. There is a machine built expressly for rural mail carriers that is used successfully, and the original cost is not very great.

The Ground Soon Drys Out.

The ground has been thoroughly saturated with water in the last few months, and it looks like the earth ought to be sufficiently charged with moisture to carry vegetation over a long period of excessively dry weather, but growing vegetation absorbs moisture very rapidly and a few weeks' warm, dry weather would put the crops in jeopardy.

About off of the Map.

The long lake on Gunpowder known to all the disciples of Isaac Walton for miles around as the "Lonesome Hole," has been just about wiped off the map by the large volumes of head water that have passed down the creek since last fall. Stones and mud have destroyed the once favorite haunt of the finny tribe to the sorrow of the anglers.

Millions of Tobacco Plants left over.

The supply of tobacco plants is millions in excess of the demand. All the first setting has been replanted and a good stand is assured. Hail only is now to be lived in dread of by the growers.

HON. J. A. GAINES

Passes Away After a Short Illness, In His Eighty-Seventh Year.

Hon. Joseph A. Gaines died at his home four miles out on the Petersburg pike, last Wednesday morning, aged 86 years, 9 months and three days. Mr. Gaines was a native of this county and a man whose morals and integrity were of as high a standard as it is possible to attain in this world. In the matter of general and useful information the county never had a citizen who surpassed him, and his modesty and retiring disposition kept his ability and worth in the background to such an extent that the people of the county never came to realize his real worth. He was a great reader and a profound thinker, and possessed a large fund of general information of which he never permitted himself to make a display. Only on one occasion did his friends ever succeed in inducing him to become a candidate for office, and then they nominated and elected him a member of the general assembly. He found politics not congenial, he being a man of a loftier character than the general run of men with whom he would be in contact should he enter that profession, and never again could he be induced to become a candidate for any office. His every day life drew about him a large circle of friends who admired him in life and now deplore his loss. The funeral was preached at Bullittsburg church at 10:30 a. m, last Friday, by Rev. Crosley, Universalist, of Indianapolis. The RECORDER expects to have a biography of Mr. Gaines for its next issue.

O. W. Gaines' Death Unexpected.

O. W. Gaines, son of the late J. A. Gaines, died of heart failure at his home near Bullittsville, last Sunday morning. He had been complaining for several days but never gave up until Friday night, and his death on Sunday morning was unexpected and a great shock to his friends. O. W. Gaines was born March 17, 1853, and was married to Mary Gaines, daughter of Owen and Paulina Gaines, May 16, 1878. To them were born three children, two sons and one daughter, the oldest a son, having died March 17, 1906. The funeral took place yesterday at Bullittsburg Baptist church at 1:30 p. m.; Rev. Brooks, the pastor, conducting the services. In the death of O. W. Gaines the county has lost a most worthy citizen, and his family a loving husband and a devoted father. A large concurse of sorrowing friends attended the funeral.

Monthly Crop Report.

The monthly crop report of M. C. Rankin, Commissioner of Agriculture, for the month of May is just out and is as follows:

There has been a very large amount of rainfall during the month of May, hindering the farmers greatly in their work.

The condition of wheat has shown a considerable tendency toward improvement over last month and with weather favorable will make a fair yield.

Corn planting has about all been finished, except in several sections where the rainfall has been very great. A larger acreage will be planted and more attention to this crop will be given than in many years.

Much rain has been favorable to those that had their ground prepared for tobacco setting. Many say that much ground is not ready and on account of so much rain there is a large per cent, not planted. There is also some complaint about plants being scarce. Oats are looking well and promise to be a larger crop than for the past few years.

Alfalfa is doing well and making a splendid yield, but the weather is not good for cutting the first crop. There is not enough sunshine to cure it as it should be. The price of alfalfa ranges from $12.50 to $16 per ton, and with such conditions as these we think the people plant more each year, for there is no doubt that it has more feeding qualities than any other hay grown.

Clover is looking well and will make a fine crop with favorable weather.

The prospects for a good fruit crop are not as good as they were last month.

Horses are very high; prices ranging from $125 to $150 and hard to buy at that.

Mules are not as many in number as they were at this time last year and are very high. Prices ranging from $150 to $200.

Cattle are not so high, prices ranging from three to four and one-half cents per pound.

Sheep are doing very well; prices from four and one-half to six cents per pound.

Hogs are high, prices ranging from 6 to 8 cents per pound. There is very little or no complaint of any disease among them.

There are good prospects for a good berry crop. There is a full crop of blackberry blooms and others in proportion.

Hemp is looking well. Prices good, ranging from five to six and one-half cents per pound.

SAWED OUT OF PRISON.

"Toronto Jimmy," Noted Bank Robber, Saws Out of Jail at Williamstown.

AN INVESTIGATION THREATENED.

"Toronto Jimmie," one of the most noted bank robbers in this country escaped from the jail at Williamstown, last Friday night, where he was being held for trial in the Grant county circuit court this week on the charge of robbing the bank at Crittenden a few years ago. He was tried at the last term of the Grant circuit court for robbing the bank at Corinth. Of that he was acquitted and was sent to the jail in Covington for safe keeping. He was taken back to Williamstown last week, when the trial was continued until this week, but last Friday night he and a negro charged with shooting with intent to kill took French leave. The negro was captured again last Saturday near Erlanger and was returned to Williamstown. Some one furnished "Toronto Jimmie" with saws with which he literally cut the jail to pieces and left for parts unknown. He is wanted at numerous places in the country where it is charged that he has pulled off jobs. The jail delivery has stirred up the Grant county people considerably, and rumors of an investigation are rife.

The following is taken from Monday's Cincinnati Enquirer, which is always more or less sensational:

"Comment regarding the manner in which Matthew Willard, alias 'Toronto Jimmy,' the safe blower, escaped from the authorities at Williamstown, Ky., indicates that some action will be taken looking toward an investigation.

"The Cincinnati police were informed yesterday of an affidavit signed by the negro who escaped with Willard and was recaptured the same day A copy of this affidavit, it is claimed, was in the hands of the local police yesterday and the original will be presented in court to-day.

"The negro claims to have been locked in the same cell Friday evening with Willard. When it was too dark to distinguish features a person entered the jail proper and walked directly in front of the cell occupied by the white and black prisoners.

"Willard, he claims, seemed to have expected such a visitor for he met him at the bars and thrust his fingers through the opening. The negro claims it was too dark to see and therefore cannot give a description of Willard's visitor. The latter seemed to be familiar with the interior of the jail.

"As soon as the doors closed upon this caller Willard started to work sawing the bars at a window. In a short time he was free.

"Two well-known and formerly trusted men are alleged to have been implicated in aiding the escape. One of these is said to have already been openly accused by a person high in authority at Williamstown. The investigations disclosed the fact that a Williamstown man recently made a trip to Chicago accompanied by another citizen and it is claimed arrangements were made with friends of Willard for the latter's escape. Just how much money was given, to be divided between persons in a position to aid Willard's departure from the jail, remains a secret.

"There is said to be on file among the county papers a letter from a bonding company which has notified the courts that it will not spend any more money in that part of Kentucky for prosecuting its cases.

"Judge Cammack will conduct the investigation that will be started to-day."

AN UNUSUAL OCCURRENCE

Son Attends Father's Funeral and Both Buried the Same Day.

Last Friday the body of Hon. J. A. Gaines was conveyed to Bullittsburg Baptist church where the funeral services were conducted, after which the remains were placed in the vault to await final interment a few days later in the cemetery near by. Among the family mourners was the son, O. W. Gaines, who, though complaining, no one suspected of being upon the threshhold of the grave, and that the same procession of sorrowing friends and relatives would be called together before a week intervened to pay to him the last sad tribute they were then rendering his father; but such was the case, and the funeral conc urse of the father was nearly exactly repeated yesterday when the bodies of the father and the son were consigned to their last resting places in Bullittsburg cemetery.

WHICH?

Which way do you skim your milk? It is hard sometimes to realize just how great the loss of cream is with crocks and pans. Some people may not believe that a

U. S.
CREAM SEPARATOR

skims enough closer than the old way to increase their butter yield one-fourth or more. But it does, and there's a plain reason for it. When you set milk the cream and skim milk are separated from one another by the force of gravity, but when you skim milk with a U. S. Separator centrifugal force, which is thousands of times stronger than gravity, does the separating. It squeezes out the last drop of cream. Cream is money—you can't afford to waste it. If you keep three or more cows, it will pay you to buy a U. S. Separator. Come in and look one over, anyway. They are sold by

The Mersman Hwd. Co., Covington, Ky.

The body of Ernest, the 9 year-old son of C. E. McMurray, who lives in Indiana, a short distance below Rising Sun, who was drowned while in bathing, was found four days later below Madison.

Esq Solon Early is said to be very low at the home of his nephew, Leslie Walton, in South Bend, Indiana. He has been in poor health for some time, and he went to South Bend, where he was hopeful of being successfully treated.

The strawberry and ice cream festival given by the literary club, last Saturday night, was a decided success. It was not attended by many other than the citizens of Burlington, but they gave it a liberal patronage and quite a neat little sum was realized for the benefit of the club. The ice cream was splendid, the cakes fine and the berries delicious. Howard Kirkpatrick added considerably to the entertainment with a splendid graphophone. He had a large number of records and it was not necessary to repeat any of them during the evening.

Elephant Ivory and How It Is Obtained

By Capt. Fritz Duquesne

Capt. Fritz Duquesne was born of Boer parents in South Africa, educated in Europe (where he won considerable distinction as a swordsman), and has been a professional hunter of big game most of his life. At the age of 17 he was a veteran of the Kaffir wars. He served in the Boer war and also in the Congo. In the recent events of South Africa's kaleidoscopic history Capt. Duquesne took a conspicuous part. He acted in many capacities during the hostilities between the Boer and the British, being in turn spy, military detective, engineer, censor, dispatch-carrier and propagandist. He was wounded twice in the fighting around Colenso. When the British succeeded in cutting cable communication between the Boer republic and the rest of the world, Duquesne carried the news of the Boer victories over the Mozambique border, and from there he wrote dispatches to the Petit Bleu, the official European organ of the Boer government. He was once captured by the Portuguese and thrown into prison at Lorenzo Marquis. Later he was taken as a prisoner to Europe at the request of the British government. When the ship that conveyed him and his guard touched at Naples he was suffering from a fever and in consequence was placed in an Italian hospital. On his recovery he was allowed to go free. He went to Brussels and was sent back to the front by Dr. Leyds, with plans for the seizure of Cape Town by the Boer commanders then mobilized in Cape Colony. Everything was ready for the taking of the city when, a traitor having revealed the plot, Duquesne and a number of others were captured in Cape Town inside the British defenses. This was the climax of what has come to be known as the "Cape Town Plot." Some of the prisoners were sentenced to death who later had their sentence changed to life imprisonment. Capt. Duquesne was among the latter. Ten months later he escaped from the Bermuda prisons, got aboard the American yacht Margaret of New York while she was coaling at the dock, and was conveyed to Baltimore. Back to Europe he went again, as war correspondent and military writer on the Petit Bleu; thence to Africa, where he took a commission on the Congo. In East Africa he hunted big game for sport and profit, and finally he came to New York to do newspaper and magazine work.

THE experience President Roosevelt has gained hunting game on the North American continent will be of little use to him on his expedition into the wilds of East Africa. Hunting in America is a sport, something to be played at; hunting in Africa is a trade, almost a profession. In America one merely takes a rifle and goes out to shoot. In Africa, to hunt a la mode, one takes a battery of arms, usually three and sometimes four, high power rifles of different caliber, ranging from a six and five-tenths millimeter to a 600 cordite express. The cartridges for these rifles are charged with various bullets, solid nickel, steel, soft nose long, soft nose short and split.

Each of these bullets was designed by experts for a special use, and on the way they are used depends the success of one's shot. Often the use of the unsuitable bullet ends in the hunter's death. On small game the light caliber arm, six five-tenths millimeter, is used, and on large and dangerous game the nine millimeter Mauser and 600 caliber cordite express give the best results. The last-named rifle strikes the enormous blow of 8,700 pounds, and has a recoil of close on a hundred weight. Four [illegible] whose hunting experiences has been bring him down. The hunter must put the shot into the animal's head or heart, or he must face a charge that will probably end in his destruction.

Rifles of various caliber are carried for economy. It is cheaper to use a small six five-tenths millimeter rifle on small game, a nine millimeter on medium game, and a 600 express on big game, than to carry one weapon for all-round work, which would have to be big enough at least for the largest game. Nothing smaller than a 450 express would do for that, and it would be distinctly uneconomical, not to say foolish, to shoot a small antelope, the size of a goat, with a 600 express. It would be like using a pile driver to kill a mosquito. Again, cartridges become very costly by the time they reach the interior of Africa. A cartridge for a 600 express rifle, for instance, costing sixpence (12 cents) in London, reaches an enormous price by the time it gets into the hunting grounds of Africa. I have seen them bring five shillings ($1.25) each, and very scarce at that. Nor is this such an extravagant price when one takes into consideration that every ounce has to be carried by porters who plod for months through swamps, across rivers, over mountains, traversing the parched veld and penetrating the dismal forest, often fighting their way foot by foot before they reach their destination. It is easy to see that weight is an important factor in cartridge economics. Four six five-tenths millimeter cartridges are equal in weight to one 600 express. That is, it is four deaths against one, for the same weight.

These are the things President Roosevelt must learn before he can consider himself up on the ways of safari.* If the president hunts like an Africander and not like the average European that visits the dark continent, he will certainly find danger; danger that tries a hunter's confined to bird shooting with shotguns, or small game, with, say, a 32-caliber rifle, may understand the meaning of these figures, let me state that the ordinary 32-caliber rifle has a recoil of perhaps ten to twelve pounds. The double-barreled shotgun, which to the ordinary hunter seems to have all the "kicking" capacity any weapon needs, has a recoil of from 25 to 30 pounds.

The 600 caliber cordite express is the most deadly hand arm made.

Notwithstanding the terrific force of this 600 express bullet it must be placed in the correct part of an elephant's or a rhinoceros' anatomy to nerve, that requires an alert intelligence and a quick eye to pass through it and live.

Mr. Cunninghame, who is organizing the Roosevelt expedition, is one of the most experienced and clever of African hunters. He will have complete charge of everything from the largest to the smallest detail. With him at the head of things the president can depend on having a successful hunt. That is, if he is going for sport and not merely as a scribe looking for local atmosphere for his book. Many great African hunters have killed all their game in the narrow and dark confines of an ink bottle.
